ARCHITECTURAL SIGNIFICANCE of area. (Describe physical setting, general character, and architecturally significant structures).

The Highlands Historic District is a 145-acre area (including North Park) with 322, mostly residential structures bounded roughly by Cherry Street on the south, Lincoln Avenue on the north, June Street on the west, and Winter Street on the east. The premier 'boulevards' were and are the two dominant north/south streets--Rock Street and Highland Avenue--the Highland boundary extends all the way to Weetamoe Street.

The Highlands housing stock dates almost exclusively from 1840-1925--affluent urban housing, designed with lots on high ground averaging 10,000 sq. ft., often enclosed by granite retaining walls and elaborate iron fences. The large, single-family dwelling dominates the Highlands. With its connotation of 'suburban' spaciousness, it remained popular to the end of the area's development.

The real impetus for development came in the 1840s, after the major downtown fire (1843) when the wealthy industrialists began to move up the hill, away from downtown expansion. Four temple-fronted Greek Revival structures reflect the earliest period of development.

HISTORICAL SIGNIFICANCE of area. (Explain development of area, what caused it, and how it affected community; be specific).

The area known today as the Highlands was farmland in the eighteenth century known in the 1840s as the Rodman Farm when large lots were sold off to major industrial magnates. One house, at 96 French Street (c.1750), a small, simple intact 3-bay gambrel cottage--the Church-Tory House--is the only building that pre-dates the Highlands' major period of development.

The first mansions on the hill were not built in the latest fashion, but nearly a decade behind nearby Rhode Island---Greek Revival temple-fronted houses with cupolas, affording magnificent views to the bay. Of the three original known temple-fronted houses attributed to Russell Warren, probably the region's most important architect of the period, one survives - the Carr-Osborn House. The houses are slightly retardataire; after the disastrous fire in 1843, most of the rebuilding took place later that year, with the majority of buildings rebuilt in the same style -- Greek Revival; thus very few Italianate houses were built before 1850. Of the three Durfee-built mansions -- the Carr-Osborn House at 456 Rock Street (already listed in the National Register) survives. Perhaps the best of the three was the Dr. Nathan Durfee's estate (pictured on the border of the 1850 Walling Map) which stood regally at the head of Rock Street at Prospect. Durfee was a powerful local figure--whose shady dealings regarding his mill interests caused his downfall. The house with its hyphens and outbuildings, rare flower gardens--he, like most wealthy men of his generation--dabbled in horticulture. When the house was sold and taken down in 1881, lots were sold for houses and Rock Street was extended northward. This allowed for 1884 exuberance--eclectic High Victorian houses of the newly arrived merchant class and some of the "diehards" who had not moved up to the district yet.

ARCHITECTURAL (Continuation)

By far, the most outstanding is the Carr-Osborn House (c.1842) at 456 Rock Street, which has already been listed in the National Register individually. A few more moderately pretentious dwellings began to appear in the late 1850s and early 1860s. These new styles rejected the standards of 'clarity and order' -- the ideals upon which the Greek Revival was based, in favor of a new emphasis upon irregular massing and intricate detail. The Highlands' elaborate, late-nineteenth century domestic architecture is the visible manifestation of this Victorian-era fondness for picturesque effect. The early Victorian dwellings of the late 1850s and early 1860s are designed in the Italianate, Bracketed and (less common) Gothic styles. The most familiar of a broad range of early Victorian stylistic choices--these styles were popularized in Fall River, as well as much of America, by the architectural critic and horticulturist, Andrew Jackson Downing (1815-1851) by means of his widely read, house-plan books, Cottage Residences (1842) and The Architecture of Country Houses. An excellent but rare example of the Gothic Revival is the Remington-Borden House (c.1858) at 511 Rock Street.

Among the Highlands' larger early Victorian houses, Italianate dwellings predominate. The houses are mostly clapboard, boxy structures with low hip roofs with wide projecting eaves. The Borden-Durfee House (c.1850), with its eaves trimmed with console brackets and molded window caps, is an excellent example of the style, at least some of whose elements can be found throughout the district. The later Bracketed (less pure) style remained popular through the turn-of-the-century. Many otherwise nondescript structures were given a semblance of architectural distinction by the application of these inexpensive ornaments that became available on a mass-produced basis in the latter half of the nineteenth century.

The domestic architecture of the Highlands between 1865 and 1900 forms a veritable catalog of late Victorian architectural taste. Characteristic of the larger houses of the 1870s was the use of the mansard roof. Despite the mansard roofs, these houses are still basically typical Italianate or Bracketed structures. The most exuberant pattern-book examples are the Rachel Trafford House (1880-82) at 375 Rock Street and the Azariah S. Tripp House (c.1878) at 389 Rock; paired, next to each other, they form a strong visual focus on lower Rock Street. The detailing, sometimes Italianate, is often replaced by a far more eclectic decorative vocabulary. Although the houses contain a combination of some authentic details, other elements retain the proportions but little of the form of genuine historical detail and are far more purely inventive. This same supremely rich and showy trim can be seen in many of the other elaborate dwellings of the same period without the mansard roof. Although most popular in the early 1870s, mansards continued to appear sporadically as late as the 1880s and 1890s. During this period another variety of house appeared, which contrasted sharply with the mansards in its predilection for irregular house forms and decoration which asserts rather than belies its wooden-character, "Stick" Style dwellings with widely projecting eaves, low gable roofs and heavily decorated gables, verandas, and balconies. 'Stick' or 'Eastlake' trim transmogrified (largely through the use of chisels, gouges and lathes) simple structures through the application of open-work friezes along porches, curved brackets, wherever possible--many of the motifs borrowed from furniture, including knobs of various forms and decorative elements consisting of circular perforations.

After 1880 the same interest in surface variety found full expression in the Queen Anne. Irregularity of plan and massing and variety of texture and color characterize the Queen Anne style.

Between 1880 and 1910, Queen Anne dominated design in the Highlands. These large Queen Anne residences have irregular plans and steep roofs broken by gables and dormers. The pattern of protruding and receding wall planes, a combination of clapboard and plain or variegated shingling with lattice-work and turned post porch trim.

The later Queen Anne residences are less exuberant, more subdued, regular in plan, although many still have notable turrets.

Very few true Shingle Style houses were built in the Highlands. Several are evocative--quieter and simpler than Queen Anne with more horizontal emphasis and less variety in color and texture. The Shingle Style is more an Americanization of the Queen Anne here--with the same fluidity of the skeletal massing. Two good examples are the two surviving houses designed by Wm. Walker & Son: the Edward Brow House (1892) at 526 Highland Avenue and the Byron Anthony House (1889) at 527 Rock Street.

Just before the turn-of-the-century, the full-blown Georgian Revival, both Neo-Adamesque Federal and Neo-Colonial, became popular. Rectangular in plan with a minimum of projections and a symmetrical facade; roofs are hipped, double-pitched or gambrel with classical detail at the cornice line. Hipped roofs are topped by flat decks with railings and chimneys set symmetrically. The facade may project slightly and can be topped by pediment.

In the first decade of the 20th century the astylar houses have lower roof pitches and extensions kept to a minimum--simple boxes with restrained decoration--half Queen Anne, half Colonial Revival.

The 1920s and 1930s were the final years of large-scale home-building in the Highlands. Although the watered-down Queen Anne and other astylar houses remained popular, bungalows and Dutch Colonials also became common.

HISTORICAL SIGNIFICANCE (Continuation)

The Highlands in terms of its population was dominated by the native Yankees, the descendants of old New England families--these upper-class residents were typically industrialists. Not until the late 1880s and 90s did it become at all heterogeneous--with wholesalers, retailers, cotton and insurance brokers, and managerial personnel residing in the Highlands.

In typical classic fashion, the highest south-facing part of the city became the home of Fall River's newly wealthy mill-owners. This move to a strictly residential neighborhood was in marked contrast to the pattern a decade earlier, when owners lived close to the factories clustered at the falls and in the heart of downtown.

The Highlands began and remained the seat of upper-class visionaries and their tight-knit descendants, who lived comfortably in Victorian mansions behind elaborate fences, in sharp contrast to the mill environment that shaped the rest of the city. The Highlands provides a rich visual catalog of Victorian architectural styles, with the majority of the houses within the district of such high quality that, if they existed in isolation, they would be individually eligible for the National Register.

The Highlands District meets criteria A, B, and C of the National Register (1) for its role in the post fire redevelopment of Fall River, (2) as the home of scores of Fall River's leading businessmen and venture capitalists, and (3) as a rich visual catalog of high style Victorian architecture, including the work of the nationally known architect, Russell Warren.

Dear Property Owner:

MASS. HIST. COMM.

We are pleased to inform you that the property you own is located in the Fall River Multiple Resource Area, Fall River, Massachusetts.

The district will be considered by the State Review Board for nomination to the National Register of Historic Places. The National Register is the Federal Government's official list of historic properties worthy of preservation. Listing in the National Register provides recognition and assists in preserving our Nation's heritage. Enclosed is a copy of the criteria under which properties are evaluated.

Listing in the National Register provides the following benefits to historic properties:

- Consideration in the planning for federally assisted projects. Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act of 1966 provides that the Advisory Council on Historic Preservation be given an opportunity to comment on projects affecting such properties.
- Eligibility for Federal tax benefits. If a property is listed in the National Register, certain tax provisions may apply. The Tax Reform Act of 1976 as amended by the Revenue Act of 1978 and the Tax Treatment Extension Act of 1980, and the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981, contain provisions intended to encourage the preservation of depreciable historic structures by allowing favorable tax treatments for rehabilitation, and to discourage destruction of historic buildings by eliminating certain Federal tax provisions for demolition of historic structures. Beginning January 1, 1982, the Economic Recovery Act replaces the rehabilitation tax incentives available under prior law with a 25% investment tax credit for rehabilitations of certain historic commercial, industrial and residential rental buildings. This can be combined with a 15 year cost recovery period for the adjusted basis of the historic building. Historic buildings with certified rehabilitations receive additional tax savings because they are exempt from any requirement to reduce the basis of the building by the amount of credit.

Dear Ms. Weslowski:

I was surprised to receive your letter of August 26, 1982, advising Charlton Memorial Hospital that structures on properties owned by the hospital and located at 243 and 273 Highland Avenue, Fall River, Massachusetts were being considered by the Massachusetts Historical Commission for nomination to the National Register of Historic Places when the above structures are no longer standing on the identified locations.

The structure located at 243 Highland Avenue was demolished on March 28, 1981 and the land cleared for use by Charlton Memorial Hospital.

The structure located at 273 Highland Avenue was removed and relocated to 514 Hanover Street, Fall River, on May 11, 1982. Again the land was cleared for use by Charlton Memorial Hospital.

I am enclosing for your review a copy of a plot plan outlining the properties presently owned by Charlton Memorial Hospital of Fall River, Inc. that included plots which were previously identified as 243 and 273 Highland Avenue. Future development of Charlton Memorial Hospital projects the procurement of all properties within the area bounded by Prospect Street, Highland Avenue, Highland Place, and Prospect Place (outlined in red on attached plot plan). Because this area is included in future planning, Charlton Memorial Hospital feels that any structure within the above described area (even though not presently owned by Charlton Memorial Hospital) should not be considered for nomination to the National Register of Historic Places.

It must be pointed out that within the area outlined in red, Charlton Memorial Hospital has already purchased twelve (12) pieces of property; of this number, six (6) structures that exhibited outstanding architectural qualities were removed and relocated to other sites within the city of Fall River. The remaining structures were demolished or scheduled to be demolished because of poor condition or other factors that proved relocating was not feasible.

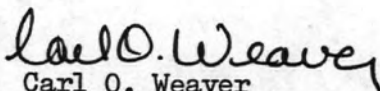

Massachusetts Historical Commission

I would hope that my comments reflect a position that Charlton Memorial Hospital would make every effort to provide for the relocation of structures from hospital property that meet registration requirements while expressing an objection to having any land area within the present and future site of Charlton Memorial Hospital listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

I would appreciate hearing from you if it is necessary that a notarized objection must be submitted to your office on the land presently owned by the hospital.

Sincerely,

THAT YOUR LISTING OF JUNE ST., WINTER ST.

"PROBLEM AREAS" MAY PREJUDICE THEIR INCLUSION
IN THE PROPOSED HISTORIC DISTRICT.

I PERSONALLY HAVE IDENTIFIED OVER 200
BUILDINGS IN THE AREA OVER THE PAST 10 YEARS, AND I FEEL THAT THE BOUNDRIES OF
THE HISTORIC DISTRICT SHOULD INCLUDE THESE AREAS, INsofar AS THEY ACCURATELY REFLECT
THE FULL EXTENT OF THE SINGLE FAMILY

ANY OTHER BOUNDARIES ARE ARTIFICIAL, AND COULD ONLY JEOPARDIZE THE INTEGRITY OF

RE: 176 June Street, Fall River, MA

Dear Mr. Martin:

The above referenced property was considered for listing in the National Register of Historic Places by the Massachusetts State Review Board on October 13, 1982. After much deliberation over the significance of the building and your objection to its listing, the Board voted that it appeared to meet the criteria for evaluation of National Register nominations.

The State Historic Preservation Officer will forward this nomination to the Keeper of the National Register within the next few weeks for a final decision on eligibility. Your notarized objection will be forwarded along with the nomination. Because a majority of owners did not object to listing, the Keeper may list the complex in the National Register.

Your objection will be forwarded to the Keeper along with the nomination. If you wish, you may submit another letter directly to the Keeper: Mr. Jerry Rogers, Keeper of the National Register, National Park Service, Department of the Interior, Washington, D.C.

We sincerely hope that you will consider withdrawing your objection, since your property represents an important aspect of Fall River's history.

Sincerely,
