DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (II known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The present physical appearance of the church is the same as its original construction, although the Rectory has been altered somewhat.

St. Columba's has a long, narrow Basilican nave, flanked by a campanile toward the left rear with an attached Rectory behind that. There is a small landscapped yard giving on-site setting to the curved portico entrance and the campanile.

The whole group is of gray stone which is probably gray granite.

Above the apse-like entrance portico are apse-like roofs and gables, featuring Baroque in the detailing and curved buttresses.

The austere interior of marble and marble simulation has a subdued gold effect which is both dignified and restful. The sanctuary curved with a half-domed ceiling.

Most notable inside, however, is the curved barrel vaulting covering the Basilican have. There are sizable arches of dormer windows.

The church, inside and out, is somewhat decorated but not over ornamental, as it relies chiefly upon its skillful handling of the composed inter-relatedness of its various pleasing shapes and forms.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The significance is chiefly architectural, being the outstanding one-of-a-kind in the major city of Newark.

In contrast to the earlier Greek Revival Period (also the Gothic Revival and Richardson Romanesque), St. Columba's is Newark's best classical church of the oO year period after the Greek Revival, which had a national peak in the 1890's when classical renaissance largely succeeded Richardson Romanesque. It is most stately in its classical grandeur, varying from austere Roman to Baroque, with its rough-hewn stone particularly of the attached Rectory even relating to the Richardson style.

According to a forgotten source, it is "a building of Renaissance style, copied from the Royal Chapel at Versailles".

It also has an exceptionally fine example of a Roman Basilica with barrel vaulting and classical columns.

It, thus, may be described as either French Renaissance or Italian Renaissance - in its adaption from Roman classical precedents. The curved apse-like, columned entrance is definitely classical inclination toward Baroque (French or Venetian), while the bell tower is typically an Italian campanile toward the side-rear.

The architect was Charles Edwards. St. Aloysius Church (RC) was also done by Charles Edwards, in the same general classical style and materials and also with a side campanile and a curved portico (cornerstone 1906). Charles Edwards was a Paterson, New Jersey architect who did various high classical works. He died in Paris in 1921.

From The Catholic Church in New Jersey, Joseph M. Flynn, are the following excerpts: "The gream of the Catholics of Newark that they were soon to have their cathedral, fronting Lincoln Park and rearing aloft its cross among the mansions of the city's financial magnates, seemed to be on the verge of realization when Dr. Corrigan, the administrator, laid the corner-stone of the cathedral chapel, November 21st. 1869. The chapel was indeed, erected, but the cathedral was not, on that site at least. In the autumn of 1871 the Reverend Charles A. Reilly, one of the pro-cathedral staff, was appointed to organize a new parish in the southern section of the city, and around the cathedral chapel the congregation grew. (Con't.)
