enough to handle the big coast defense guns. San Pedro generally is regarded as a maritime city. The Army is spending $310,000 there on its construction program under the National Defense Plan. The payroll at Fort MacArthur this month will be $100,000. Four hundred workers are busy building new barracks and other needed structures. Of course, Army activities are comparatively small when it is realized that the San Pedro Area is down on the defense program reaching the staggering sum of $223 million. A boom is on but the harbor city doesn't want to grow. (Turn to Page 13 for the story.)
