In plan, the building is linear along a northeast-southwest axis to fit a deep city lot. It is two stories high with an advancing wing to the left, in front elevation, wrapping around a square, three-story tower topped by a hipped roof. Visually, the main body of the house appears to be "L"shaped and defined by two intersecting gable roofs. The linear wing of the house to the rear is subordinate to this larger mass, as it is lower and the street-elevation wall plane is set back several feet. In the gable end at the front of the house is a pair of small attic windows topped by semicircular stone arches. The rest of the windows in the main elevation have flat stone lintels, and the main entrance is bridged by a larger semicircular stone arch.

The three-story tower is the most striking architectural element in this house, with a third story only accessible by a most devious route. The tower places this design in the Italian Villa mode, a fact further reinforced by the paired, round-arched windows.<sup>1</sup> It is more restrained than a usual Italian Villa design, however, as evidenced by a lack of brackets under the eaves or any surface ornamentation. Its front porch is also a typical inclusion in an Italian Villa house. It is one of very few Italian Villa designs extant in Madison.

The vast interior of the Bashford House has been converted into a rooming house with thirteen separate units, of which the majority are single rental rooms. Since the house was not converted to full-fledged apartments, much of the original scale and spacial sense still exist, and many original materials survive, including the doors, brass hardware, oak floors, plaster ceiling moldings and marble fireplaces.<sup>2</sup>

The neighboring vicinity of the Bashford House is a well-known historic area centering on the four corners of North Pinckney and East Gilman Streets one of which is occupied by this house. The other three corners are occupied by contemporary stone or brick houses of equal scale, one of which is the aforementioned Pierce House. This area was historically known as, among other things, "Big Bug Hill," intended to be a comment on the type of upper-class individuals who lived there. In 1971, the Old Synagogue was moved to a site adjacent to this area with the aid of a grant from the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The Robert M. Bashford House has local historical importance because of its rather unique, for Madison, architectural style and its associations with political leaders at the state and local levels. Further, it is one of the major ingredients in the historical area of Madison known as "Big Bug Hill," and as such is well-known and appreciated by local citizens.

The house was most likely built in 1858<sup>1</sup> by Napoleon Bonaparte Van Slyke,<sup>2</sup> a local banker and entrepreneur responsible for the construction of many of the finer midnineteenth-century houses in Madison. It was first occupied by H. K. Lawrence, another banker and a friend of Van Slyke. The most famous occupant of the house was Gov. Edward Salomon, who lived here during his tenure as the state's chief executive, 1862-64.

German-born Salomon was never elected governor, but was elected lieutenant governor under Governor Louis P. Harvey, who was drowned near Savannah, Tennessee, while leading an expedition to bring relief to suffering Wisconsin Civil War troops, and after serving only a few months in office. It was said that Salomon was added to the ticket to attract Wisconsin's heavy German vote. He assumed the state's highest office by proclamation on April 22, 1862, and his term was strongly colored by the Civil War, which had ceased being a novelty and against which state sentiment was quickly rising. Salomon dealt firmly with draft riots in Ozaukee and Door counties, enabling Wisconsin to meet its draft quota, but destroying his own political career. Three of his brothers served in this conflict. At the end of 1863, Salomon wanted to have a term in office in his own right, but the Republican convention ignored his candidacy. In 1869 he sought a U.S. senatorial seat, but was unsuccessful. That same year he moved to New York City, and in 1882 sought a post as justice in the New York Supreme Court and lost. In 1894 he moved back to Germany, where his wife died in 1899. Governor Salomon stayed there, blind and lonely, until his death in 1909 at the age of 81.3

Robert M. Bashford, from whom this house received its enduring name, was a very prominent figure in Madison from 1876 until his death in 1911. He was a University of Wisconsin law school graduate who was part-owner of the Madison Democrat newspaper. He studied law in the office of Robert M. La Follette, and was private secretary to Governor William Taylor, whose daughter he married. Bashford was city attorney from 1881 to 1886 and the mayor of Madison in 1890. He was a state senator from 1891 to

(Number all entrie	Bashford, Robert M., House

1895, and served on the State Supreme Court in 1908. In 1911, Bashford died in this house.

Architecturally, the house is most likely Madison's finest Italian Villa Style structure. It is one of a steadily-decreasing number of buildings constructed with local sandstone, of which it has been estimated less than a dozen-and-a-half remain. With the Victorian Gothic house and two French Victorian houses on the other three corners across from it, this house has a strong architectural identity in the minds of local residents.
