8. Significance: Mauricio Portillo, an early settler of the area, came from Mexico, probably Chihuahua. About 1890, he built the house which forms the center of this complex; it meets Criterion A as a prominent reminder of the early settlement of Grant County. The house belongs to a group of hip-roofed, center hall plan houses which have been studied in Southern Arizona but only noted in southern New Mexico. As a result, the house may offer important information on the spread of this house type across the Southwest. The adobe barn is the largest in the valley and has a unique ventilator wall. Both the house and barn meet Criterion C as excellent examples of their respective types. Together with one shed, the house and barn form one of the most important historic farmsteads in the valley, which as a result, meets Criterion A as a reminder of the historic importance of agriculture in the valley.

10. Geographical Data: Approximate Acreage: less than one.

Quadrangle Name: San Lorenzo, N.M. Scale: 1: 62,500

UTM References: 13 226700 3631100

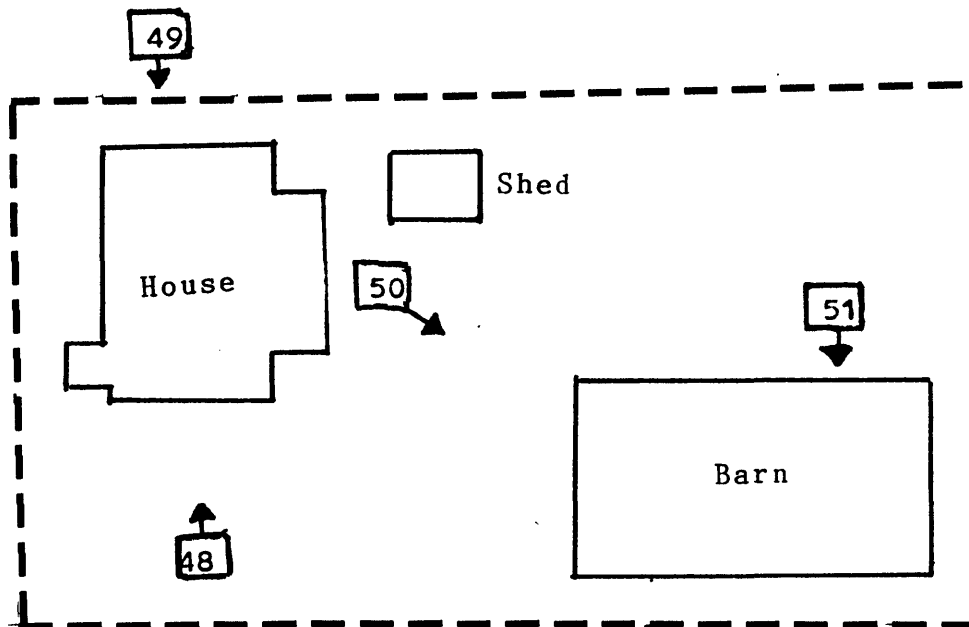

Verbal boundary: A rectangle, roughly 140' by 70', as shown in map 11, formed by lines parallel to and ten feet from the north and east sides of the house and the south and west sides of the barn. Since this is an unplatted area, this boundary has been created to include only the house, barn and garage.
