Architectural Description:

The Brown House is a two-story, approximately 2400 square foot Neoclassical Revival style home, built around 1925 for Dr. Flavius Brown. Built on what was originally a 25 acre farm, the house now sits on the remaining 5.88 acre site. Mature hardwood trees are evenly spaced across the lot. The property is located on the southeast edge of Summersville's downtown district, where Old Wilderness Road and Arbuckle Road intersect. Also located on the property is a two-story, three bay garage, built about nine years after the house was built, circa 1934.

Dr. Flavius Brown House

ca. 1925

Contributing Building

The Brown house has a hipped roof with asphalt shingles. It has an interior brick chimney, visible on the south slope of the roof, and a corbeled brick exterior chimney visible on the north side elevation. The exterior is sheathed with German siding with corner and frieze boards. On the main façade, which faces west, there are six 6/1 double-hung sash windows on the second floor, and 9/1 double-hung sash windows on the first floor, arranged in two groups of three. The two-story, gabled portico includes slender, two-story Doric columns. These columns replaced the original brick supports, a change made in the 1950's when Flavius Jr. purchased the home from his mother. In addition to changes to the porch, he placed shutters around the windows. The main entrance door has an undivided transom and sidelights. A split-faced, random ashlar sandstone foundation is visible between the lower edge of the siding and the ground. This foundation detail is visible on all elevations.

On the north elevation, there is a one-story, hip roof porch with four square support posts. The porch foundation consists of split-faced, random ashlar sandstone with a stone flight of steps centered on the north side of the porch. Two multi-pane wooden doors open on the porch, divided by the exterior brick chimney. On the second story level of the north elevation, two 6/1 double-hung sash windows are visible to each side of the chimney.

The rear elevation faces east, and is a near copy of the main façade in terms of its window arrangement. The main difference is the one-story, hip roof back porch on the left side of the elevation. The porch has been enclosed since its original construction, and was subsequently damaged by fire. At the present time, a sandstone faced concrete handicap access ramp is being constructed parallel to the back wall of the porch.

The south side elevation reveals the interior brick chimney, visible near the peak of the roof. The second story windows are 6/1 double hung sash, with two individual windows present in the left half of the wall, and a paired set on the right. On the first story, there are two sets of triple double-hung windows, with the left set composed of 9/1 sashes, and the right composed of 6/1 sashes. A basement entry is visible at the foundation level in the lower left corner of the elevation.

Garage

ca. 1934

Non-contributing Building

The garage was built circa 1934, near the end of the Great Depression, when Dr. Brown's financial situation enabled him to do so. The work was done by Dr. Brown and his sons, except for the brick laying, which was done by Jim Walker of brick manufactured by the Walker family in Summersville. Mr. Walker also laid the brick for the house, and crafted the fish design in the stone found on the side porch. Dr. Brown requested this design to display his Christian faith.

The garage is a hipped roof design with asphalt shingles. The first floor is brick, and the second floor is board and batten siding. The garage has been extended in length since it was originally built, and it is believed that the second floor and garage bay sections are later additions. Because of these modifications, it has been determined that the garage does not contribute to the Brown House's historic integrity, and is therefore considered a non-contributing resource.

The Brown House, built around 1925, is a significant location in the history of Summersville, West Virginia. The home was built for Dr. Flavius Hugh Brown, one of only two doctors practicing in the area at that time. Dr. Brown lived in the house with his wife, Elizabeth Huff, and their nine children, and remained there until his death in 1945. The property is eligible under Criterion B for Dr. Brown under Health and Medicine and Criterion C for Architecture. The period of significance is 1925-1945 for Dr. Brown's tenure in the residence.

Dr. Brown was born September 18, 1878, in Birch River, West Virginia, the son of James Frame Brown and Sally Scott Brown. His father was a Baptist minister. Flavius began his career as a school teacher in a one-room school in Beaver, West Virginia. After that, he served as a storekeeper and deputy sheriff, before attending the College of Physicians and Surgeons in Baltimore, Maryland from September 1907 to May 1911. He put himself through school with the five hundred dollars he made from the sale of his house in Craigsville, and a loan of fifty dollars from his sister. After graduation, he and his family returned to Craigsville, where he began his first medical practice in the front rooms of their house in the center of town. They moved to Summersville a few years later, where he kept his office on Main Street above Stower's Meat Market.

The Summersville area was steadily growing during this time period (there were approximately 100 residents in 1884; there were 700 residents in 1930). Most residents were farmers, as agriculture was the primary industry in Summersville at that time. As there was only one other doctor in the area at that time, and the closest hospital was in Richwood, Dr. Brown was kept very busy, and served quite a large area.

During the years Dr. Brown practiced medicine in Nicholas County, he often traveled to more remote areas to see patients; areas including Birch River, Dixie and Upper Glade were mentioned in diaries kept by Mrs. Brown. On Sunday afternoons, he made house calls to home-bound, chronically ill patients. Often he visited his patients on horseback, and at times he was known to stay overnight when performing deliveries. Later he drove his Chevy to visit patients, many times having to meet a patient's family member on a farm tractor who would take him the rest of the way when the road got too rough for a car.

Dr. Brown made a practice of giving free physical exams to young men playing high school sports, and treated their subsequent injuries free of charge as well. Since there was no hospital in Summersville at this time, referrals were sent to Richwood or to Charleston. Throughout his practice, he never refused a patient who was unable to pay cash for medical services. He often accepted payment in country eggs, homemade butter and breads, and once even a truckload of coal. This method of payment, while convenient for the patient, led to additional sacrifices to be made by Dr. Brown and his family. During the Great Depression, two of his children had to drop out of college temporarily due to lack of money to pay tuition.

The strong character of Dr. Brown and his family is also evidenced in the fact that all of Dr. Brown's children attended and graduated from West Virginia University—a significant achievement in itself. Even more impressive is the fact that four of these children went on to become doctors, like their father, and three others became dentists. It is not surprising, then, that Mrs. Brown was named "Mother of the Year" for West Virginia in 1949. The accomplishments of this family are evidence of the hard work, qualities and values that the people of this time period possessed.

The architecture of the house itself is significant to the area because it was an unusually high style for a residence of that time period. Summersville's residences were primarily smaller houses, as opposed to the larger Neoclassical Revival house owned by the Browns. It was a residence well-suited for a prominent doctor and his family. According to a study done regarding the condition of the house, it is still in good structural condition for a building of its age. It stands today as a reminder of the class and caliber of the family that it housed.

At the present time, the house is undergoing exterior cosmetic renovations and interior repairs to the areas that were damaged by a fire. It is hoped that, upon completion of these repairs, the home can be used as a community gathering place. Its location, near the heart of town makes the house an excellent candidate for this function.

For Summersville residents, the house represents the values and determination of one of the founding families of our town, and of others from times past, and perhaps inspires us to show that those qualities are not forgotten.
