Describe the present and original (if known) physical appearance

Situated on the southwest corner of the intersection of South Union and Washington Streets in downtown Natchez, the Van Court Town House is a two-and-a-half story brick residence that was stuccoed and scored in the twentieth century. The gabled roof is pierced by three inside-end chimneys, two of which are located on both the front and rear slopes of the roof, and the front dormers are more elaborately trimmed with modillioned cornices. Attached to the eastern elevation is a one-story stuccoed addition with modillioned cornice.

The northerly three-bay facade is crowned by a full entablature with molded cornice and modillions. The windows, which are filled with twelve-over-twelve, twelve-over-eight, and six-over-six, double-hung sash, are closed by original shutter blinds. The entrance is located in the westernmost bay and is fronted by a one-story cast-iron porch of mid-19th century design. The influence of the Federal period survives in the elliptical fanlight of the doorway, which also consists of an eight-paneled door and pilasters enframing sidelights set over molded panels. The pilasters are adorned with an incised Greek design.

The floor plan of the interior is a side hall plan, two rooms deep. The dining room and parlor were originally separated by hinged doors, now missing, framed by pilasters with Ionic capitals on the parlor side supporting a full entablature. The windows, having flared jambs with molded panels, are set above molded panels; the doors, having jambs with molded panels, have eight, fielded and molded panels; and the bases have two fasciae and are molded. The door and window surrounds are symmetrically molded with corner blocks and are further decorated by a tablet with fielded panel in the center of the lintel. Black marble, pilastered mantel pieces are located in both downstairs rooms, which also feature plaster centerpieces of foliate and floral design. The hallway centerpiece is composed of concentric circles surrounding radiating acanthus leaves.

One of the most outstanding architectural features of the house is the wide staircase which is continuous to the third floor level. The balusters, a cluster of which form the newel, are plainly turned. The upstairs rooms are more simply trimmed with architrave surrounds and beaded bases. Metal mantel pieces of later 19th-century design have replaced the original mantels. The rear gallery has been sympathetically enclosed on both levels to accommodate modern kitchen, breakfast room, and bath facilities.

To the rear of the main house, located at the southwest corner of the lot, is a two-story brick outbuilding with gabled roof. This outbuilding may have existed prior to the construction of the main house and could possibly have constituted an early Natchez dwelling.

Statement of Significance (in one paragraph)

The Van Court Town House is one of the most architecturally significant of the downtown residences of Natchez. This significance derives from its high degree of finish and the transitional nature of its design, which features elements of both the Federal and Greek Revival styles.

The Van Court Town House was constructed by James Ferguson probably shortly after he purchased the property for 3,000 dollars in 1834 (Adams Co. Deed Book V:193). The corner lot was originally part of the estate of his father-in-law, Spaniard Joseph Quegles, a prominent early Natchez merchant and planter (Probate Box 57). The high selling price of the lot supports the theory that the two-story brick outbuilding existed prior to the construction of the main house. After the deaths of his wife and three children between January 1836 and May 1837, James Ferguson sold his property in 1838 for 12,000 dollars to Dr. Andrew Macrery (Deed Book Z:421). A newspaper advertisement for the sale of Macrery's property in 1849 refers to the house and lot "purchased by said decedent from James Ferguson (Mississippi Free Trader, Nov. 7, 1849, p. 2)." The stylistic evidence, the 9,000 dollar price increase, and the 1849 newspaper advertisement prove conclusively that the Van Court Town House was constructed by James Ferguson between 1834 and 1838. The Federal fanlight, the twelve-over-twelve window sash, and the staircase indicate that the house was built closer to 1834 at the beginning of the Greek Revival period in Natchez.

Dr. Andrew Macrery, who purchased the property in 1838, was a prominent Natchez physician who also owned Roseland Plantation on Liberty Road (Probate Box 115). The Macrery family owned the property until 1870, when Macrery's daughter Eliza and her husband Audley C. Britton sold the house to Adeline H. Baker (Deed Book QQ:268). The Brittons purchased Mrs. Baker's mansion, listed on the National Register as the Henderson-Britton House (Deed Book QQ: In 1882, Dr. Elias J. Van Court inherited the house from his halfsister, Adeline Baker (Will Book 4:220). Dr. Van Court also owned Courtland Plantation (Catherine Van Court, The Old House (Richmond: The Dietz Press. 1950), p. VII), and, during his ownership, the house acquired its historic name, the Van Court Town House. Dr. Van Court was the son of a Presbyterian minister, Rev. J. H. Van Court, who came to Natchez from New Jersey in 1823 and married into the pioneer Swayzie family of the Kingston community, or Jersey Settlement (Historical and Biographical Memoirs Memoirs of Mississippi The Goodspeed Publishing Co., 1891), Vol. II, 942).
