7. Narrative Description

The proposed Pearl Street Historic District is a residential neighborhood located along both sides of Pearl Street, between Old Depot Road and College Street. The Old Brandon Cemetery, which contains more than one thousand marked graves of which the earliest is dated 1837, is immediately west of the proposed district.

The district has a substantial covering of hardwood trees mixed with conifers, and the yards have mature shrubbery and specimen trees. The single story and story -and-a-half houses are situated near the fronts of their lots, with setbacks varying from approximately twenty to one hundred feet. Most of the lots are large, ranging from 150 to 400 feet wide and 150 to 350 feet deep.

This district consists of three houses built between ca. 1850 and 1920. All of the houses are of frame construction with weatherboard siding. The houses all have Greek Revival influences; one was built ca. 1850 and modified with Queen Anne elements around the turn of the century. Each of these residences has had minor facade changes over time, but none which seriously compromise their design integrity as individuals or as a group. The Pearl Street District is a good example of a middle class Southern neighborhood which evolved over a period of more than a hundred years.

CONTRIBUTING AND NONCONTRIBUTING PROPERTIES

1. C 200 Pearl Street A one story, five bay frame cottage with Greek Revival influence, built ca. 1920. Side gable roof covered with asphalt shingles, with end wall chimney and box cornice. Exterior wall surfaces covered with drop siding. Windows are 9/9 and 4/4 double hung sash, some in pairs. Full width undercut gallery supported by box piers. Entrance is double leaf door (obscured by screen) topped by a four-light transom.

2. NC 202 Pearl Street A one story, one bay frame utility building, built ca. 1940. Gable roof with asphalt shingles. Exterior wall surfaces are cement shingles. No windows. Entrance is a slab door.

3. C 203 Pearl Street A one story, five bay frame cottage with Greek Revival influence built ca. 1850. Side gable roof covered with asphalt shingles and with end wall chimneys and box cornice. Single gable front dormer contains 1/1 double hung sash. Exterior wall surfaces are covered with weatherboard siding. The area under the gallery roof has flush horizontal siding. Full width undercut gallery is supported by Doric columns. Entrance is a double leaf door topped by a multilight transom and flanked by multilight sidelights.

4. C 204 Pearl Street A one and one half story, 3 bay frame cottage with Greek Revival and Queen Anne influence, built ca. 1850 and altered ca. 1890-1900. Gable roofs, covered with asphalt shingles and with boxed cornice, closed front gable; side gable with cornice returns. An undercut bay window is beneath the front facing gable end. Exterior wall surfaces are covered with weatherboard siding. Windows are 2/2 double hung sash. Partial width undercut gallery is supported by chamfered posts. Entrance is a six panel door with three light transom.

7. Narrative Statement of Significance

The Pearl Street Historic District is nominated for the National Register under Criterion C for its architectural significance within the context of Brandon, Rankin County, Mississippi. The residences which comprise the district are good local interpretations of their respective styles and reflect the patterns of economic development of the town from the 1850 to ca. 1920.

Pearl Street was once part of the finest residential areas in Brandon, encompassing a much larger area than what remains intact today. The district is contemporary with the South College Street District; both areas are part of the original residential area of Brandon, which consisted of a several block area around the Town Square. The buildings which comprise this district are a cohesive residential group which still exhibit their major design characteristics and their association with the original residential area of "downtown Brandon" that existed before WWII.

Each of the houses in the district retains a high degree of architectural integrity. The variations of the Greek Revival style and the alteration of one Greek Revival cottage into a house with strong Queen Anne elements demonstrate the changing modes of residential planning and aesthetic preferences that occurred over the period from 1850 through the 1920s. This district reflects typical development and stylistic patterns found in many Mississippi towns and throughout the Southeast.

Verbal Boundary Description

See accompanying scale map.

Boundary Justification

The proposed Pearl Street Historic District is a distinct neighborhood in one of the oldest residential areas of Brandon. The Old Brandon Cemetery, with grave markers dating back to 1837, forms the western boundary. College Street, a major north-south route through town and Brandon's finest extant residential streets, forms the northern and eastern boundary. The southern boundary was drawn to include as many contributing elements as possible and to exclude nonhistoric or deteriorated housing and other structures which are not significant to the district.
