Narrative Description

(Describe the historic and current physical appearance and condition of the property. Describe contributing and noncontributing resources if applicable. Begin with a summary paragraph that briefly describes the general characteristics of the property, such as its location, type, style, method of construction, setting, size, and significant features. Indicate whether the property has historic integrity.)

Summary Paragraph

The Shoals Historic District encompasses approximately eight blocks of the historic business and residential core of the town of Shoals in central Martin County, Indiana. The town was platted in 1844 along the eastern banks of the Eastern Fork of the White River. The district is dominated by three streets running roughly northeast to southwest--Water, Main and High Streets. Streets numbered 1st through 7th run roughly northwest to southeast. The district is divided into two halves by US 50/150 and railroad tracks, both of which run roughly northeast to southwest through the county. A small commercial area of mostly one and two story buildings is located along South Main Street. The remainder of the district contains a mixture of homes dotted with commercial buildings, government buildings, churches and a library. The earliest known commercial building is the Mohr Building (c.1872) at 232 Main Street. The earliest known residential properties include the early half of the building at 311 High Street built as a tavern below and living quarters above, and the William "Golden" Green House adjacent at 315 High Street. Both are dated c.1865.

Narrative Description

The Shoals Historic District is characterized by its location on a bluff above the Eastern Fork of the White River and its division into two halves by US 50/150 and the railroad. The district runs along Main Street from the south end of Main to 7th Street, includes most of High Street from 1st Street to 7th Street, and most of Water Street from just south of 2nd Street to 5th Street. The south half of the district rises to the northeast where it plateaus slightly between 2nd Street and US 50/150. The northern half of the district rises further between US 50/150 and 7th Street, before it begins to slope downward again to farmland. The immediately rural surroundings of the town lead into heavily wooded areas or farm fields to the north, east and south. To the west across the river the terrain rises uphill dramatically past West Shoals before transitioning to rolling farmland and wooded areas.¹

The district is decidedly rural in character. Although the streets are paved, the district is without consistent sidewalks except for those along South Main Street between 1st Street and US 50/150. Curbing and tree plots are also not consistent throughout the district. South Main Street is wide with parallel parking along the west-bound lane and angled parking along the east-bound lane. Street lamps provide the only streetscaping. Parking areas behind or surrounding many of the commercial buildings, as well as on either side of the railroad tracks between the 200 and 300 blocks of Water, Main and High Streets, are unpaved dirt and gravel.

¹ Note: The streets run northeast/southwest and southeast/northwest. For the purposes of this nomination the elevations are identified as north, south, east and west, with north being northeast, south being southwest, etc.

A paved alley runs north to south between South Main and High Streets behind the buildings fronting those streets. A minimal number of trees are scattered throughout the district. The overall minimal number of trees, absence of streetscaping, and large open and vacant lots throughout the district give it an overall feeling of openness and further lend to its rural character.

The southern half of the district is a blend of historic and new commercial and governmental buildings, a church, and a lodge, with historic homes on Main Street south of Second Street, and a few others on High and Water Streets. The northern half of the district is mostly residential with some vacant lots, commercial buildings, two churches and the library. The residential is a mixture of historic, modern and manufactured homes. Few buildings within the district are without some degree of alteration, with replacement siding and windows the most prevalent recent alterations. Changes to rooflines and the full enclosure of porches are found less frequently in the district but tend to render a resource non-contributing. The decision to declare a resource non-contributing was based in large part on the amount of original materials still visible, the degree to which fenestration was re-sized, moved or covered, and the size and design of additions, if applicable.

The Shoals Historic District contains 138 resources. There are 94 contributing resources: 75 buildings, 14 structures, and 5 objects. There are 44 noncontributing resources: 37 buildings and 6 structures, and 1 object. Descriptions for all buildings and related resources follow. A resource inventory concludes Section 7.

1 127 Water Street; Star Mill (c.1875). Industrial building (Contributing)
2 grain bin (c.1935) (Contributing structure)

Photo 0001

The building is two-and-a-half stories with a walk-in basement at ground level. The brick walls rest on a stone foundation and the front gabled roof was recently covered with metal. A later single story, brick addition with a metal shed roof is attached to the north wall. The east elevation has a centered door on both the first and second floor, with a window to either side, and two windows in the gable wall. The south elevation has a doorway centered at basement level with a window to either side. Another door is at the southeast corner of the first floor with two windows to the west. The second floor has three windows. The north elevation has three second story windows visible, however, any other openings have been covered by an addition. All openings have segmented arch headers. The transomed doorways contain replacement doors. All windows are one-over-one replacement vinyl except for the basement windows, which are one-over-one wood sash. Non-operable shutters have been applied to all but the basement level windows. A shed roof porch spans the primary facade and extends across a later addition. The porch is constructed of wood posts with wood railings.

A round, metal Butler grain bin is located to the southeast of the building. It is a contributing structure.²

² Note: Butler Manufacturing Company began making metal grain bins in 1907, with the late 1930s bringing increased demand and production. The close of the mill by the early 1940s dates this resource to the 1930s.

The mill was started by Wilson Chenoweth, Zeno Coffin and Henry Henley in 1858. The original building was wood while the current building was constructed as an addition. Not long after completion of the addition the original building burned. The mill continued operations until at least the mid-1930s, but ceased functioning by the start of the 1940s. The building has been vacant following attempts at reuse for at least 25 years.

3 125-127 Water Street (1960). Commercial building (Non-contributing)

The building is a single story, gable front structure with a metal roof. Alterations were made in 2012. The north and south elevations are covered with metal and are without windows. The east elevation is brick veneer with paired, centered glass doors flanked by plate glass windows. A gabled roof is above the doors.

The current building was the second location for Jay C Food Store and then housed a church. The building is currently vacant.

4 201 Water Street (2011). Government building (Non-contributing)

The building houses the Shoals Fire Department. It is a wide two story structure sided with metal resting on a poured concrete foundation. The roof is a low-pitched side gable covered with metal. The paired windows are one-over-one vinyl. The east elevation has four large, evenly spaced garage bays beginning at the northeast corner and a human-scaled metal door at the southeast corner. The south elevation has a smaller garage bay at the southwest corner and a human-scaled metal door near the center of the wall.

Prior to construction of the current building, a Chevrolet dealership was at the site that later housed the town hall. A feed mill was to the north.

5 Water Street at the White River and the railroad bridge, no address; Pumping Station

The circular, poured concrete structure rises from the riverbed to the bluff. A molded belt course distinguishes the lower half of the structure from the upper, main level. This belt course flares out to form a narrow walkway with a metal railing that encircles the structure. A metal ladder is flush to the southwest side and extends to the roof of the structure. A low metal railing circles the outer edge of the roof. A narrow, six-pane metal window is on both the north and south sides, and a doorway is on the east side. A raised, poured concrete and steel walkway extending from the bluff provides access. A round, poured concrete pad of unknown use is on the bluff immediately to the east of the walkway.

The pumping station provided water to the railroad steam engines that ran through Shoals. The railroad bridge is immediately north of the structure, outside the district boundary. Large water tanks were located to the east in the now gravel lot.

7 well house (c.1943). (Contributing building)

The front gable bungalow sits on a rock-faced concrete block foundation of irregular-sized blocks. The walls are off-white tile brick and the roof is covered with corrugated metal. A porch off the east elevation is constructed of a low concrete pad on rusticated concrete blocks, and a hipped roof supported by corner posts of off-white tile bricks and two two-by-four wood posts near the center. All windows have been replaced with one-over-one vinyl units. The replacement front door is metal and is slightly off-center, and a pair of windows is to either side. The south elevation contains three pairs of windows, and the north elevation contains three single window units.

A small, front gabled well house, converted to a chicken coop, is the southwest of the house. The period building is off-white tile bricks with an asphalt shingle roof and a vertical board wood door.

8 311-313 Water Street (c.1940). Automotive Garage (Contributing)

The single story, smooth-faced concrete block building has a stepped parapet and brick chimney. A three-light wood door is flanked by plate glass windows. A wood framed door and windows alters the garage bay. Two narrow, vertical fixed glass windows are on the south side. A gabled rear addition is covered with wood shingles. The building is connected to the immediately adjacent house with a frame and plywood-covered connector.

The building last housed Gary's Barber Shop and Launderama.

9 321 Water Street (c.1940). House (Contributing)

The single story house has a smooth-faced concrete block foundation, asbestos shingle siding, and a side gabled roof is covered with corrugated metal over asphalt shingles. A projecting Tudor Revival style entry is slightly off-center with a low concrete stoop covered and aluminum awning. The windows are two-over-two wood sash and the wood door has a fan light. The rear addition has a shed roof. The house is connected to the immediately adjacent automotive garage by a frame and plywood covered connector.

10 327 Water Street at US 50/150 (c.1990). Manufactured House (Non-contributing)

The house is parallel to the highway. The foundation is not visible, the walls are board and batten wood, and the side gabled roof is covered with corrugated metal. The roof extends over the north side forming a porch roof supported by log posts on a poured concrete pad. A wood door is near the center and all windows are one-over-one vinyl.

Beginning on the north side of US 50/150 on Water Street, on the west side.

11 Water Street adjacent to the highway bridge and within the highway right-of-way, no address (1880/1932). Historical Marker (Contributing object)

The marker is comprised of the 1880 sandstone block from the Old Pier, the name for the first bridge in Martin County to cross the White River. The stone is inscribed with the date and names of the contractor, builder, superintendent and others. It was mounted on a concrete pedestal with a descriptive metal plaque and placed at this location in 1932 by the Shoals Home Economics Club and the Indiana State Highway Commission when the bridge was replaced.

12 401 Water Street, Crim Enterprises (c.1940). Commercial building (Contributing)

The single story concrete block building is constructed into the river bluff creating a lower half story on the river side. The low, front gable roof is covered with corrugated metal. Plate glass windows wrap the southeast corner with a glass entry door at the clipped corner. The original concrete stoop with corner metal post supporting a flat awning has been widened and lengthened to wrap the corner. Two smaller, two light fixed windows are on the south side. A garage bay is on the east side. A concrete block, side gabled rear addition is of virtually the same scale as the original building.

This was the main building for Crim's Enterprises, which sold furniture and appliances. The now vacant building sits on the former location of the Daisy Flour Mill.

13 423 Water Street (c.1948). House (Non-contributing)

The single story house has a concrete block foundation, vinyl siding, and an asphalt shingle side gable roof. All windows are one-over-one vinyl units and a replacement metal door is near the north end of the east elevation. Overall the location of fenestration appears altered. The raised porch is a combination of cement board and vinyl and supports a shed roof. A two story, side gabled addition with a ground level garage bay is to the south.

14 431 Water Street (c.1930). House (Contributing)

15 garage (c.1940). (Contributing building)

The hipped roof bungalow has a rock-faced concrete block foundation and vinyl siding. The windows are one-over-one vinyl units. The porch has square brick supports and a brick wall supporting a hipped roof. It was later enclosed with eight-light wood casement windows and a central door, now metal. A second metal replacement door is on the north elevation. A wood deck is at the rear of the house.

The period two-bay garage is southwest of the house. It is off-white tile brick with overhead doors and an asphalt shingle hipped roof.

17 retaining wall (c.1930). (Contributing structure)

The hipped roof bungalow has a rock-faced concrete block foundation and vinyl siding. A recessed, northwest corner entrance porch is under the main roof with the same foundation material and a brick corner support. The windows are one-over-one vinyl units and the doors are replacement metal. A front gable entry porch with metal supports and railing is on the south side. A shed roof carport with metal supports is attached to the north side.

A period, exposed aggregate concrete retaining wall extends along the west property line.

The cross gabled house with a walkout basement on the south side has a Bedford stone veneer foundation, aluminum siding, and an asphalt shingle roof. The windows are one-over-one wood sash and the two doors off the porch are transomed. The porch has a Bedford stone veneer foundation, square brick supports and a honeycomb brick wall, and a hipped roof. A hipped roof rear addition has a shed roof screened deck.

A paired bay garage is accessed from Water Street. It is plain-faced concrete block with overhead doors and an asphalt shingled front gable roof.

The L-plan single story house has a brick foundation, vinyl siding and an asphalt shingle roof. The windows are one-over-one vinyl units. Each gable end wall has a single centered window. One of the two front doors is a period, single light wood door with a wood transom and eight-light wood storm door, while the other is a later replacement. The porch has a brick foundation, square brick corner supports with a honeycomb brick wall, and a shed roof. A rear gabled addition has an additional shed roof addition.

The non-contributing two-bay garage has a second floor addition. It is sided with vinyl and has overhead doors. The roof is side gabled with a long westward slope.

The double entry, center gable I-house has a brick foundation, vinyl siding, and an asphalt shingle roof. It has a two story, gabled rear addition. The fenestration is evenly spaced on all elevations. The windows are one-over-one wood sash. The paired, single light wood doors are centered on the east elevation and have wood transoms. The porch has a poured concrete floor near grade, four square brick supports with a honeycomb brick wall, and a hipped roof. The north elevation has a one story, hipped roof sunroom addition. A rear porch has a plain-faced concrete block foundation, vinyl posts and a shed roof.

The single bay garage is accessed from Water Street. It is plain-faced concrete block with an asphalt shingled hip roof and vertical wood slat sliding doors.

The single story T-plan house has a brick foundation, vinyl siding, and an asphalt shingle roof. The front gable extension has a semi-octagonal bay window with a flat roof. An L-plan rear addition is at the southwest corner, a shed roof addition is at the northwest corner, and another shed roof addition is off the rear of the first additions. The windows are one-over-one vinyl units. The doors off the porch are replacements. The porch is along the north elevation on a brick foundation with metal supports, a metal railing and a shed roof. The poured concrete floor continues uncovered to the northwest addition.

The single bay garage is accessed from Water Street. It is plain-faced concrete block with an overhead door and an asphalt-shingled, front gable roof. Vertical wood fills the gable ends.

single light wood with the wrap-around porch extends from one to the other. It has a Bedford stone foundation, low brick pillars and a honeycomb brick wall, and replacement vinyl columns. The porch steps have elaborate, decorative cast concrete sidewalls.

The non-contributing paired bay garage is sided with vinyl, has an asphalt shingled side gable roof, and overhead doors.

In the early 1900s, Violet Dunleavy's Ladies' Hat Shop was located in the house. By the middle part of the century it was the location of Albright's Insurance Office.

28 129 Main Street, Martin County Bank (c.1970). Financial building (Non-contributing)

29 sign (c.1970). (Non-contributing object)

The building was converted in 1982 for use as the Martin County Courthouse with few exterior and interior alterations, including retention of the bank drive-thru portico. The single story, flat roof building expresses a simplified variation of the Brutalist style dominated by large, square, smooth limestone panels with inset panels of tooled limestone. Bands of smooth limestone form a water table, an upper belt course, and a projecting cornice. The entry bay of glass doors, windows and transoms are replacements. North of the entry is an inset, carved limestone panel with three lozenges with the letters M,C,C and the date of conversion. Five fixed-glass, narrow windows are evenly spaced on the north side. Period wall sconces are at the northwest and southwest corners. Two period streetlights on the east side of the building near the street edge match the exterior sconces.

The re-purposed, tooled limestone bank sign of the period is to the northeast and is a non-contributing object.

This was the second purpose-built building for the Martin County Bank, founded in 1887. Prior to construction, the site was the location of a general store and later Horseshoe Bar. Although the building and its associated objects are not yet within the fifty year time frame and are outside the period of significance, they constitute an important architectural contribution and are worthy of inclusion at a later date.

30 201 Main Street, Old National Bank (c.1982). Financial building (Non-contributing)

The single story building has brick walls and a cross gable roof. A drive-thru portico is on the west side. Rusticated concrete block both defines the foundation level and forms an upper belt course. Paired automatic glass doors are on both the east and south elevations with segmented arch brick headers. The windows are one-over-one vinyl units.

Previous businesses in the building originally on the site include Seth William's General Store, Ora Jackman's Men's Clothing Store, and the Martin County Bank.

The two-story, brick building has two commercial bays separated by a central doorway with a glass block surround accessing the second floor. The bays are framed by cast iron pilasters and the transoms have been covered. Though the maker's name plates have been removed, the pilasters are documented as appearing in the 1911 catalog for George Mesker &

Company.³ The seven second floor windows have rusticated brick segmental arches and stone sills. Four have been bricked in. The other three have one-over-one vinyl units. Three rows of corbeled brick lead to a wide brick parapet horizontally bisected by two rows of rusticated brick. A brick sign panel is framed with two rows of tooled brick. There is no fenestration on either the north or south elevations. Two brick additions extend off the rear with entrances on Water Street. The north addition is two-story and the south addition is single story.

In addition to Sam H. Ross's and Dr. I.M. Plummer's Drug Store, F.M. Baker Furniture Store was located here. It was later the location for White River Lodge 332 of the Free and Accepted Masons, and is now the home of the Fraternal Order of Eagles Lodge 2442.

32 227 Main Street (c.1978). Shoals Main Street Apartments (Non-contributing)

The two story apartment complex is an infill building situated to the south toward a parking area. The first floor is faced with brick; the second floor with board and batten wood, and the roof is hipped. There are four apartments on each floor. The units have metal doors and vinyl windows. An overhanging walkway with a central metal stairway and a metal railing accesses the second floor apartments.

Stern's Package Store and later Savage Jewelry Store were in the building on the site of the parking area. T. V. Albright's General Store, and later Tedrow's Tavern and Tredway's Market, were located on the site of the apartments. See Figures 2 and 3, left side of photos.

The two story brick building has a single commercial bay. The glass door has a sidelight and two plate glass windows on either side. A glass door to the second floor is at the southeast corner and a cast iron pilaster remains to the south of the door. The transoms and surrounds are pigmented, structural glass in the Modernist style. The five, evenly spaced, segmented arch second floor windows have been boarded over. The arches have three rows of rusticated header brick and the sills are stone. Corbeled brick pilasters are at either corner and decorative brick is at the cornice line. The sign panel has herringbone brick, an arched parapet and brick side pilasters with corbeled ends. The north elevation has three evenly spaced oculus windows separated by a course of dog-tooth brick, and five, evenly spaced, segmented arch windows, all of which are boarded over. The headers are three rows of tooled brick and the sills are stone. A dog-tooth brick course delineates the cornice line. A two story brick addition is to the rear.

In the early 1900s, Lum Waggoner's Clothing Store was located here. It has been the location of the East Fork Water Company for many years.

34 301 Main Street (c.2005). Commercial (Non-contributing)

The two story building is situated southward. The first floor is brick veneer, the second floor is vinyl siding and the front gable roof is corrugated metal. A front gable entry portico with brick corner supports is on the south end. Three fixed, narrow, single light windows are on the east elevation, and two are on the west.

³ <https://meskerbrothers.wordpress.com> [Viewed May 25, 2016] Note: The pilasters are also seen in the 1903 catalog indicating the designs may have been repeated. The building appears in very early photographs of Main Street (Figure 1 and 2) which supports a possible earlier construction date than 1911. Thus a mid-point circa date for construction has been selected.

The single story, concrete block building has a parapet wall on both the east and west ends. The east elevation has an off center, recessed glass door and plate glass windows. The parapet steps have square limestone insets. Soldier course bricks with square limestone, corner insets frame the sign panel. A metal, flat porch roof with metal posts extends across the facade. The north elevation is covered with corrugated metal. The west elevation is plain-faced concrete block with three concrete block pilasters.

A frame building on the site housed the Shoals Newspaper. The current building was constructed as a Chevrolet garage and later housed Sherfick Music Company and Alco Dime Store. The name of the latter business remains on the west elevation. A frame building adjacent to the north housed the Telephone Exchange and later Edward's Cafe and then a ladies dress shop.

The single story, brick building with a southeast corner entrance has a hipped roof covered with metal. Paired wood doors with wood-framed sidelights and a covered transom are under awning cover. A brick pedestal with metal pole supports the roof. A large bricked-in window faces south, while two facing east are covered with wood. The openings are framed with brick pilasters and have brick sills and kick plates. A wide projecting brick sign board with a soldier course wraps the corner above the windows.

The building originally housed Show Theater. It was purchased by Crim Enterprises for use as storage, and is now vacant.

The two-story, five-bay I-house exhibits both Classical Revival and Queen Anne-style influences. It has a sandstone block foundation, asbestos shingle siding and an asphalt shingle side gabled roof. The eaves are wide and have cornice returns. A brick chimney shaft is at each gable end. A two story, full width porch extends across the east elevation on a plain-faced concrete block foundation with tongue-and-groove flooring. Six first floor, wood Doric columns have wood pedestals while those on the second floor rest on the floor. A wood balustrade runs between the columns on both floors. The ceilings are wood bead board and the shed roof has a wide cornice and eaves. Fenestration is evenly-spaced and is Queen Anne-style with molded surrounds. The wood window sash is one-over-one. The centered wood doors have beveled glass sidelights. The west elevation of the main house has a shed roof porch with square posts. A two story, hipped roof ell is to the rear of the house. A recessed veranda with square wood posts faces south. The house appears abandoned and is in severe decline.

The house was built by Martin Moore (Mohr) from Nassau, Germany. He and his wife, Sofia, married in 1864 and settled in Martin County before 1870. Moore owned and operated a successful tavern in Shoals.

The one-and-a-half story Queen Anne cottage has a stuccoed brick foundation, clapboard siding, and a pyramidal and gabled roof. An Arts & Crafts-era gabled dormer is in the south side of the east gable. The house exhibits highly decorative window surrounds with corner bull's eyes and scallop detailing, a clipped corner with a bay window, scalloped gable clapboards, and decorative rafter ends. Doors are single light, Queen Anne-style wood with transoms and the windows are one-over-one wood sash.

The later period porch has a paneled-faced concrete block foundation, square brick corner supports and a low brick wall, and a hipped roof with a wide cornice and plain exposed rafter ends. A matching stoop with a single brick support covers the south entrance.

The later period garage is constructed of panel-faced concrete blocks, has a hipped roof and paired, wood casement doors.

The Foursquare house displays minimal Arts and Crafts style influences. It has a rock-faced concrete block foundation, vinyl siding, and a hipped roof with wide eaves and a brick chimney. Hipped roof dormers are on the north, east and south sides. Each has a paired window, one half with nine lights and the other half slated vents. A single story, hipped roof addition with a porch is to the rear. The central, single light wood door has three-pane sidelights. The wood windows are six-over-one on either side of the door, and four-over-one elsewhere. A bay window is on the south side. The porch has a rock-faced concrete block foundation, square brick corner supports and a honeycomb brick wall, and a hipped roof with wide cornice.

The period single bay garage with overhead door is brick. A hipped roof covered with metal extends to the east past the brick structure forming an open carport. The rafter ends are exposed and two metal posts on either side support the extended roof. An Arts and Crafts-style entry door is to the south of the bay.

gable end, and an exterior chimney is on the south gable end wall. The wide eaves have cornice returns. Three hipped roof dormers are on the main house roof and two on the addition. Period windows are eight-over-one wood on the first floor and six-over-one on the second. The dormers have smaller six-over-one windows. The centered doors are a multi-light wood door with sidelights on the first floor and multi-light French doors, likely with covered sidelights on the second. The porch has a stuccoed brick foundation and four turned-wood columns supporting a flat roof with a wide cornice. A smaller version of the porch is at the door on the north side.

Although some elements have been removed, the two story brick building retains vestiges of the Italianate style, such as the three cast iron storefronts and round-arched window openings. The period north-bay has a recessed glass door, wood paneled windows and transoms. The center and south bays have been altered with covered transoms and brick veneering. A wide, transomed doorway near the center accesses the second floor. The second floor has three tall boarded over windows and remaining evidence of two more that have been removed and the wall bricked in. The original configuration of windows was three wide and two narrow windows, all with limestone surrounds with a center keystone and limestone sills with corner corbels. The large windows also have a center corbel. The sills remain for the two removed windows. The cornice line has been covered with corrugated metal following removal of the original bracketed cornice decoration.

Five boarded over, narrow windows with brick segmented arch headers and stone sills are on the second floor of the south elevation. Partial exposure of one window, and full exposure of two rear pair, reveal original six-over-six wood sash. The arching south roofline has six angled sections and four brick chimney shafts. Four boarded over windows are on the north elevation. The arching roofline has four angled sections and two brick chimney shafts. A seventh brick chimney shaft is near the center of the roof.

The Martin County Bank was formed in 1887 and remains the oldest operating bank in the county. The building was constructed by Newell H. Motsinger, but largely rebuilt after an 1897 fire. By 1918, the building housed Tommie Johnson's Drug Store and Lennis Tedbrow's General Store. Later Jones Grocery occupied part of the building as did the Shoals Post Office.

The double pile, side hall, three-bay brick I-house has a limestone water course, wide cornice board and eaves, and an asphalt shingle pyramidal roof. A gabled wing is to the rear. Brick chimneys are at the main house north wall and wing west wall. The windows are one-over-one vinyl sash with limestone sills and headers. The door is wood replacement with a fanlight transom. The porch has a brick foundation, wall of honeycomb brick with three wood columns, and a shed roof. The first floor veranda of the wing is enclosed with a wall of seven four-over-one wood windows. A wide cornice supports a shed roof.

The large tooled brick garage is into the hill southeast of the house at road level. It has a single bay with wood overhead door, and a hipped roof with exposed rafter ends. A sixteen-light wood window is on both the north and south sides.

The house was built by Thomas Albright, a successful Martin County farmer, and his wife, Almira (Tharp) Albright. Their son, Thomas V. Albright, also a successful local farmer and merchant, inherited the house after his father's death in 1892. Ownership of the house remains in the Albright family, however, it is unoccupied.

The long, low-pitch gabled building is sided with metal and situated to the south. A gabled rear addition extends east off the northeast corner. The south entrance has brick exterior walls on the south and east sides with limestone water and belt courses. The entrance doors are paired glass with a ribbon of narrow, horizontal fixed glass windows is on the south side. A wide metal awning covers both entrance elevations.

The cross gabled, concrete block building is sided with board and batten wood on the east and north entry elevations. The gables are sided with vinyl as are remaining elevations. Square wood posts on poured concrete support a wrap-around shed roof awning covering the entrances. The doors are glass and the windows are casements.

The Shoals Train Depot was located on what is now a gravel parking area for the health center.

The two story building has two distinct sections constructed at different periods and reflecting different styles. The first building, situated toward High Street, has large stone blocks at first floor height with brick above, wide cornice board and eaves, and an asphalt shingle front gable roof. First floor entry is at the clipped southeast corner with a chamfered limestone post, replacement door with sidelights and covered transom. Second floor access is via a wood panel door with transom. A plate glass window is in the south wall of the commercial space. Other windows are one-over-one wood sash with stone sills and headers. A sliding glass door to an uncovered wood deck is at the second floor.

The second section is Italianate in style, is constructed of brick and faces south. The side gable roofline is higher than the early building. A single story, stuccoed addition is to the side toward the west. A later two story addition, sided with asphalt, steps back from the first addition at the northwest corner. Windows are two-over-two wood sash with segmented arches and stone sills, except for in the additions where the headers are stone lintels. The centered, two-light wood casement doors have a two-light transom.

The single bay, rock-faced concrete block garage has a front gable roof and an overhead door. It is situated to the south.

A tavern is reportedly an early commercial use for the lower floor. It is now the location for The Shoals News.

The five-bay, brick I-house has a two story gabled wing of the same period extending from the southwest rear of the house. The windows are six-over-six wood sash with segmented brick arches and brick sills. Iron foundation vent grills remain on the west side. The replacement metal door has sidelights and a transom. At the north end is an attached, single bay brick garage with six-light wood casement doors and a hipped roof, probably added around 1925.

The house was built for William "Golden" Green who married Mary Hendrickson in 1854. He was a prominent farmer and dry goods merchant in Martin County and was living in Shoals by 1870.

The cross gabled house has a sandstone block foundation, vinyl siding, and pyramidal and gabled roof. A two story, hipped roof addition is to the southwest rear and a single story shed roof addition is to the northwest rear. A front gabled, single bay garage sided with vinyl is attached at the southwest corner of the addition. Windows are one-over-one vinyl units with false muntins which give the appearance of six-over-six sash. A bay window is on the south side. The wrap-around porch has a sandstone block foundation, brick supports with a honeycomb brick wall, and a hipped roof.

92 431 High Street (c.1880). Queen-Lee Funeral Home (Non-contributing)

The original I-house with cornice returns has a two story gabled wing and a lower gabled addition to the rear off the wing. A flat roof, two story addition in the ell is early but likely not part of the original house. A single story brick addition with a covered portico extends off the east elevation, and a single story, flat roofed addition is along the north elevation. Overall, the house has been severely altered with additions and changes to fenestration and exterior materials, the latter of which includes aluminum and vinyl siding, board and batten, and brick. Windows range from period one-over-one wood sash to vinyl sash of varying sizes. Entry doors are glass and overhead garage bays face north.

Queen Funeral Home was established by Shoals native, Joseph Gordon Queen, in 1945 when he purchased an already established funeral business.

The one-and-a-half story, center cross gable house displays elements of the Queen Anne style. It has a rock-faced concrete block foundation, aluminum siding, and a pyramidal roof with projecting gables. A gabled addition extends to the west and a second gabled addition, lower in height than the first, extends off the first. The south gable has clipped corners and decorative brackets with pendants. A small octagonal window is in the addition. Other windows are one-over-one vinyl units, single on the first floor and paired on the second. The later porch has a smooth-faced concrete block foundation, three yellow brick posts and a brick wall, and a hipped roof with a wide cornice and eaves. The north end of the porch is uncovered.

A flat roofed, concrete block addition is to the rear. Four stained glass windows with wood sills and stone lintels are on both the south and north sides. A stained glass oculus is in the west gable. A later sacristy addition on the west end has a poured concrete foundation and a front gabled roof extended as a covered portico with corner columns. The exterior walls are brick. A pair of wood doors with stained glass lights, are centered on the west wall. On both the north and south elevations is a square stained glass window. The sacristy, added in 1882, was updated to its current appearance in 1999.

The annex building is on the site of the former rectory. Built into the hill slope, it is side gabled and facing east. The walls are large, tooled, grey concrete blocks with light gray blocks

The west and part of the south elevation are veneered with Bedford stone, an enclosed vinyl-sided, gabled entry vestibule has been added, and a carved limestone emblem is above the gable. The windows are narrow, glass block openings with stone sills and headers. Windows in the original building are one-over-one wood sash.

A pair of naval artillery pieces is counted as two contributing objects. The guns are on the west side of the building, one on either side of the walkway.⁷

Two brick chimneys are on the north side. A rear addition is inset slightly from the main building.

The raised west entrance has a segmented arch doorway, limestone surround and a gabled, bracketed awning. The large brackets rest on brick pilasters with herringbone brick "capital" panels. The single light, paired wood doors have a six pane transom. A ground level door is on the south side. The basement windows are paired, three-over-three wood sash with limestone headers and sills. Main level windows on the west side are tripled one-over-one wood sashes with eight light transoms. The limestone sills have four corbels and the headers are brick with square limestone insets. Windows in the north, south and east elevations are one-over-one wood sash, generally paired, with limestone sills. The headers are either limestone or brick with square limestone insets. The wall area below the north and south windows is a decorative brick and limestone panel.

The library was started in 1912 by members of the Shoals Book Lovers Club and J.S. Johnson, the superintendent of the town's schools. The building was designed by Indianapolis architect Wilson B. Parker and built by Brown and Miller of Shoals. It was funded in large part by the Andrew Carnegie Foundation. The lot was purchased in 1914 and construction began that same year, with completion the following year.⁸

⁸ Note: The Martin County, Indiana, Historic Site and Structures Report (2011), states the library was designed by Indianapolis architect, W.S. Parker. However, a search indicates that it was likely Wilson B. Parker, a well-known and prolific Indianapolis architect of several Carnegie libraries prior to construction of the Shoals library, including the Spades Park Library (1912) in Indianapolis which shares many of the same design details <http://historicindianapolis.com/indianapolis-then-and-now-spades-park-library-1801-nowland-avenue/>, and the Thorntown Public Library (1915) in Thorntown, Indiana, <http://www.waymarking.com/waymarks/WM6CRQ>. A researcher on Carnegie libraries in Indiana indicates that Wilson B. Parker designed more than 20 Carnegie library buildings in Indiana, more than any other architect. <https://sites.google.com/site/indianascarnegieliibraries/indiana-s-carnegie-libraries> Parker was at one time a partner with Herbert William Foltz, whose collection is in the William Henry Smith Memorial Library of the Indiana Historical Society. <http://www.indianahistory.org/our-collections/collection-guides/herbert-william-foltz-papers-ca-1898-1933.pdf>

In 1857, Shoals became the connecting point of the main east/west lines of the Baltimore & Ohio and the Ohio & Mississippi Railroads. The trains met that year and a spike was driven to commemorate the occasion at the location of the bridge over the White River. Side tracks were laid parallel to the main tracks on the south side between Main and High Streets and remain under the pavement. The side tracks led to the train station located near what is now the Martin County Health Center. A steam tower, water storage tank and a pump station were established near the bridge over the river. The steam tower is the only associated resource remaining.

ends and brick chimneys at the east, west and north gables. A period gabled addition extends to the north. The transomed door has a highly decorative Classical surround consisting of Ionic pilasters and frieze with a garland motif. First floor windows are one-over-one wood sash with molded hoods and paired wood windows are in the gables. The porch wraps around to the west side. Metal supports and rail, likely replacements for Classical wood columns, support the hipped roof with wide cornice and dentil molding. The gabled entry pediment has decorative scroll work. A small enclosed room is at the west end of the porch.

A retaining wall of rough cut limestone extends along the east boundary at the sidewalk. The wall transitions to smooth cut limestone blocks as it extends along the north boundary.

The house is abandoned, in severe decline, and is threatened with demolition first reported during the 2011 county-wide survey.¹¹

Period of Significance (justification)

The period of significance begins with arrival of the railroad in Shoals in 1857 as represented by the contributing structure of the rail line. It concludes with the year of construction of the Federal Building and Post Office in 1965, the most recent architecturally significant building in the district. In the years between these two events, the town of Shoals experienced its greatest growth and rise in prosperity, which remained fairly steady until the 1970s.

Criteria Considerations (explanation, if necessary)

Statement of Significance Summary Paragraph (Provide a summary paragraph that includes level of significance, applicable criteria, justification for the period of significance, and any applicable criteria considerations.)

The Shoals Historic District in Shoals, Martin County, Indiana, is eligible for the National Register of Historic Places as locally significant under Criteria A and C. With its location along the East Fork of the White River, Shoals has served as a transportation crossroads since prior to Indiana statehood when a ferry operation was established there in 1815. Growth of the community solidified Shoals as the commercial core of the surrounding township, a role it has held since the 1840s. The town's role as a thriving commercial crossroads grew exponentially for all of Martin County with arrival of the rail line in 1857 and later the state (now federal) highway in 1937. Shoals' selection as the county seat in 1869 and construction of the Martin County Courthouse in 1871 established it as the governmental core of the county. This role was augmented with construction of the Federal Building and Post Office in Shoals in 1965. Under Criterion A, the district represents the founding, development and growth of a typical small Indiana town, as well as the growth and development associated with its status as the county seat, and as a throughway for the East Fork of the White River, the railroad and a federal highway. Under Criterion C, the district represents the characteristics of a variety of commercial, governmental, religious and residential architecture ranging from nineteenth century vernacular forms and stylistic influences through the early-and-late-twentieth century, including the Arts & Crafts and International Styles.

Narrative Statement of Significance (Provide at least one paragraph for each area of significance.)

NATIONAL REGISTER CRITERION A

The Shoals Historic District in Martin County, Indiana, meets Criterion A under Commerce for its representation of a typical small Indiana town through its founding, growth and development. It also meets Criterion A under Politics/Government for its role as the county seat, and under Transportation for its status as a throughway for the East Fork of the White River, the railroad and a federal highway.

Commerce

Although the town was platted in 1844, it did not experience significant growth until after the arrival of the railroad in 1857. Many locally owned and operated businesses were established in Shoals during the years following. Several continued for many years and were often passed along to children or former employees. Two businesses founded in the late 1880s, Martin County Bank and The Shoals News, continue in operation.

As with many early settlements, processing agricultural products was the first commercial activity. Wilson Chenoweth, Zeno Coffin and Henry Henley are credited with establishing the first major commercial business in Shoals when they constructed a dam and gristmill in 1858. Known as Star Mill and located along what is now Water Street near the railroad, the mill grew substantially with installation of steam power in 1888 (photo 0001). A former employee of Chenoweth's, J. Perry Albaugh, owned and operated the Star Milling Company by 1918. John Baker Savage was the manager and William Sides was the engineer, with Savage eventually taking over operations and renaming the business Baker Feed Mill. They came to specialize in White Loaf and Snow Flake flours and Pearl meal. The mill operated into the 1930s.¹²

The trading of goods was an important part of life for settlers and the establishment of a central location for this purpose anchored a community's commercial core. In 1867, Wilson Chenoweth's son, John A. Chenoweth, partnered with Benjamin C. "Uncle Ben" Johnson to form the Johnson & Chenoweth Hardware Store. The building was located at the southeast corner of Main and 2nd Streets. Although the location changed, the business operated for over one hundred years. Shares in the business were purchased by Charles W. Slates in 1902, which passed to his daughter, Louise, in 1954. She and her husband, Roy Salmon, moved the hardware store into the old Martin County Bank building at 212 Main Street in 1965.

Because financial institutions provided a foundation for businesses to grow, banks were another early institution established within growing towns. Shoals is the location of the Martin County Bank, the oldest operating bank in Martin County (photo 0005; far right, figures 1, 2 and 3). Benjamin C. Johnson, business partner of John A. Chenoweth, was one of those instrumental in its founding in 1887.¹³ He succeeded Michael Shirey as bank president in 1914 and served until 1925. Shirey had served two terms, first from 1887 until 1900 and again from 1903 to 1914. The bank's location changed several times, although each move was only across Main Street or 2nd Street. The first move was to a no-longer-extant building at 201 Main Street. The bank then moved to the purpose-built building at 129 Main Street, and then to another purpose-built building around 1982 at 201 Main Street. It now operates under the name of Old National.

As communities grew, the sharing of local, regional and national news increased in importance and with it the establishment of newspaper businesses. In 1888, Albert C. Hacker began publishing The Weekly Democrat. The name changed to The Weekly News and eventually to The Shoals News. With Hacker's death around 1909, the newspaper changed hands several times until it was purchased in 1945 by Sanford A. Deckard. He published the paper until his death in 1990, at which time his son, Stephen, took over publication which continues to the present day. The Shoals News was a Charter Member of the Hoosier State Press Association and was one of the first weekly newspapers in southern Indiana to move to offset printing in the late 1960s.¹⁴

The Town of Shoals also became the location of various manufacturing operations beginning in the late 19th-century through the middle of the 20th century, all of which utilized the natural materials of the area. Valentine Kiger arrived in Shoals in 1883 and established a stave making factory. During its heyday the factory reportedly made more staves than any other company.¹⁵ Associated businesses established during the time included a cooper shop and a shingle making factory. Using the clay soils, pottery also became a small industry in and around Shoals during the same time period that Rookwood Pottery was gaining fame. One such business was started by James W. Catterson, who eventually became a prominent lawyer in Shoals. By 1870, Catterson had partnered with a Mr. Devol in establishing two pottery kilns in the town. Between 1870 and 1892 their business made 92,000 gallons worth of stoneware annually.¹⁶

In the nineteen teens, the harvesting of mussels from the river for the making of buttons became an unusual industry for Shoals. In 1912, a factory was established at Shoals to cut button blanks, and Muscatine (IA) Mussel Fisheries built a factory for the manufacture of pearl buttons. The heyday of the company was 1934, at which time 600 people were employed. However, the factories soon began a decline with introduction of the zipper and elastic bands.¹⁷

¹³ Note: The c.1880 cross-gable brick, Gothic Revival style home of Benjamin Johnson at 525 High Street was demolished in late May 2016.

In 1906, the Hincer Manufacturing Company began making wood clothes hangers. Located outside the district boundaries east on 2nd Street, in 1913 the factory switched from making hangers to the manufacture of wood folding chairs, porch swings and ladders. The company ceased operations in 1942. In 1945, Thomas Sherfick purchased the plant and remodeled it for the manufacture of knee-hole desks. The company later added drop-leaf tables, radio cabinets, and more. By 1950 the company employed over 200 but the business was destroyed by fire in 1952. During the same period, Sherfick founded Sherfick Music Company with its headquarters at Shoals. The company operated and maintained juke boxes throughout southern Indiana and became one of the largest companies of its kind in the Midwest.¹⁸

Mining has also played a part in the commercial and industrial history of Shoals. While not directly located within the town, the presence of the operations over the years has directly affected the town's prosperity. The early extraction of kaolin and fire clays brought about the pottery industry. And the extraction of sandstone is still visible throughout much of the town's early architecture. In the early 1950s, southeastern Martin County was found to have vast underground quantities of gypsum. This led both National Gypsum and US Gypsum to establish plants just east of Shoals, both of which are some of the largest local employers.

Historically, Water Street south of Highway 50 was the busy location for a number of smaller industrial enterprises. In the early 1900s, businesses along the street in addition to Star Mill included stock pens, scales, a livery, a granary, Ad Catterson's Poultry and Egg place, and three blacksmith shops, one of which was owned by William Harding. The street was also the location of the water pump and tank for the railroad. Over time, as lifestyles and commerce changed, the businesses changed. But the street retained the presence of small industrial businesses. By the middle of the century the businesses included Quinn's Plumbing Store, Martin County Farmer's Supply, a Chevrolet dealership, and a feed mill.¹⁹ The only remaining vestiges of this once bustling industrial and commercial street are the Star Mill building in the 100 block of Water Street, and the railroad pumping station at the river's edge in the 200 block.

Businesses along Main Street have historically followed the pattern found in most small towns--drug, grocery, clothing, jewelry and furniture stores interspersed with restaurants, cafes, and taverns, small service businesses like beauty shops, shoe and watch repair and laundries, and public service businesses such as the bank and post office. The oldest known commercial building in the district on Main Street is the c.1872 Mohr Building at 232 Main Street (end of first section, center, photo 0018; four from left, figure 1). However, the majority of the district's commercial growth along Main Street occurred between 1887 and 1920. Beginning with the 1887 construction of the Martin County Bank (212 Main Street), additional construction during the early 1890s into the early 1900s included the Plummer-Ross Building (207 Main Street) and the building at 213 Main Street, both on the west side (near center and far center, respectively, photo 0017; third and sixth from right, respectively, figure 1), and the buildings at 218, 228, 227, 300 block, and 316 Main Street on the east side (center two story and far end of second section two story, photo 0018). The three buildings at 302, 314 and 328 on the east side of Main Street date to the nineteen teens to 1920 (single story, photo 0018).

With growth of the automobile, both Water and Main Street saw the establishment of auto-related businesses during the 1920s and 1930s. With establishment of the state highway through Shoals in 1932, additional businesses clustered along US 50/150 during the 1940s and 1950s. The building in the 300 block of Water Street is the only auto-related building remaining on that street (center, photo 0003). On the west side of Main Street the buildings at 319 and 325 Main Street were constructed as an early filling station and dealership, respectively (right side, end of row, photo 0017). On both the north and south sides of the 200 block of US 50/150 between Main and High Streets were several auto-related businesses--filling stations at 202-204 US 50/150 (left side, center, photo 0020), another across the highway (the address is now 412 Main Street) which included the Greyhound Bus Station, and another auto-related building at the intersection with High Street (right side, photo 0020). A third business at 314 US 50/150 continues its historic use as a filling station, but the buildings have been severely altered and the property is outside the district.

Politics/Government

The town of Shoals was chosen as the seat of Martin County in 1869 and a courthouse was constructed in 1871 across the river in West Shoals, which had been absorbed into Shoals in 1867. Prior to this decision, the county seat and government business had been moved to numerous locations around Martin County since the county's founding in 1820. Two of these previous locations included Shoals when the community was known as Halbert's Bluff (1844) and Memphis (1857), however, no buildings were constructed following either of these moves.²⁰ With construction of the Martin County Courthouse, rebuilt in 1876 following a fire, the seat of government has remained in Shoals for over one hundred and forty-five years.²¹

Shoals Historic District has two contributing buildings utilized for governmental purposes. The c.1872 Mohr Building (232 Main Street) was used as the temporary location for the courts in 1876 during reconstruction of the courthouse following a fire.

The second building used for governmental purposes is the 1965 Federal Building and Post Office. Situated on the former site of the Johnson and Chenoweth Hardware building, the Federal Building and Post Office is on the east side of Main Street across from the current county courthouse. Construction of the building provided the post office with a permanent location.²² In addition, the building houses county government services--Hoosier Uplands Economic Development Corporation, Women Infants and Children Program, Health Department and Vital Records, and an Immunizations Clinic. No federal court proceedings take place in the building. In 1962, President John F. Kennedy issued the “Guiding Principles for Federal Architecture,” which sought high quality design without exuberance and conveyed the “dignity, enterprise, vigor, and stability of the American Government.” With the rise of Modern architecture at the time, the various styles collectively within the genre were seen as conforming to this ideal.²³ The Federal Building and Post Office in Shoals Historic District is a good local example of this trend, which brought new ideals in architecture to the town while also increasing the vibrancy of the job market through government services.

²⁰ Ramsey, Janice and Amy Walker. National Register of Historic Places Nomination. Martin County Courthouse, Martin County, Indiana. Indiana Division of Historic Preservation and Archaeology. 2005. Note: Information about the various locations for the seat of Martin County government can be confusing. The National Register nomination for the Martin County Courthouse refers to the 1844 location as Halbert's Bluff. However, Harry Q. Holt's, History of Martin County, Indiana, Volume I, on page 68, refers to the town as Memphis. Likewise, the nomination does not definitively state whether Logootee nor Memphis was chosen in 1857, however, Holt does state was Memphis chosen. Despite most resources stating the county has had eight locations for the county seat, the researcher found an online source stating there have been nine; http://www.visitmartincounty.org/history_and_legends.htm Viewed February 7, 2016.

In 1982, the Martin County Bank Building (c.1970) at 129 Main Street was re-purposed for use as the Martin County Courthouse. Although it is rated non-contributing because it is not within the fifty year time frame and is outside the period of significance, the building serves an important governmental function and provides a distinctive architectural contribution to the historic district. Thus the building is worthy of mention and may be included as contributing at a later date.

Transportation

Prior to Indiana statehood, a ferry was established across the Eastern Fork of the White River at what is now Shoals. While there was some early boat transportation along the river, the ferry established the settlement as an early crossroads for the surrounding area. Later industries, particularly the button manufacturing which relied on the collection of mussels, continued to utilize the river albeit for more localized transportation.

With the coming of the railroad in 1857 transportation to and from Shoals was significantly expanded. That year Shoals became the connecting point of the main east/west lines of the Baltimore and Ohio and the Ohio and Mississippi Railroads, with the final spike driven into the track where the railroad bridge reaches the bluff at Shoals.²⁴ A station was constructed on the south side of the track between Main and High Streets (demolished) and the town became a major service location for the railroad with a water pump (abandoned), water storage tank (removed) and steam tower (removed) also placed into service. These rail-related resources were located in the heart of town along the tracks between the river and High Street making the railroad and its associated activity a major industry and economic generator for Shoals well into the early 1900s. The importance of rail travel in the United States began to fade with the growth of the auto industry. By the mid-twentieth century the railway through Shoals no longer dominated the town’s economy.²⁵

As Shoals grew in the later years of the nineteenth century, road travel became more important. The first bridge constructed across the East Fork of the White River was erected at Shoals in 1880.²⁶ When US 50 was created as a state highway between Lawrenceburg, Indiana, and Vincennes, Indiana, it passed through Shoals in 1932 (photo 0020). At that time an iron bridge was constructed across the river to replace the earlier bridge. That same year a historical marker utilizing a carved stone from the 1880 bridge was erected at the northwest corner of the highway and Water Street to commemorate the first structure. US 150 was constructed two years later between Moline, Illinois, and Mount Vernon, Kentucky, and the route merged with US 50 through Shoals, which eventually became part of the federal highway system on a cross-country route connecting Ocean City, Maryland, with Sacramento, California.²⁷

²⁴ Note: A plaque briefly outlining the history of the coming of the railroad through Shoals is located next to the building at 302 Main Street, adjacent to the railroad line.

Auto-related businesses began to appear along the highway in the 1940s and 1950s, with current buildings conveying an image of what was an active commercial strip. However, their heyday has passed and in general the buildings have either been removed, reused for other purposes or are utilized to a much lesser degree for auto-related business. At 202-204 US 50/150 (left side, center, photo 0020) the buildings and surrounding lot indicate previous use as a filling station and auto repair shop. One building continues some use for auto repair. Across the highway (the address is now 412 Main Street) another former filling station was also the Greyhound Bus Station. The filling station has been removed and the bus station is now used for another commercial use. Another auto-related building at the intersection with High Street (right side, photo 0020) once housed a roadside cafe and also displays evidence of its use for auto repair. Additions have been added to the building which is now an auto parts store. A third business at 314 US 50/150 continues its historic use as a filling station, but the buildings have been severely altered and the property is outside the district.

NATIONAL REGISTER CRITERION C

The Shoals Historic District in Martin County, Indiana, meets Criterion C under Architecture for its representation of the characteristics of a variety of commercial, governmental, religious and residential architecture ranging from nineteenth century vernacular forms and stylistic influences through the early-and-late-twentieth century, including the Arts & Crafts and International styles.

Architecture

The Shoals Historic District is significant for its mix of residential, commercial, public and religious buildings typical of a small Indiana town. The construction period spans a one hundred year period beginning in 1865 through to 1965, and is characterized by predominantly vernacular forms interspersed with high-style examples and decorative influences. Early vernacular house forms include I-houses and variations on the gable-front house, including gabled-ell, cross-gable, T-plan and L-plan houses. Central passage and shot gun forms are also found in the district although in very limited number. Simplified variations on the bungalow can also be found. A few early commercial buildings reflect Italianate influences, however, most are functional, un-styled buildings. The highest style buildings are the public, government and religious structures ranging from late Gothic Revival and Romanesque Revival, to Arts and Crafts and the International Style.

Early settlers into southern Indiana were typically from the Upland South and Mid-Atlantic regions. Revolutionary War veterans were promised land in the territories opened in the west, while others who opposed slavery looked to leave the southern states. These settlers brought their building traditions with them, first constructing simple one room log cabins. Over time the form was expanding on with the addition of rooms. The I-house is a prevalent early house type within Shoals Historic District. First identified as a distinctive building type in the 1930s by historian Fred Kniffen, and so named because of its prevalence in the states of Indiana, Illinois, and Iowa, the I-house type is actually found throughout the Midwest, Mid-Atlantic and Upland South. The characteristic form expanded upon earlier side-gabled single or one-and-a-half story homes with the addition of a full second floor and use of a constant basic layout: one room deep and at least two rooms wide. The most traditional layout is between three and five bays with a centered entrance. However, a variety of configurations can be found including double entry, center-gable, hall-and-parlor, and the side hall or two-thirds variation, the latter of which has three bays and is only one room wide and deep with the entrance in one of the end bays.

Popular throughout the 1800s, the I-house's expansion on earlier forms reflected the growing prosperity of the agrarian community. The simplicity of the I-house's basic form lent well to stylistic applications and in doing so cast a greater degree of sophistication on its owner. Thus the I-house is often associated with prosperous farms and earlier small town residents throughout its range of popular use. The rise of prosperity in Shoals during the 1870s and 1880s correlates with construction dates of existing I-houses in Shoals Historic District, as several are attributed to the more prosperous residents. The c.1865 Golden Green House at 315 High Street is an early I-house built for William "Golden" Green, a prominent farmer and dry goods merchant (photo 0011). Additional I-houses built for successful businessmen include the T.V. Albright House (c.1875) at 103 High Street (photo 0009) and the J.W. Catterson House (c.1875) at 232 4th Street (photo 0019).

The majority of I-houses display some elements of the Greek Revival Style, although Queen Anne, Italianate, Classic Revival and even later influences can also be found, generally in conjunction with the Greek Revival elements. The Greek Revival Style emerged between the 1830s and 1860s, as Americans desired a cultural break from Great Britain and sought a style that more closely reflected their new democracy and aspirations for its future. The Chenoweth House (c.1880) at 34 Main Street (photo 0004) and the Martin (Moore) Mohr House (c.1885) at 501 Main Street (photo 0006) both reflect elements of the Greek Revival style--wide eaves, cornice returns, classical porch columns, and entrances framed with rectangular transoms and sidelights. However, they also both exhibit additional stylistic influences, the later Colonial Revival on the former and Classical Revival on the latter.

During the later years of the 19th-century into the early 1900s, Shoals experienced a growth in house construction and density along the streets increased. Many of these new homes fell outside the standard style and type categories--gabled-ell, pyramidal roof, T-plan, and cross-gable (photo 0014). Although houses may have reflected elements of popular styles of the time, it was often local interpretations. With ready access to manufactured materials, pattern books, manuals, and magazines that published the current trends, the principles of construction and design were opened to a wider audience. In Shoals Historic District most of these vernacular house types are without a high degree of stylistic elements, having either been without them originally or having been stripped of most of the elements during later siding, window and porch replacements.

The Gothic Revival style, one of a handful of styles to emerge during the latter half of the 19th century, is associated with the national enthusiasm for the picturesque movement popularized by horticulturalist, Andrew Jackson Downing. His pamphlet, Cottage Residences, was reprinted numerous times before 1890 and helped spread nostalgia for the vanishing agrarian way of life. The only remaining example of the style in the town is Shoals Christian Church at 601 Main Street (left, background, photo 0008). Built in 1911, it is a later example of the Gothic Revival style which proved to be the most enduring style for religious architecture in the country.²⁸

In line with the Gothic Revival Style, the Italianate Style was inspired by picturesque images of the Italian countryside. But it endured as a far more popular style for both domestic and commercial buildings, and consequently has had a more visible impact on American architecture. In the Shoals Historic District, examples of the style are minimal. However, the c.1870 I-house at 514 High Street displays remaining touches of the style--an arched light door and elaborate eave brackets--combined with Greek Revival elements (photo 0015). A stately, albeit less elaborate, example of the style is the second half of the tavern and house at 311 High Street, added c.1870 (photo 0010). The tavern-house at 311 High Street is a unique combination of commercial and residential forms, a building type often found in neighborhood settings in larger towns. Two commercial buildings also exhibit elements of the Italianate style. The c.1895 building at 320 Main Street has cast iron pilasters framing the first floor bays and upper floor windows with segmented arch stone hoods with keystones. A large and more elaborate example is the Martin County Bank Building (1887) at 212 Main Street (photo 0005). The first floor bays are framed with iron pilasters, the large second floor windows have limestone surrounds with keystones and corner and center corbels beneath the sills. Historic photographs (Figure 1 and 2, far right) indicate the original presence of a bracketed cornice.

Remaining commercial buildings along Main Street are relatively modest. Much like their domestic counterparts of the late-19th and early 20th century, the buildings are functional vernacular and a product of local builders. The oldest known commercial building is the Mohr Building (c.1872) at 232 Main Street (center, end of first section, photo 0018). Constructed of brick and without stylistic detail, the three story building set the pattern for subsequent commercial buildings of the late 1900s to be two to three stories and built with brick. It was not until the early 1900s that single story buildings emerged and patterned concrete block was employed for construction.

The Romanesque Revival Style was another to emerge during the later 1800s that paid homage to earlier architecture. Inspired by 11th and 12th century Romanesque architecture, the revival style employs more simplified arches, windows and other elements. Shoals Historic District has one example of the Romanesque Revival style in Shoals United Methodist Church (1900) at 502 Main Street (far right, photo 0008). The rough-cut stone foundation, contrasting belt courses, and multi-coursed arches of contrasting materials are important elements of the style.

Because the Shoals Historic District was well developed by 1900, presence of the revival styles of the late-nineteenth and early twentieth century is rare and generally only in minor applications. Likewise, few bungalow house types and representations of the Arts and Crafts style are represented. The style dominated the teens, 20s, and 30s, in America, a movement inspired by nature, Asian design and the use of natural materials. The Shoals Public Library constructed in 1915 at 404 High Street is the most outstanding example of the Arts and Crafts style in the district (photo 0012; photo 0025, fourth building from left in distance). The commanding gabled entrance portico with large decorative brackets and the liberal use of decorative brick and limestone in geometric patterns, are strong elements of the style.

Mid-century and later architectural examples within the Shoals Historic District are also rare. Following the initial rise in automobile traffic following establishment of the state highway and construction of the bridge across the White River in 1932, there was a surge in construction of auto-related buildings, primarily along Highway 50/150, from the 1920s into the 1950s. However, with the loss of industries and railroad traffic, prosperity in Shoals began to decrease during the latter half of the 20th century. The east side of High Street south of the highway has a small concentration of mid-century buildings--the c.1955 ranch house at the corner of High and 2nd Streets (now with the address of 311 2nd Street and first from left in photo 0025), the American Legion Hanson Mcfee Post (c.1950) at 224 High Street (second from left in photo 0025), and the c.1955 commercial building at 422 High Street (third from left in photo 0025).

The most significant architectural contribution of the era came in 1965 with construction of the Federal Building and Post Office at 212 2nd Street (photo 0016). Built in the International Style, the Martin County Interim Report: Indiana Historic Sites and Structures Survey (2011) referred to the building as the most notable example of the style in Martin County. Its construction date marks the close of the district's period of significance.²⁹ Following an era in which private architects began designing Federal buildings lacking in character and distinction from private office complexes, and spawned by the decay of government buildings along Pennsylvania Avenue in Washington, DC, in 1961, President John F. Kennedy created an Ad Hoc Committee on Federal Office Space.³⁰ The committee issued "Guiding Principles for Federal Architecture," which sought high quality design without exuberance and conveyed the "dignity, enterprise, vigor, and stability of the American Government." The rise of Modernism during the previous era and construction of many notable buildings around the country built in the modern styles of the time influenced the three point approach of the guidelines which included incorporation of the finest contemporary architectural thought, avoidance of an official style, and consideration of the building site.³¹ In 1965, President Lyndon B. Johnson continued Kennedy's initiative with an increased emphasis on landscaping with issuance of the "Program for Beautification of Federal Buildings." The Federal Building and Post Office in Shoals Historic District is a good local example of this trend. Although smaller than other notable examples of the era, the building utilized a modern style and was sited so as to face the commercial center of the town. The favored concept imitating the United Nations Headquarters in Washington, DC, of a long, low building placed next to a tall tower, is also reflected on a smaller scale in the design of the building in Shoals.

²⁹ Note: The Interim Report contradicts itself in that pg. 45 states Martin County has no examples of Contemporary/International styles. However, the survey entry rates the building as a Notable example of the International Style and makes reference to it being the most notable example in the county in the accompanying documentation.

Following closely behind, the Martin County Bank building (c.1970) at 129 Main Street, now used as the Martin County Courthouse, is a simplified version of the Brutalist Style. Constructed not long after the Federal Building and Post Office, the building continued the introduction of Modern architectural design within Shoals Historic District. By virtue of its placement and designed exterior landscape objects, the building appears to also follow the "Guiding Principles for Federal Architecture," despite having been constructed by a private entity. Likewise, the smooth and tooled limestone panels are not unlike those being produced by regional limestone mills at the time, such as Matthews Stone Company (Matthews Stone Company Historic District, National Register, September 2013) and used in many prominent buildings of the period throughout the state and nation. Although outside the period of significance, the building is an important anchor for the district both architecturally and through its re-use as the county courthouse.

The Hickman House (1972) built in the Colonial Revival style at 425 Main Street is the most notable example of later domestic construction in the district. The remodeling of homes and insertion of manufactured houses on vacant lots comprises the bulk of recent activity. The construction of commercial buildings has also been minimal, at times at the loss of earlier buildings, such as the Shoals Recycling Center (c.2014) at 118 Main Street which replaced two late-19th century homes. An attempt in very recent years at downtown revitalization through the remodeling of commercial storefronts, a granting project with Hoosier Uplands Economic Development Corporation, has unfortunately rendered many non-contributing (center first section, single story and near end second section, single story, photo 0018).

Comparative Qualities

Comparatively, Shoals is the oldest settlement in Martin County to grow into a substantial town that continues to provide a significant economic benefit to the surrounding area. Second only to Loogootee in its commercial impact, Shoals was settled in 1814, four years prior to Loogootee, and was platted in 1844, nine years prior to Loogootee. Both towns grew substantially after the railroad came through, with industries thriving well into the mid-twentieth century allowing for growth and ongoing prosperity, as well as federal highways that bisected the commercial districts.³² Though many other communities were established throughout Martin County beginning in the early 1800s, only Shoals and Loogootee remain as incorporated municipalities with established commercial centers, post offices, libraries, schools and substantial residential areas. Without the topography that constrained the expansion of Shoals, Loogootee grew to a city in the early 1900s and has retained a larger population. However, Shoals' status as county seat necessitates that primary county government offices, departments and services are located in the town, generating daily activity and economic benefit.

Shoals Historic District encompasses the heart of the town of Shoals and includes an array of commercial, government and fraternal organization buildings, as well as the Carnegie library, three churches, and the earliest and most concentrated residential areas. Thus the district includes a variety of building types and styles including those for residential architecture--the I-house, variations on the gable front house, and the bungalow, as well as styles more commonly found on domestic architecture including Greek Revival and Queen Anne. Additionally, inclusion of Shoals United Methodist Church, Shoals Christian Church, Shoals Public Library, and the Federal Building and Post Office within the district provide high style examples of the late Gothic Revival, Romanesque Revival, Arts and Crafts and International styles. In contrast, the boundaries of Loogootee Commercial Historic District are restricted to the immediate downtown with inclusion of only commercial and fraternal organization buildings, the post office and one church. It does not include residential areas resulting in less variation in building types and styles within the district. However, in contrast to the more limited number found within Shoals Historic District, Loogootee Commercial Historic District retains several larger buildings conveying the city's prosperous commercial and manufacturing past from the late 1800s into the early 1900s including the Reynolds-Brooks Hardware Company Building (101-367-09001), the Carnahan Building (101-367-09016) the McCarty House (101-367-09019) and the R.R. Slusser Building (101-367-09031). Likewise, Loogootee Commercial Historic District retains a greater number of commercial buildings displaying the Italianate style including but not limited to the White River Bank Building (101-367-09004), the buildings at 101 and 103 E. Main Street (101-367-09035/101-367-09037), and the Larkin Brothers Building at 103 Wood Street (101-367-09052). However, despite the significant resources within Loogootee Commercial Historic District, Shoals Historic District is distinct in its greater variety of architectural types and styles that as a result span a wider era of time, and as a district is representative of an entire small Indiana town.

³² Note: US 50 bisects downtown Loogootee as well as Shoals, the route through which includes US150. Loogootee is also bisected north/south by US 231. All three highways are Federal highways as part of the United States Numbered Highway system.

Developmental History/Additional historic context information

Topography

The Shoals Historic District in Martin County in southern Indiana is in what is called the Crawford Upland region. The land comprising the county is some of the most rugged in the state and is part of the Interior Low Plateau section of North America.³³ The historic district is situated on a bluff along the Eastern Fork of the White River at an approximate 400 foot elevation; however, nearby elevations rise to over 500 feet. The region is characterized by numerous springs, sandstone bluffs, cliffs and rock caves.

Early Settlement and Formation of Martin County

The land that was to become Martin County was first inhabited by the Native American tribes of the Miami and Delaware. European settlers began arriving between 1787 and 1810, and the resulting conflicts prompted the Treaty of Greenville in 1795.³⁴ However, it was not until the War of 1812 that the Native Americans were removed and Euro-American settlement gained a strong presence. The State of Indiana was formally created in 1816, further securing the advancement of Euro-American settlement.

Most of the land that would become Martin County was part of the Vincennes Tract, although a small portion was part of the Harrison Purchase of 1809. Land began to be sold to private individuals as early as 1804; however, most of the purchases were investments without settlement.³⁵ In 1820, Martin County was formed from portions of Davies and Dubois counties and by that time had a population of over 1,000 inhabitants.

Over the years, eight communities were chosen to serve as the county seat until West Shoals, across the river to the west from Shoals Historic District, was finally chosen in 1869. West Shoals had been absorbed by the town of Shoals in 1867 making them one town despite division by the river. A courthouse was built in 1871 and was rebuilt in 1876 following a fire. Shoals Historic District is located in Halbert Township, organized in 1821 following formation of the county. The township was first named Jackson Township in honor of General Andrew Jackson. However, in 1834 it was renamed in honor of Joel Halbert, a large landowner in the township.³⁶

Settlement of Shoals

The present site of Shoals Historic District was first settled by Lemuel Horsey in 1809. His brother, James, joined him two years later, and their brothers, Clement, and Stephen, followed a short time afterward. In 1814, James Stephens and William Dougherty arrived in the area and the latter purchased over three hundred acres near the present town site prompting it to bear the name, Dougherty's Shoals. Joel Halbert arrived from South Carolina in 1815 and soon established a ferry operation. In time he had acquired over one thousand acres of land and the settlement became known as Halbert's Bluff. In 1844 the town of Shoals, first called Memphis, was platted on Halbert's land. When the town was incorporated in 1872, the name of Shoals was formally chosen. Growth of the town was slow until arrival of the railroad in 1857.

Beginning at the northeast corner of the intersection of Water Street and Main Street, proceed northeast approximately 372 feet to the approximate center of the west property line of the property at 107 Main Street; then northwest approximately 216 feet along the south property line of Star Mill to the White River; then northeast along the bank of the White River approximately 1,571 feet, crossing the railroad line and US 50/150, to the northwest corner of the property at 100 6th Street; then southeast approximately 134 feet to the northeast corner of the property; then northeast approximately 194 feet to the northwest corner of the property at 625 Main Street; then southeast approximately 218 feet to the east side of Main Street; then northeast approximately 96 feet to the south side of 7th Street; then southeast approximately 158 feet along the south side of 7th Street to the northeast corner of the property at 630 Main Street; then southwest approximately 204 feet southwest to the northwest corner of the property at 217 (B) 6th Street; then southeast approximately 133 feet to the northeast corner of the property at the west side of High Street; then southwest approximately 126 feet along the west side of High Street, crossing 6th Street, to the northeast corner of the property at 224 6th Street; then southeast approximately 164 feet, crossing High Street, to the northeast corner of the property at 534 High Street; then southwest approximately 378 feet to the northwest corner of the property at 425 Low Street; then southeast approximately 121 feet along the north property line to the northeast corner of the lot at the same property; then southwest approximately 60 feet along the east property line to the southeast corner of the lot at the same property; then northwest approximately 60 feet along the south property line to the northeast corner of the property at 325 US 50/150; then southeast approximately 115 feet along the east property line to the southeast corner of the same property; then northwest approximately 196 feet along the north side of US 50/150 to the southwest corner of the property at 404 High Street; then southwest approximately 105 feet, crossing US 50/150, to the northwest corner of the property at 422 High Street; then southeast approximately 122 feet along the north property line to the northeast corner of the same property; then southwest approximately 821 feet, crossing Low Street, the railroad line, 3rd Street and 2nd Street, continuing to the north side of 1st Street; then turning west approximately 521 feet across the yard of the property at 34 Main Street, to the west side of Main Street, following Main Street southwest approximately 184 feet to the point of beginning.

Boundary Justification (Explain why the boundaries were selected.)

The boundaries follow fairly closely the boundaries outlined for the Shoals Historic District following completion of the Martin County Interim Report: Indiana Historic Site and Structures Survey in 2011. However, some adjustments were made in light of demolitions and contributing resources worthy of inclusion. On the southern boundary the contributing agricultural resources associated with the Chenoweth House at 34 Main Street were included, and the shape of the legal lot necessitated an angled boundary. The easternmost district boundary was then extended east and north to include St. Mary's Church of the

Shoals Historic District

County and State

Immaculate Conception at 102 High Street, a contributing resource. Further north, the property at 425 Low Street, a contributing resource which did not appear in the interim report, was included because it has become part of a larger business fronting on High Street. On the west side of the district, the property at 629 Main Street, previously part of the proposed district, was excluded due to demolition in the fall of 2015. Further south and west, the properties and marker on the west side of Water Street north of Highway 50/150 were included, three of which are contributing resources although one did not appear in the interim report. And further south on the south side of the railroad bridge, the pump station, a contributing resource, was included. Overall, the boundaries constitute the greatest concentration of contributing resources within the generally defined area. The western boundary is naturally defined by the river. Outside the boundaries to the north, east and south there is a decline in significant fabric at each of the town's edges. The built resources present tend to be non-contributing before quickly transitioning to the natural floodplain used for cropland or light industrial uses.

Please send your comments on or before the above meeting date.

You may call our office at 317-232-1646, or visit our web site at www.in.gov/dnr/historic for more information and a copy of the National Register application form for the property.

The National Register of Historic Places

The National Register is the Federal Government's official list of prehistoric and historic properties worthy of preservation. In Indiana, this program is administered by the Department of Natural Resources, Indiana Division of Historic Preservation and Archaeology. The criteria used to judge a property's eligibility for the National Register and the results of listing are discussed in the enclosure.

Listing in the National Register provides recognition and assists in preserving our nation's heritage. It does not prevent a private owner from altering, demolishing, or disposing of the property as he wishes, provided that no federal license, permit, or funding is involved. Owners of National Register listed properties that are income-producing are eligible to apply for Federal tax credits for qualified historic rehabilitation efforts. This and other results of listing are explained further on the enclosure. After a National Register application is received by our office, it is processed and considered by the Indiana Historic Preservation Review Board. The board will either reject or approve the nomination of the property to the National Register, based on its merits relative to the criteria included on the enclosure.

Private Property Owner Concurrence or Objection

Owners of private properties nominated to the National Register of Historic Places have an opportunity to concur in or object to listing, in accord with the National Historic Preservation Act and Federal regulations 36 CFR Part 60. Any owner or partial owner of private property who chooses to object to listing shall submit to the State Historic Preservation Officer a notarized statement certifying that the party is the sole or partial owner of private property, as appropriate, and objects to the listing. For a single privately owned property with one owner, the property will not be listed if the owner objects. For properties with multiple owners, the property will not be listed if a majority of the private property owners object. Each owner or partial owner of private property has one vote regardless of what part of the property or how many properties that party owns. Each owner may vote regardless of whether their property contributes to the significance of the historic district. If you choose to object to the listing of your property, submit a notarized letter of objection to the State Historic Preservation Officer (address above), by the date indicated on the first page of this letter. If the property or district cannot be listed because the owner or a majority of private property owners objects, the State Historic Preservation Officer will submit the nomination to the Keeper of the National Register for a determination of the eligibility of the property for inclusion in the National Register. If the property is then determined eligible for listing, although not formally listed, Federal agencies will be required to allow the Advisory Council on Historic Preservation an opportunity to comment before the agency may fund, license, or assist a project which will affect the property.

Public Officials - Your Right to Comment

Local governments, public agencies, and other interested parties as well as property owners are welcome to comment on this proposed National Register nomination. Comments regarding the significance and eligibility of the property or district for the National Register will be considered by the Indiana Historic Preservation Review Board as well as the State Historic Preservation Officer. To ensure consideration, comments should be sent before the Indiana Historic Preservation Review Board considers this nomination (see page one of this notice for the date of the Review Board meeting and for the address to which comments should be sent).

Indiana Register of Historic Sites and Structures (State Register)

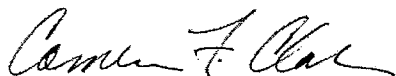

Unless objections are received within thirty (30) days from the date of this letter, the property indicated in this letter will be listed in the Indiana Register of Historic Sites and Structures, independently of the review board's decision on nomination to the National Register. If objections are received, the board will consider the application at the above referenced meeting, along with the historical, archaeological, architectural, or cultural merits of the property, and any staff comments. The final decision regarding any State Register nomination shall be made by the review board.

Listing in the Indiana Register of Historic Sites and Structures qualifies an owner of private property who has State of Indiana tax liability to apply for certain tax benefits. Programs include the Residential Historic Rehabilitation Credit or the Historic Rehabilitation Tax Credit (for commercial properties). Allotment of credits to operate the program depends on budgeting by the Indiana General Assembly. Contact our office or web site for more information.

Listing in the Indiana Register of Historic Sites and Structures provides protection for the property. All state- funded or state-assisted construction which will adversely impact historic properties owned by the State of Indiana must be reviewed by the Indiana Historic Preservation Review Board. Additionally, if a state-funded or state-assisted project will impact historic properties that are listed on the Indiana Register of Historic Sites and Structures, the project must be reviewed by the Indiana Historic Preservation Review Board. For more information, contact our office or web site.

A copy of the nomination including boundaries and map, and information on the federal and State of Indiana tax credit programs or the State and National Register programs may be obtained by calling 317/232-3493, by emailing pdiebold@dnr.in.gov, by writing to the Division of Historic Preservation and Archaeology, 402 West Washington Street, Room W274, Indianapolis, Indiana 46204-2739, or by visiting our web site, www.in.gov/dnr/historic.

Very truly yours,

Dear Mr. Diebold

The purpose of this letter is to convey the total support of the Shoals Business Association for the application by the town of Shoals, Indiana to be placed on the National Register of Historic Places.

The Shoals Business Association supports the inclusion of the Shoals Historic District in the National Register of Historic Places listing both because of the recognition and prestige that it provides, and for the opportunity that it provides for owners of contributing-rated properties to utilize rehabilitation tax credits and other financial incentives to rehab their buildings. The residents of Shoals are very proud of our small town and would gain great pride to be placed on the National Register.

Thank You Very Much

Paul Dieboki,

The Martin County Historical Society would very much like to see Main St. of Shoals to be placed on the National Register of Historical Places.

I am the Vice President of the Society (Martin County) and all members I have spoken to about this project are in favor of this.

The society got the County Museum (old Court House-1876) on National Register several years ago, so we know it takes a lot of work to complete the application.

Dear Mr. Diebold

On behalf of the Martin County Chamber of Commerce, I am sending you this letter to convey our total support for the town of Shoals, Indiana to be placed on the National Register of Historic Places.

The residents of Shoals are very proud of their small town and would gain great pride to be placed on the National Register. Shoals being one of our larger towns in our county, we would be very excited to see them listed as one of the Historic Places. The Martin County Chamber of Commerce supports the inclusion of the Shoals Historic District in the National Register of Historic Places listing for the following reasons because of the prestige that it provides, and the recognition and the opportunity that is offers for owners of contributing-rated properties to utilize rehabilitation tax credits and other financial incentives to rehabilitate their buildings. We are very excited for this opportunity for our community.

Dear Mr. Diebold:

We are writing to express our strong support for putting the central town of Shoals into the National Register. This effort has gone on for several years and it would be a great loss to see it fail at this point. As active members of both the Martin County Historical Society and the county tourism board, we see the importance of this effort and the benefits that can accrue to the town from being able to designate our town as a registered Historic District.

Bill has written 8 books about Martin County and the surrounding counties. The most popular of all was the pictorial history book of the county. Martin County people truly appreciate their heritage and we believe this will be a source of pride for years to come and an attraction for tourism.

Please accept our thanks for coming to Shoals on Thursday the 27th to address any misconceptions that may have arisen and please also know that many of us are strongly in favor of continuing this process.

Yours truly,

Dear Mr. Diebold:

I am writing this letter to support the application filed by the Town of Shoals, Indiana requesting placement on the National Register of Historic Places.

I am employed by the only financial institution in Shoals. I have worked here for 49 years. Shoals is a very small town. The business owners are hometown people who are hardworking folks that care about their community. I feel that if Shoals were to be listed on the National Register traffic would pick up in our small businesses and perhaps help our loyal business owners with their bottom line margins. I fully support Shoals being placed on the Register.

RE: National Register nomination Shoals, IN

My wife and I own residential property on Main Street in Shoals, Indiana.

On first hearing about the nomination, from someone that did not seem to be in favor of it, I did not know it would be good for our town or not.

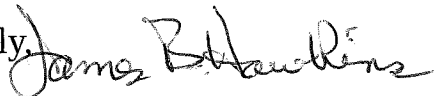

After talking to several people I found most people did not know about it or did not understand the benefits of our town being listed on the National Register of historic places.

After talking to Jim Stoughton, of the Martin County Tourism Bureau and Laura Renwick, of the Indiana Landmarks Regional office, I had some questions answered and received some additional information that I was not aware of.

Now that I have enough information to come to a decision, I am in favor of the town of Shoals being listed on the National Register of Historic places. I will also talk to some of the other property owners in Shoals and give them the information I have and perhaps they will come to the same conclusion I have.

To date there has been only one meeting concerning this matter. I believe there should have been a greater effort to get the right information out to the people of Shoals.

There is now another meeting scheduled for this week. I plan on attending this meeting and speaking in favor of the town of Shoals being placed on the register.

Sincerely,
James B. Hawkins

DNR Public Meeting On Proposed Historic District Is This Thursday

The DNR Division of Historic Preservation & Archaeology will hold a public information meeting about the proposed Shoals Historic District at 6:00 p.m., this Thursday, October 27th.

The meeting will be held at the Shoals Public Library, located at 404 High Street, in Shoals.

The meeting will give attendees a chance to learn about the National Register of Historic Places and what it means to be listed. The meeting will also cover some of the common misconceptions about the Register.

National Register staff from the DNR will be present to answer any questions.

The proposed district includes historic properties from many periods of the town's history. The meeting offers the chance to learn about the various incentives that owners can apply to receive, and other results of the community's efforts to gain National Register listing.

For more information about the National Register of Historic Places, visit dnr.IN.gov/historic/3654.htm or call (317) 232-1646. A copy of the National Register form for the Shoals Historic District is at dnr.IN.gov/historic/2773.htm.

FALL FESTIVAL AT SCHOOL IS THIS SATURDAY NIGHT

The Shoals Jug Rox Adult Booster Club will host the annual Fall Festival this Saturday, October 29th, at the Shoals High School gymnasiums. Doors will open at 6:00 p.m. Admission is $1, or free admission if in costume.

There will be games and inflatables including a slide, and a bounce house. There will also be a costume contest, a cake auction, a haunted house, lots of delicious food, and much more. Many door prizes, donated by local businesses, will be given away during the evening. The cake auction, sponsored by the Varsity and Junior Varsity Volleyball teams, will start at 6:30 p.m. The athletes will provide homemade cakes and sweet treats. Akles Auction Service will be in charge of the auction.

The costume contest will be held at 7:15 p.m. Costume categories for all ages are funniest, most original, scariest, best costume, and best group. Age divisions are as follows: 0 to 11 months, 1 to 3 years, preschool-kindergarten, 1st to 3rd grade, 4th to 6th grade, and 7th grade to adult.

The 2016 Fall Festival Queen and King Crowning will be held at 8:00 p.m. The royalty candidates this year are: 4th grade, Olivia Harker and Max Troutman; 5th grade, Ikia Wright and Austin Rasico; and 6th grade. Hope

Jeannie kicked this one to me. I believe I made a few changes per a few minor comments that you had at the time. You can find the final at

https://secure.in.gov/apps/dnr/shaard/r/a8c34/N/IN_BooneCounty_LebanonCourthouseSquareHistoricDistrict.pdf

I don't know that we finished our conversation about Shoals? I'm not sure but you did give me comments on both Converse and Shoals, and I had made a few changes to Shoals (eliminated "still in use today" on page 43 and altered p. 39 to read "most recent architecturally significant building" instead of "best example of International Style.") If that covers everything, then we're OK.

After I shared the 1959 design bulletin, another consultant sent me a copy of the nation-wide context for Post Offices, which was a draft. I take it that this is the document you are waiting to be made into a MPDF, due to items like the registration requirements, which included parking lots for some post-war types.

Good afternoon, Jeannie.

Did the Lebanon Courthouse Square Historic District get listed by NPS without changes to its 6/20/16 nomination form? I just want to verify before changing what I have to read final in our permanent record.

Any assistance would be greatly appreciated.

Re: Shoals Historic District, Martin County, Indiana

Dear Dr. Toothman,

Enclosed is a National Register of Historic Places nomination for the Shoals Historic District, Martin County, Indiana. The nomination package includes several letters of objection and letters of support regarding the district. The letters of objection do not constitute more than 50% of the number of private owners in the district. The Indiana Historic Preservation Review Board reviewed the application and voted to recommend its approval to the National Register of Historic Places.

The enclosed disc contains the true and correct copy of the nomination for the Shoals Historic District, (Martin County, Indiana) to the National Register of Historic Places.

Please address any questions you or your staff may have about this nomination to my National Register staff members, Paul Diebold or Holly Tate.

Sincerely,

Cameron F. Clark
State Historic Preservation Officer
