Narrative Description

(Describe the historic and current physical appearance and condition of the property. Describe contributing and noncontributing resources if applicable. Begin with a summary paragraph that briefly describes the general characteristics of the property, such as its location, type, style, method of construction, setting, size, and significant features. Indicate whether the property has historic integrity.)

Summary Paragraph

West Fork Butte Lookout is a 1931-pattern L-4 Lookout House located atop West Fork Butte, overlooking the Lolo Creek drainage. Unlike most lookout houses, West Fork Butte is built directly on the ground. The area within 100 to 150 ft. of the lookout in all directions consists of bedrock talus. Dense mixed stands of even-aged lodgepole pine and mixed stands of pine and fir end abruptly at the edge of the talus below the lookout house.

Narrative Description

West Fork Butte Lookout (contributing building). West Fork Butte Lookout is a 14 ft. by 14 ft. wood frame building with a pyramidal roof, constructed on a mortared stone foundation. Simple drop wood siding covers the lower portion of the exterior walls, and the roof is covered with sawn cedar shingles with metal ridge caps. A new stainless steel stove pipe extends above the west slope of the roof. The entry into the lookout house is located at the west end of the north wall, and contains a wood door with four lights above two panels. A ribbon of four, nine-light windows are located above the wall east of the entry. The remaining three walls each contain a ribbon of five, nine-light window sashes, two of which slide sideways allowing ventilation. Original exterior shutters cover the windows on the west and north walls and three of the five windows on the east wall. Guy wires extend from the four corners of the roof and are anchored in the talus.

The one-room interior retains its original maple floor. The building's current furnishings reflect its use as a cabin rental. A prefabricated stone hearth has been added to the southwest corner of the building to accommodate a wood stove. Other furnishings include a small propane cook stove, two sets of bunk beds, a storage cabinet, and a wood box.

Storage Shed (contributing structure). A rectangular, wood-frame storage shed is located about twelve feet south of the lookout, adjacent to the east side of the pedestrian trail. This structure, measuring 3 ft. by 5 ft. 9 in., is built on a foundation of poles that are balanced on the underlying talus rock. The shed roof is covered with sawn wood shingles, and the exterior walls are covered with tongue-and-groove board siding with vertical corner board trim. A vertical board door at the south edge of the west wall provides access to the interior, which is used to store propane tanks that fuel the stove in the lookout. A gas pipeline extends from the rear of this small building to connect with the lookout house. Guy wires anchored in the talus are attached to both sides of the structure.

Pit Toilet (noncontributing building). A modern pit toilet is located about 250 feet south of the lookout, within a stand of lodgepole pine on the south side of the lookout spur road. This is a small, wood frame building with a front-gable roof. The exterior walls are covered with boards and battens and the roof with green fiberglass panels. A new board-and-batten door is located in the north wall. This pit toilet appears to be in approximately the same location as the one located there during the historical period.

Telephone Poles (counted as one contributing structure). In addition to the lookout house, shed, and toilet, two log telephone poles are located in the vicinity of the lookout house—one adjacent to the southeast corner of the lookout and one about 70 feet south. The latter has been sawn off, while the latter appears to be its original height (about 15 ft.) The pole bases are buried in the talus rock. The poles represent the original line of communication to the lookout during the period of significance.

Statement of Significance Summary Paragraph (Provide a summary paragraph that includes level of significance, applicable criteria, justification for the period of significance, and any applicable criteria considerations.)

West Fork Butte Lookout is eligible for listing in the National Register of Historic Places under criteria A and C, at a local and state level of significance. Under Criterion A, it is significantly associated with the US Forest Service's early fire detection program, which relied on a series of fixed lookout points from which to locate forest fires. Under Criterion C, West Fork Butte Lookout is an excellent example of a 1931-pattern L-4 Lookout House displaying the engineering and architecture of the period.

West Fork Butte Lookout meets the Registration Requirements set forth in the L-4 Fire Lookouts in the USFS Northern Region (Region 1), 1932-1967 Multiple Property Document under the contexts The Role of the L-4 Lookout House in the Development of the US Forest Service Region 1's Fire Detection System and Fire Lookout Development on the Lolo National Forest, and the L-4 Lookout property type. The period of significance identified for this property extends from its construction in 1934 through 1967, the end of the historical period; it conforms to the MPD cover context period.

Narrative Statement of Significance (Provide at least one paragraph for each area of significance.)

The Lolo National Forest built West Fork Butte Lookout in 1934, possibly with CCC labor. After inspecting the lookout in 1936, R. E. Fields reported that it was in good condition, with a solid “concrete and rock foundation.” He found the lightning protection and telephone installation to be adequate, noting that West Fork Butte was connected via a spur telephone line with Skookum Butte Lookout, the latter located about twelve miles southwest on the Montana-Idaho state line.¹ The only deficiency that he noted was that the shutters had only temporary safeguards from the wind, noting that more permanent protection was required. He approved of the lookout’s location, noting that:

There are a few snags and some down timber within 200 feet of the lookout house. There is little danger of losing this observatory by fire, except by flying sparks, and I am not sure that a clean-up of small trees, logs and snags for a 200-foot radius will accomplish any purpose. The observatory is located on a mass of rock. There is not fuel within 75 feet.²

The only real problem noted by Fields was the construction foreman had dynamited the Geological Survey in order to build the lookout, and had not relocated it prior to destroying it.

In 1940, C. D. Blake conducted another inspection of the lookout:

After studying both the point and mapped seen area coverages, I consider this a good lookout for Lolo Creek drainage, especially for detection in the area north of Lolo Creek.

Although Blake stated that the point was “well improved,” he felt that the lookout house should have been built on a 15 or 20 ft. tower, which would have improved the lookout man’s ability to detect fires “under slopes close to the point.” Lightning protection was adequate as was telephone installation, other than some connections on the “telephone terminal pole.” Blake noted that the point had a new weather station that was “creditably done.”³

The Lolo continued to use West Fork Butte periodically through the end of the period of significance. However, it appears to have been downgraded to an “emergency” lookout sometime prior to 1967, as it is not included among the lookouts manned during that year’s summer fire season.⁴ Its use as a secondary lookout point continued through the 1980s.

In the mid 1990s, volunteers under the direction of Missoula District personnel replaced the lookout’s cedar shingle roof. In 2001, a new door was built for the lookout using a historically accurate pattern, and in 2012, James Davis from the Missoula Ranger District conducted a variety of preservation maintenance tasks including: priming and painting the exterior walls and shutters, and repairing, re-glazing and repainting the lookout windows. Abstract/Summary Comments: The West Fork Butte Lookout is of state level significance under National Register Criteria A and C in the areas of Conservation, Politics/Government, Architecture and Engineering. The modest, 14' x 14', wood and glass building represents an excellent example of a 1931-pattern, L-4 type Forest Service lookout, in this case set atop a stone and concrete foundation directly on the bedrock talus. The 1934 lookout is associated with the Forest Service's significant, early twentieth century fire detection and conservation programs. The property meets the Registration Requirements of the associated MPS.
