Describe the present and original (if known) physical appearance

The St. Paul Missionary Baptist Church is a modest one-story frame church, rectangular in plan, with bungalow elements. It has an outset gabled entry that was added to the building about thirty years ago. The roof has exposed rafters and diagonal eave brackets. The building has clapboard siding painted white. There is a low, enclosed shed attached to the rear of the church.

The wainscotted interior is also simple, but enhanced by double-hung stained glass windows and a gambrel ceiling. The windows have a Tudor arch design, their lower sections in relief. The nave has two aisles, a slightly raised central pulpit, and a choir loft. The pews are of oak.

Included on the property is an ineligible concrete block structure built in the 1950's that was once the parsonage; it is now used as an office for the local chapter of the NAACP.
