A black and white photograph of a single-story wooden building, identified as a grist mill. The building has a gabled roof with a dark, textured surface, possibly shingles. The exterior walls are made of horizontal wooden siding. On the left side, there is a window with a shutter and a door. To the right, there is a larger door with a small porch area. A prominent sign on the side of the building reads "GRIST MILL" in large, bold, black letters. A small, white, triangular-roofed structure, possibly a well cover or a small porch, is attached to the right side of the building. The building is situated in a grassy area with a wooden post-and-rail fence in the foreground. The background is filled with dense trees and foliage.
