Describe the present and original (if known) physical appearance

The Hamilton County Courthouse is a large masonry structure, rectangular in overall shape and cross-axial in form with pavilions in each corner and a tall central tower rising from the crossing. The courthouse is symmetrical on all four facades, and is designed in a High Victorian rendition of Richardson's Romanesque style.

Hamilton County Courthouse was built in 1894 by Architect William Gray. This was the last of five courthouses in Nebraska designed by him. The brick and stone courthouse has had few alterations.

The Courthouse is located on a square block in the center of Aurora's main business district. The spired structure stands proudly today surrounded by beautiful trees and a green lawn as it did 90 years ago. The visual impact of a landmark like the courthouse is especially important in a prarie town like Aurora. It is visible from various vantage points in town as well as from several miles out in the surrounding countryside.

The three-story courthouse is constructed of masonry bearing walls with wooden floor framing. The exterior reveals the pressed brick wall with Colorado red stone at the base of the structure. The courthouse, measuring 102'-0" x 74'-5", is symmetrically arranged with a tower at each corner and a central tower of approximately 150 feet high. Each tower has a galvanized finial cap at the peak. The North and South facades have a central bay, while the East and West facades mark the entrances with a protruded gable end, Palladian windows and terra cotta accent at the corners. The round arched entries are of cut stone, supported on either side by clusters of seven cut stone Byzantine columns. The raised basement of the courthouse is identified by the rusticated base of Colorado red sandstone capped by a corbelled course The terra cotta was used generously throughout the of the same material. structure for decorative gables, keystones, corner accents, roof edge moldings and parapet caps, as will as accent ovolo molding bands around the building and towers. The high pitched roof, (approximately 12 in 12, and 24 in 12 on the towers) was originally Bangor Black Pennsylvania slate, but is now black cement asbestos shingles, (reroofing occurred in 1947-48 by Architect Frank McNett).

The interior has had few alterations. A large hallway runs through the center of the building in an East-West direction and crosses with a secondary hall under the central tower. The flooring in the hallway and vestibule is encoustic tile. The rest of the flooring throughout the building is of hard maple. The ornate woodwork of white oak in its original stained and varnished condition appears on the doors, windows, casings, wainscot, stair railings and trim throughout the entire building.

The courthouse is organized with the Executive Offices, Treasurer, Clerk, Assessor, Sheriff, and the Commissioners Hearing Room on first floor. The second floor is reserved for judicial purposes and is the location of the NPS Form 10-900-a (3-82) OMB No. 1024-0018 Exp. 10-31-84

Courtroom, Judges Chamber, Law Library and Anterooms. The caretaker's residence, restrooms and housekeeping facilities are restricted to the ground floor (basement level).

The courthouse was designed by Architect William Gray of Lincoln, Nebraska in the Richardsonian Romanesque style. The style takes its name from Henry Hobson Richardson, considered to be one of America's three greatest nativeborn nineteenth century architects (along with Louis Sullivan and Frank Lloyd Wright).

The boiler plant is located on the North-East corner of the courthouse square and is still in use. Originally there was a bandstand on top that was removed in the 1970's.

Statement of Significance (in one paragraph) .

The Hamilton County Courthouse is significant in the area of architecture for its associations with William Gray, prominent early Nebraska courthouse architect, and for being an exceptionally fine example of the Richardsonian Romanesque style applied to the "County Capital" form. Local political significance is manifest in the buildings central role as the seat of county government since its completion in 1895, both actually and symbolically.

The Hamilton County Courthouse was built in the 19th century. It is significant both architecturally and politically to the 9,301 residents of Hamilton County.

The Hamilton County Courthouse, as we know it today, was actually the third courthouse constructed for Hamilton County. The first courthouse was built in 1870 in Orville City, the County Seat at that time.

In the fifth election, Aurora finally won the battle between the two cities for the location of the Hamilton County Seat. To make the victory certain, Aurora built one of the finest courthouses in Western Nebraska. A square block was also deeded to the county around which the town was built. The building was completed in 1877 but was destroyed by fire in January 1894. The new $60,000 Hamilton County Courthouse was under construction before the end of the year.

The Courthouse in Aurora is locally significant as the seat of the county government for all of Hamilton County.

Architect William Gray of Lincoln, Nebraska, known for his competent courthouse architecture, was the architect for the Hamilton County Courthouse. He was also the architect for four other outstanding courthouses in Nebraska: Cass, 1891-92; Butler c. 1889-90 (non-extant); Johnson 1888-89; and York, 1885-88 (non-extant).

The courthouse in Hamilton County is an excellant representative example of the formal, symmetrical and symbolic courthouse which characterized courthouse construction during the period following the Nation's Centennial celebration through the turn of the century. This was known loosely as the County Capitol style, derived from the form of the Nation's Capitol with the exception of the tower, which does not imitate the dome in Washington but follows Richardsonian ideals in its design. The building is an excellant Nebraska example of the Richardsonian Romanesque style. A comparison could be made with Gray's other courthouses in Nebraska, two of which were "County Capitols" in style. Hamilton County's is the best of his in the Romanesque
