DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Williamson Price House is a five-bay, one-and-one-half story brick structure, two rooms deep on either side of a central hall (photo 1). A four bay section off the right rear room was once a separate kitchen, later connected to the main house (photo 2). There are four end wall and one interior chimneys in the residence, constructed on a stone foundation. The facade of the main section is in the Flemish bond brick pattern while sides, rear and the one-story section are in common bond. On the main section, the first and fifth bay are slightly recessed (5 inches) from the central bays. A one-and-one-half story added gable, in common bond, forms the central bay with a four-over-four window over a one-story pedimented portico which is supported by four square wooden columns and two pilasters (photo 3).

The front door is an unusual seven panel one (three and three vertical over one horizontal) with four lights on each side, reeded pilasters and an elliptical fanlight over the door with eleven radiating sections which contain original glass (photo 4). The rear entrance has the same seven-panel door as the front, original glass in a transom of four lights and sidelights with five lights each (photo 5).

Windows are six over six in both front rooms and in the right rear room of the main section, while the left rear room has nine over nine and the kitchen section windows are six over six, though smaller than in the main section. Three dormers have been added to the half story in the rear of the house.

Interior door with panels in the Cross and Bible motif, familiar in Fayette County, are six and one half feet high opening into thirteen foot ceiling heights in the rooms and the hall. There are reeded door jambs from all rooms to the hall and between rooms where walls are one and one half feet thick. Window jambs in the front rooms are reeded. A simple, narrow quarter turn staircase with high risers, rectangular spindles, round handrails and square newels, is located to the left and rear of the central hall(photo 6).

A breakfront shelf tops the mantel in the front right room where end tablets are adorned with a vertical diamond and the central tablet contains a horizontal diamond in low relief. The mantel in the right rear room has a breakfront shelf, a paneled central tablet with an oval in low relief and ovals on the end tablets. Six-panel double presses with beaded fanlights above are on either side of the mantel in the left front room. The mantel has a half sunburst in the central tablet and small full sunbursts on the end tablets (photo 7). There are chairrails in all rooms except the left rear room.

The boundaries of the nomination were created to include the front yard down to Liberty Road and a small portion on the sides and rear of the building, including the curving drive which encircles the house. It is this portion of land which is important to the visual integrity of the early Kentucky residence.

BUILDER/ARCHITECT

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Elegantly situated on a lovely knoll surrounded by splendid, stately trees, the Price home is an excellent example of early Fayette County architecture. Functional and simple in design with unusually fine interior woodwork, the home was a marvelous setting for the Price and Christian families who occupied it in the nineteenth century. It provides for viewers today a fine key for understanding and appreciating the pioneering spirit of these families who helped build the wilderness into a cultural and economic mecca and establish the finest traditions of the Blue Grass.

The house was probably built by Williamson Price ca. 1810 on the site of an earlier pioneer cabin called "Buckeye Cabin." The land on which the cabin stood was part of a 1784 Virginia land grant to Cobel Wallace. Price lived there with his wife, the former Ann Starks, who was the daughter of a well-known Lexingtonian, Captain John Starks. Captain Starks was a Revolutionary War veteran whose Federal townhouse still stands on the southeast corner of Market and Mechanic Streets in Lexington in the Gratz Park Historic District.

In 1840, a prominent local merchant, Thomas Christian, purchased the property which included this house and another Price house on several hundred acres of land. A member of an early pioneer family, he was the son of William Christian and Anna Henry Christian, the sister of Patrick Henry. Thomas was married to Harriet Washington Berryman whose mother was the grandniece of George Washington. Thomas became an extremely successful Fayette County businessman and a large land owner. He was a merchant in Lexington and in Athens, Kentucky and at one time owned 1200 acres between Winchester and Todds Roads besides land in the two cities.

The Christian family lived in this house for a short time and then moved to the other Price house, a bit closer to Lexington, which is now in the hands of his descendant, Edward Everett Elsey. Thomas deeded this house to his son Harry and his daughter Sarah Ann (Mrs. John Gess) who eventually sold it to William Jacob. Later it was sold to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mitchell and later still, to its present owners.

The exterior of the house exhibits representative Federal features-1½ stories with fanlighted central entrance. The interior features reeded door jambs, Federal mantels and presses with beaded fanlights.
