DESCOLOF THE OF

This brick house, circa 1800, stands precipitously at the corner of two well-traveled roads. Structural and decorative evidence suggests a late 18th century construction, although certain other details of Greek Revival character reveal a modest modernization of the 1830's.

Three bays wide, two and a half stories high, with a Flemish bond facade and American bond sides, this L-shaped house differs from the usual longitudinally expanded Mercer County farm house and relates more closely to the city row house type. We notice the absence of a watertable, the molded brick cornice, the beaded tapered bargeboards of the gable ends and the tall flush-with-the-wall chimneys. Three original shutters survive on the front facade, where a clumsy. recent pillared porch now stands. A weathered wood shingle roof, perhaps the original, covers the whole house.

In both the wide walls glazed headers alternate with unglazed ones in the American bond rows. At the right rear corner round headed arches, since filled in, document an open shed area included in the house building itself. A few hammered iron S and X beam braces dot the side walls. Many of the windows, with 9/6 sash in the first floor and 6/6 in the second, retain the original wood lintels, sills and pegged frames.

The minor facelifting of the 1830's however, involved the installation of board lintels with corner blocks and thick tubular moldings in front of the old window frames. This, and a new horizontally panelled door occurred on the front facade, the most prominent one. In addition, Greek Revival door and window frame molding appears inside only in the front hall and living room.

Inside, a fine Federal fireplace with reeded pilasters and applied ovular fan motifs graces the front living room, which along with a quarter turn staircase with center well, occupies the front section of the house. Behind this in the contemporary ell, were two small chambers, now united into one, one served by a fireplace, in the side wall with molding frame, the other by an interior, reeded Federal example. Farther back stands the kitchen, now enlarged by the closed shed, with a large cooking fireplace, now blocked up. Small cupboards are tucked behind or beside most of these fixtures. Light, eight panel cherry doors that swing at all the interior doorways, and a pole bannister of the same wood on simple balusters are features borrowed from nearby Lawrenceville house construction.

The upstairs floor plan repeats the first floor configuration, although an inspection could not be made.

The house retains its architectural integrity quite completely. It is in good but cluttered condition. It is distinguished primarily for its plan type, in essence a city row house, a rarity in this setting. Excellent craftsmanship and interesting details, such as the tapered barge boards inform us of the care and expense of its original construction, and the cosmetic Greek Revival details provide us with another example of modernization in the early 19th century. S П П Aaron Hart, Sr. (1768-1853) built this house circa 1800 on land he inherited from his father Joseph Hart, whose will was drawn up in 1779. Aaron Hart, Sr. willed the farm to his son Aaron, Jr. (1797-1886) on December 20, 1849, who was living there at that time. Dr. Amos M. Hart (1833-1908), son of Aaron, Jr., owned the house, lived in it for a while, but moved out and rented it from at least 1884-1905. At that time, Fanny Hart Browne, his daughter, sold it to Mr. Oliver Hoch. His son, Grant Hoch, bought it in 1935.

This late 18th century house, of Flemish bond facade and American bond sides, represents an excellent example of Federal architecture and resembles closely the later city row houses.

The alterations made in the Greek Revival style have enhanced and complimented the original.
