DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This three-story Italianate-style commercial building stands on the west side of the 1100 block of Pacific Avenue, the main business street of Santa Cruz. It has commercial space on the ground floor and vacant hotel rooms on the second and third floors. The original Hotel Metropole sign, which is approximately twenty-five feet wide, is mounted centrally atop the cornice. Running the width of the building, the cornice is supported by five symmetrically-placed brackets embellished with an acanthus design. There are twenty-four smaller brackets of a similar design beneath the cornice, as well as a closely-spaced row of dentil moldings.

Both the second and third stories display four pairs of windows, all framed with unadorned, projecting pilasters. On the third floor the outside paired windows are mounted by triangular pediments. The two central pairs of windows are topped by arched pediments. All four pediments contain large pressed-metal decorations in the acanthus design of the cornices. This motif is repeated by a single bracket centrally placed beneath each pediment. Similar brackets support the simple architraves of the second-story windows.

The second- and third-story facade is unchanged from its initial state, except for some signs of wear caused by the weather. The entrance portion of the Pacific Avenue facade is approximately sixty feet wide and fifteen feet high, and retains its original rusticated corner columns. When in operation, the hotel was entered at the south end of the Pacific Avenue side of the building. The hotel doorway was flanked by the corner column and an identical column on the other side. The ground-level facade is composed of three large display windows divided by two narrow columns. There were originally three stores on the street level, each with separate entrances. Now consolidated into one commercial space, the building is entered through central, recessed glass doors. Above the store windows are three panels of small, square panes of amethyst-hued leaded glass. Long, narrow rectangular panels, similarly colored, surround the small panes. Between the decorative glass above and the windows below are three retractable striped awnings still in use. The original low wall beneath the store windows has been covered with 30s-era tile. With these slight modifications, the street facade remains unchanged.

The building is of wood frame construction with a cement plaster finish on the Pacific Avenue facade and brick masonry walls at the rear and along the south side. A 1940 addition at the rear of the 1908 building is reinforced concrete with steel interior columns and wood floor and roof systems.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Hotel Metropole was constructed in 1908 for Duncan McPherson by contractor Charles Kay. McPherson was the editor and publisher of the newspaper, the Santa Cruz Sentinel, and owner and developer of several parcels of significant real estate on Pacific Avenue. Its site was formerly the location of architect John Morrow's house. McPherson purchased the property in 1905 from Henry Rhein, who owned the Virginia House hotel next door. The building was sold by McPherson's heirs in the 1920s to the Favormán family, who in turn sold it to Aaron Cohen. Cohen's widow, Lena, kept the property until 1965, when it was purchased by the Baldocchis. The following year it was sold to Thea Roberts. Harold and Barbara Morris, the present owners, bought the Metropole in 1976.

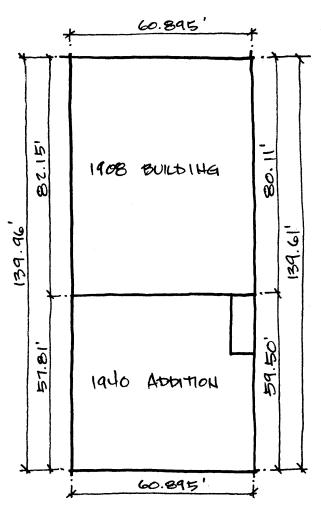

In addition to the hotel, which offered forty-eight "furnished rooms for transient and permanent guests" at fifty cents per day, the building also housed a millinery, the offices of C. W. Waldron, a partner of McPherson's, and the C.O.D. Grocery. The hotel changed names twice, to the Hotel Al Rose in 1935 and to the Hotel Drake in 1946, and was occupied continuously until 1961. The ground floor commercial space was consolidated in the thirties for the use of the National Dollar department store, which operated until 1976. Currently, the building houses Plaza Books / Paper Vision.

The Hotel Metropole is a unique Santa Cruz example of turn-of-the-century commercial architecture in the late Italianate style in which pressed-metal ornamentation replaced the more costly and fancy Victorian plaster work it often copied. The four pediments atop the third-story windows, and the acanthus design cornices are particularly handsome. The building is an important part of the physical fabric of the Pacific Garden Mall and contributes to the historical continuity and sense of urbanity along the street. In addition to its inherent architectural value, the building also contributes significant scale to this portion of the street, which is much broader than the tight portion of Pacific Avenue at its northern end.

The Pacific Garden Mall is designated as an historic area in the Preservation Plan of Santa Cruz. By resolution of the City Council on September 24, 1974, the Historic Preservation Plan was adopted as an element of the General Plan of the City of Santa Cruz.
