Description

During the Development Era (1835-1870) in White County a variety of vernacular houses were constructed. They were also built out of a variety of materials. Surviving examples from this period, however, are very limited. The S.A. Kimbrough House is a good example of a one-story, frame, T-shaped floor plan building. It has a composition shingle cross-gabled roof, is clad with weatherboard, and the entire structure rests on a brick pier foundation. The building was constructed c. 1870 and has had several historic and non-historic alterations. It is currently in fair condition.

Located on the east corner of Cedar and E. Illinois Streets, this building is located only two blocks from the bustling intersection of Main St. and the Missouri-Pacific Railroad tracks. The main, or west, elevation of the house is dominated a porch which stretches half-way across the facade and terminates at the protruding portion of the T. This shed roof porch is supported by turned posts and decorated with small Italianate roof brackets. This porch also has spindle work and a balustrade, both of which exhibit Eastlake details. Single doors with transoms enter both sections of the structure from the porch.

Fenestration consists of a single two-over-two double-hung wood sash window on the porch and a paired two-over-two double-hung wood sash window on the protruding portion of the building. This window has a simple pedimented lintel and above this, a metal bellcast awning. It rests on Gothic Revival brackets. Corner boards with simple capitals as well as wide cornice boards are also found on this elevation. Historic alterations abound on the south elevation of the house. The original section of the building ended where the chimney is currently located. This chimney has filled in an original porch and was done sometime after 1924. The additional room which extends from the chimney eastward was probably also done at this time. The shed roof porch which extends halfway across this elevation was another addition probably done at this time.

Even though this porch has details similar to the one on the north elevation there is one significant exception. The exposed roof rafters are a typical feature found on many Craftsman style houses and is indicative of when this porch was added. Fenestration along this entire elevation consists of six-over-six double-hung wood sash windows decorated with simple pedimented lintels. The gable end of the eastern addition is fenestrated with symmetrically placed six-over-six double-hung wood sash windows. This end also has wide cornice boards.

An ell-shaped porch which has since been enclosed extends from the east elevation of the original structure along the north elevation of the added room. Single doors enter both the north and east elevations of this enclosed porch. A single six-over-six double-hung sash window is located east of the entrance on the north elevation. This porch has also been 'added to' over the years. A small shed roof addition has been added to the east elevation of the porch; it is relieved by a single door on its east elevation. The enclosed porch has had a shed roof addition attached to its north elevation also. Screened windows are located on the north elevation of this addition and a single six-over-six double-hung sash window is located on its east elevation. A single two-over-two double-hung wood sash window is located east of center on the north elevation of the original building.

Significance

When this building was constructed, c.1870, it was one of numerous one-story, T-shaped houses built in White County during the Development Era. Several of these were located in Beebe. Even though this house has had several additions it is the only one which survives from this period of Beebe's history. These additions are not only sympathetic to the original design of the structure but they are also indicative of the building styles currently used at the time of their addition. This building is also significant because there are only seven frame T-shaped buildings which are relatively intact which survive from this period in the whole county. It is eligible under Criterion C with local significance.
