Exterior: two-story frame house constructed of pine cypress with gable roof and bracketed eaves of considerable protrusion. Front left projection of facade contains a bay window with crowning balustrade, arched windows (one double) with surmounting "architraves", and front entrance with separate arched porch decorated with lattice work and supported by chamfered columns. Arched double doors contain original etched glass in top portion. Verandah and supporting chamfered columns across remainder of front facade. Bay window on each side of house.

Interior: unusual four square plan with central dividing hall, front of which is utilized for an entrance hall, the back a staircase.

Built in 1872, in the then popular "Cottage Style" and bearing the theme of a modified Tuscan villa the house is of unquestionable Andrew Jackson Downing inspiration, and is one of the best examples of "Cottage Architecture" in South Carolina. Remaining virtually as built the home where Woodrow Wilson spent part of his boyhood today provides a glimpse into the world of the 1870's which influenced the boy who became the twenty-eighth President of the United States.

Built by the Reverend Joseph Ruggles Wilson, professor at the Columbia Theological Seminary 1870-1874, minister First Presbyterian Church 1871-1873, and father of Thomas Woodrow Wilson. Occupied by the family until 1875 when the Wilsons moved from South Carolina.

Restored by Historic Columbia Foundation, house contains gas lights of the period (earliest lighting was gas), 1870's oak graining, and original iron mantels painted to resemble marble. Wilson furniture includes mahogany sideboard, bed in wheih Woodrow Wilson was born and Mrs. Wilson's Bibles. Other furnishings came from similar Columbia homes of the period.

On the lawn, which is surrounded by a picket fence, are tea olives, magnolias and dogwoods planted by the Wilsons.
