Section number 8 Page 1 Fish Cabin at White Rock Shoals

SIGNIFICANCE

SUMMARY

The Fish Cabin at White Rock Shoals is significant at the state level under Criterion A for its association with the pre-World War II commercial fishing industry in Charlotte Harbor. The building contributes to the Fish Cabins of Charlotte Harbor Multiple Property Group under Associated Historic Contexts: Commercial Fishing Industry of Charlotte Harbor, c. 1920 - 1941, and Associated Property Type: Fish Cabins of Charlotte Harbor, c. 1920 - 1941. It is an example of the sub-type, Residential Cabins.

HISTORICAL SIGNIFICANCE

The Fish Cabin at White Rock Shoals is associated with events significant to the history of the Charlotte Harbor commercial fishing industry, one of the largest fishing operations in Florida prior to World War II. The building provided a home away from home for fishermen who were on extended fishing expeditions. This form of housing allowed the fishermen to stay in the vicinity of the fishing grounds, rather than travel long distances to their homes on the mainland.

The fish camp buildings of Pine Island Sound, where this cabin is located, were constructed in the early 20th century by the Punta Gorda Fish Company. The company built a series of stilt houses throughout Charlotte Harbor and Pine Island Sound. The buildings were used as residences for fishermen, ice houses, and served assorted functions related to the fishing industry such as the mooring of skiffs, drying and cleaning of nets and the storage of fishing equipment.

The Fish Cabin at White Rock Shoals represents a specialized form of architecture designed to meet the specific needs of the Charlotte Harbor fishing industry. Built on pilings above the water, it is made of simple, available materials that could be transported to the site for construction. The cabin was designed to be lifted off its pilings and moved to more abundant fishing grounds, if necessary. While strictly vernacular in form, it is constructed of the most durable materials available, that of heart pine and cypress, in order to withstand climatic extremes.

Verbal Boundary Description

Boundary only includes the platform supporting and surrounding the building. The pilings supporting the structure (platforms inclusive) are not included.

See continuation sheet

Boundary Justification

Boundary lines are drawn to include only those portions of the site designed as a part of the mobile building, which is treated like a vessel. Pilings are a consistent renewable resource and do not merit inclusion in the boundary.
