Four years after the founding of Assumption Church in 1856, the growing pains of the new parish necessitated the building of a parish school. Prior to this time children from Assumption parish attended sessions in one storey of a brick building on the Saint Joseph's Hospital grounds which was used for the English speaking free school connected with the Cathedral parish. In 1860 a frame school building was erected at Ninth and Exchange Streets at a cost of $400.00. This building was destroyed by fire on 4 July 1863. It was replaced by the present stone building in 1864 at a cost of $11,300. Originally intended to focus on education for the children of German speaking parishioners, as the inscription in German over the main entrance attests, the building soon outlived usefullness and discontinued to be used as a school in 1888. Until then strict segregation of students was practiced, the two rooms on the ground storey assigned to boys, the second storey assigned to girls.

The Assumption School remains as a significant element in Saint Paul's architectural, religious, and educational heritage. An excellent example of an early Italian Villa Style school building, it is the only such extant parochial school building of the 1860's in the Minneapolis/ Saint Patal area.
