DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (II known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Typical early Jersey farmhouse with Federal influence on original Dutch architecture. House faces south, back to road. No structural changes in possibly 150 years. Two story main section two bay. Two story extension on a lower level than main section. Both main and extension have double gable end chimneys.

According to Charles B. Hembling, building contractor, house is covered with original cypress shingles. Black asphalt shingled roof (1971) covers tin roof 75-100 years old, which covers original cedar shingles; all covering 2 room attic, beams put together with trepins, both rooms. Attic over large section possibly once used as a smoke house as there is a square space where fifth chimney may have been and old meathooks still hang from rafters.

Remodeling of the large section of the house took place sometime after War of 1812. Interior shows marked Adam refinements, unusual in a farmhouse very restrained. Large section is lined with sand and seaweed binder; small section lined with brick.

House has four self contained chimneys; 12 over 12 lights in large section, most of which are original panes and 6 over 6 lights in windows of extension.

House has center hall, Dutch doors at both ends. Floors are random width softwood throughtout, unstained and unvarnished. First floor room off kitchen has hardwood floor covering.

House has double parlors, one side of hall, kitchen and dining room, other side of hall. Upstairs has 4 bedrooms. Total of 9 rooms and 2 baths.

Basement under whole house except room off kitchen and dining room is of native fieldstone. Three chimneys with closed-up stovepipe holes in cellar.

Exposed beams in one bedroom, plastered between; ceiling of laterperiod hired help quarters has exposed beams and attic floor boards, the rest of the house has plastered ceilings from the time of early restoration - replastered in 1941. Samples of early plaster have been left in the first floor under-stairway closet and entrance to attic:
"marbleized" with high polish. Living room mantel was also "marbleized". Mantel and windows framed by fluted pilasters topped with handsome capitals.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This was the home of Colonel Asher Holmes, Revolutionary patriot, from 1770-1808 (his death). Holmes was a member of Observation and Inspection, first sheriff of Monmouth under the Republic, Colonel of the 1st. Regiment of Monmouth and State Troops, active in the Pennsylvania battle at Germantown and he sat on the Governor's Council. Holmes, a prolific letter writer, left reams of correspondence with the important figures of the emerging nation.

This is a typical early New Jersey farmhouse with Federal influence on original Dutch architecture. Two story with 2 bay main section and 2 bay extension. Both the main and the extension have double gable end chimneys. Beams put together by trepins. Main section was remodeled after the Nar of 1812. The interior has marked Adam refinements. Main section is lined with sand and seaweed binder and the extension is lined with brick.

House has center hall with Dutch doors. Floors are random-width softwood throughout with first floor room off kitchen having hardwood floor covering.

Basement under whole house except room off kitchen and dining room if of native fieldstone.

The landscape architecture is unique - according to architect Frank H. Cole, 1941, house was carefully situated on site surrounded on three sides by wooded hills, assuring short day in summer and catching the warmth of the winter sun, and right drafts to the fireplaces. House, alike front and back, originally faced south (house not turned; access changed) over-looking rolling fields down to a brook and up to the woodland atop the south hill. Because the land could not be worked early in the season (one never sees a sunrise or a sunset) or early in the day it earned the appellation "a gentleman's farm", according to oral history handed down from former owners.
