Narrative Description

(Describe the historic and current condition of the property on one or more continuation sheets.)

Summary: The Wendel Property consists of a residence and boathouse along the shores of Lake Crescent within Olympic National Park. The residence is a wood-frame structure designed in the Bungalow/Craftsman style of architecture. The boathouse is an auxiliary building of simple, wood-frame construction, sited directly on the lake with a connecting dock. The buildings are in good condition and there do not appear to be any alterations that have occurred to them since constructed c. 1935. The buildings have integrity of location, setting, design, materials, workmanship, feeling, and association.

Wendel Property: Clallam County, WA

Narrative Description: The Wendel residence and boathouse were constructed about 1935 on the shores of Lake Crescent, taking advantage of the views offered by the surrounding landscape. The main house is designed in the Bungalow/Craftsman style of architecture, a style popular for homebuilding beginning in the 1910s in the suburbs of cities across the country. It was also a design that lent itself well to recreation homebuilding because of the ever-present porch typical of the design. The style advocated the use of local, natural materials applied in a manner to give the appearance of a "hand-crafted" building, often using architectural details that were more decorative than functional.

The residence is rectangular in plan, 1-1/2 stories high, and set on a concrete foundation. It is built of wood-frame wall construction with horizontal clapboard siding on the lower section and wood shingles on the upper gable ends. The gable roof is sheathed with composition shingles. A shed roof addition off the north elevation appears to be original. The roof has extended eaves and decorative knee braces on the gable ends. Windows are 6-over-6, double-hung sash on the south facade; multi-paned, casement sash on the west. All the windows have plain surrounds with a decorative trim across the top. The front door is an off-center, multi-paned French door opening out onto the porch. True to the Bungalow style, the house has a full-length front porch to take advantage of the lake views and breezes. The porch is supported by decorative boxed columns set onto a low, wood-shingled wall that wraps around and connects with the body of the house. The addition of an exterior wooden stairway on the west elevation appears to be the only addition to the building.

The boathouse nearby is accessed by a wood board deck on posts that goes out into the lake and wraps around the north, east, and south facades of the boathouse. It is a simple, wood-frame structure measuring 15' x 20' and is 1-story in height. Exterior siding is board and batten and the gable roof is sheathed with composition shingles. The structure has no windows and doors are of board and battens. No apparent alterations have occurred to this building since constructed c. 1935.

The Wendel Property retains a high degree of integrity in its location, setting, design, materials, workmanship, feeling, and association, and exhibits the registration requirements identified for "Entertainment/Recreation" property types in the Multiple Property Documentation form for the Historic Resources of Olympic National Park.

SEE ATTACHED INVENTORY CARDS PREPARED IN 1982 FOR PROPERTY.

Statement of Significance:

Summary: The Wendel Property is significant for its association with entertainment and recreation activities within what is today Olympic National Park (criterion A). It is also an excellent example of the Bungalow/Craftsman style of architecture, a style that lent itself well to recreation homebuilding (criterion C). Built circa 1935, the two buildings on the property exemplify the types of buildings that were being designed and built in the Lake Crescent area for several decades beginning in the 1910s. Private individuals and groups were erecting everything from small fishing cabins to large resorts to take advantage of the dramatic scenery, recreational pursuits, and lucrative business possibilities offered by the Olympic Mountains, as growing numbers of people visited the region. The Wendel Property represents two property types identified in the Multiple Property Documentation form for the Historic Resources of Olympic National Park:

United States Department of the Interior
National Park Service

National Register of Historic Places

Continuation Sheet

Section number 8 and 9 Wendel Property: Clallam County, WA Page 2

Entertainment/Recreation and Architecture (Bungalow/Craftsman). It has integrity of location, setting, design, workmanship, materials, feeling, and association, and meets the registration requirements set forth for these properties in the Multiple Property Documentation form.

Narrative: Located on the north shore of Lake Crescent, west of the Log Cabin Resort complex, the Wendel Property is situated on some of the earliest settled land on the lake. Log Cabin Hotel (on the site of the present day Log Cabin Resort) was founded in the mid-1890s and was among the earliest resort establishments on the lake. The first primitive road to the lake terminated not far from both the hotel and the Wendel Property. Other resorts were developed throughout the area, attracting visitors and tourists from all over the country. It would be just a matter of time before individuals with the financial means would build a recreation home or cabin on small parcels platted out along the shores of the scenic lake.

The Wendel House and Boathouse were reportedly constructed around 1935. Ethel L. and Harrison E. Turneure, husband and wife, owned the property (lot 8 of Gate's Subdivision of lot 3) between 1930 and 1946 and are probably responsible for the construction of both buildings. Little is known of the social history of the property. In 1974 the National Park Service purchased the 1.33 acre Wendel Property from Arthur F. and Mary A. Wendel, who retained a 25-year use and occupancy lease at that time. It has recently been vacated.

The property's significance lies in its ability to convey the type and style of architecture that was typical for recreation homebuilding in this area of Olympic National Park during an era of resort development: Bungalow/Craftsman style. Bungalows were a preferred design and building type because of their utilization of natural materials applied in combinations for interest and variety in texture (clapboards and shingles), their comfortable floor plans with an emphasis on the indoors extending out to the outdoors and vice-versa (the porch becomes the outdoor living space), and their low construction costs (typically).

The Wendel Property is significant for its association with the theme of Entertainment/recreation and tourism at the park, an important part of the park's human history (criterion A). It is also an excellent example of the Bungalow/Craftsman style of architecture (criterion C). It is an example of two property types identified in the Multiple Property Documentation form for the Historic Resources of Olympic National Park: Entertainment/Recreation and Architecture (Bungalow/Craftsman). It retains a high degree of integrity in its location, setting, design, materials, workmanship, feeling, and association and meets the registration requirements set forth in the Multiple Property Documentation form.
