

Timberline Lodge, at the 6,000 foot level on the slopes of Oregon's towering Clackamas Mt. Hood, 11,245 feet high, is nationally famous for its modern luxurious accommodations. It has become a mecca for visitors throughout the year, with many thousands of snow sports enthusiasts coming to the area during the winter months. From its lofty vantage point, the crest of the Cascade mountains can be seen for many miles, including Mt. Jefferson, Oregon's second highest peak. During the summer, mountain climbers come from afar to climb Hood's precipitous summit. (Oregon State Highway Department Photo 534).

A view to the south on a clear winter day from Timberline Lodge in the Mount Hood Recreation Area, shows Mt. Jefferson's majestic grandeur among the Cascade peaks. The lodge, located at the 6000 foot level, is the hub of winter sport activities which may be enjoyed practically all year around. Oregon State Highway Department Photo #6929.

One of America's pioneer ski areas, Timberline Lodge is located at the 6,000-foot level on the south slope of Mt. Hood, 60 miles east of Portland, six miles by paved road off U. S. Highway 20. Ski facilities include three double chair lifts, two rope tows and two portable pomalifts. Two 20-passenger snow tractors take skiers and sightseers to the 10,000-foot level summer or winter for skiing or snow play. The lodge has excellent accommodations, a ski shop, gift shop, cafeteria and dining room as well as an all-weather swimming pool. (Oregon State Highway Department Photograph 7330).

JANUARY 1965

A view to the south on a clear winter day from Timberline Lodge in the Mount Hood Recreation Area, shows Mt. Jefferson's majestic grandeur among the Cascade peaks. The lodge, located at the 6000 foot level, is the hub of winter sport activities which may be enjoyed practically all year around. Oregon State Highway Department Photo #6929.

Jan., 1962

Timberline Lodge, Mt. Hood, Oregon; Photo Credit: Oregon State Highway Commission; Description: Interior

Relaxing before the huge fireplace at Timberline Lodge is a favorite apre ski pastime for winter sports enthusiasts at this famed resort on Mt. Hood in Oregon's northern Cascade Mountains. The lodge has lodging, two restaurants, two cocktail lounges, sports shop, year-round open air swimming pool and facilities for skiing 11 months of the year. It is located just 60 miles east of Portland, off U. S. Highway 26. (Oregon State Highway Department Photo 6922).

JANUARY 1962

TIMBERLINE LOGS
CLACKAMAS COUNTY, OREGON
SOUTH PLANTATION - FROM WEST END

TIMBERLINE LOGS

CLATSOP COUNTY, OREGON

SOUTH ELEVATION - FROM EAST END