Summary

Located at the northern corner of Main and Hazel Streets in Leslie, the Columbus Hatchett House is a large two-story residence constructed c. 1910 in a vernacular interpretation of the Colonial Revival style. The house features decorative detail in the egg-and-dart molding above the window lintels, the rough-cut molded concrete quoins, and the ornate Palladian-type windows in the four projecting gable ends. There is one contributing outbuilding. The Columbus Hatchett House is in excellent condition.

Elaboration

Located at the northern corner of Main and Hazel Streets in Leslie, the Columbus Hatchett House is a large two-story residence constructed c. 1910 in a vernacular interpretation of the Colonial Revival style. The structure is constructed of rusticated concrete blocks with quoins formed by concrete blocks molded to resemble rough-cut stone. A continuous poured-concrete foundation supports the irregular plan which is covered by a cross-gable roof with a hipped-roof section integrated into the southeast elevation. The roof is clad with silver metal shingles. There is one interior and one exterior brick chimney.

The front, or southwestern, elevation is dominated by the central, two-story gable-roof projection and the full-facade, single-story porch. The hipped-roof porch also projects to accommodate the central bay and is supported by nine white-painted, non-fluted columns on attic bases. Originally, the columns featured clay Ionic capitals, however, only one survives today. Underneath the porch, there are two asymmetrically placed single-leaf doors with transoms (one in the projecting bay) and three large windows with multiple-pane, leaded-glass upper sashes (one of which is in the projecting bay). The second story of the projecting-gable bay has a flat-decked landing on top of the first-story porch that is defined by a turned-spindle balustrade. Directly above its first-story counterpart, a similar single-leaf door (though with a smaller transom) opens onto the deck. The bay is also fenestrated by a one-over-one double-hung window. Two identical one-over-one windows are symmetrically placed in the two flanking walls. Although all of the windows feature substantial concrete sills and lintels, the front and side elevation windows can also boast of ornate egg-and-dart molding across the top of the lintels.

An unusual metal boxed cornice, which appears to be original, encircles the house. At each of the four projecting gable ends, the cornice returns are curved for a decorative effect. These gable ends are filled with light-pink colored brick which contrasts with the brown-colored concrete. Each gable end is adorned with an impressive and ornate Palladian-type window.

All are in good condition with the exception of the northwestern bay window which is currently boarded over and painted white.

The northwestern bay is fenestrated by a leaded-glass type window on the first story and a conventional one-over-one window directly above on the second story. The square exterior brick chimney is located behind the rear corner of this bay.

On the rear, or northeastern, elevation a single-story, novelty sided, shed-roof addition is placed within the northeastern valley created by the side and rear projecting gables. This addition contains a single-leaf entrance and three small four-pane stationary windows. The two side walls of the projecting gables are fenestrated by three one-over-one double-hung windows. The central projecting gable bay on the rear elevation contains a single one-over-one double-hung window on each story. A historic second-story shed-roof addition is attached to the rear of the integral hipped-roof section within the valley on the southeastern elevation. Supported by simple wood posts, this novelty sided addition has an inset porch with a balustrade and two turned-spindle posts adorned with delicate brackets. This porch is accessed by a concrete and wood stairway with a modern concrete-block constructed landing at the halfway point. Underneath this addition, there is a single-leaf door with transom and a one-over-one window.

Fenestration for the southeastern elevation is composed of a one-over-one window symmetrically placed on each story of the hipped-roof section and a group of three narrow one-over-one windows on the first story of the projecting gable end with two conventional-size one-over-one windows on the second story.

The interior was not accessible.

There is one contributing outbuilding on the property. A small weatherboard-clad, gable-roof smokehouse is located at the rear (behind the eastern corner) of the house. There are also two historic retaining walls on the property that contribute to the nomination. A substantial fieldstone retaining wall, with a set of seven concrete stairs leading to the sidewalk, parallels the street in front of the house. At the rear of the house, a shorter concrete retaining wall is situated directly underneath, and to either side of, the front elevation of the smokehouse.

The Columbus Hatchett House is in excellent condition.

Significance

The Columbus Hatchett House was constructed c. 1910 by Columbus Hatchett and M. Shannon with concrete blocks fashioned by Bob Hardin. When completed, Columbus Hatchett's new home was undoubtedly the finest expression of Colonial Revival architecture in Leslie. The use of Tuscan porch columns, quoins, and ornate Palladian-type windows in the gable ends are typical Colonial Revival details, while other ornamentation, such as the egg-and-dart molding above the window lintels, the turned-spindle balustrades, and the cast concrete blocks, are more reflective of the aesthetic tastes and skills of the local builders. As such, the Columbus Hatchett House is eligible under Criterion C with local significance.

Verbal Boundary Description: ___ See continuation sheet.

Beginning at the northern corner of Main and Hazel Streets, proceed northeast along the curblineline of Hazel St. to a point formed by the intersection of said line and a line formed by the rear elevation of the smokehouse. Then proceed northwest along this line to a point formed by the intersection with a line formed by, yet 10 ft. from, the northwestern elevation of the house. Then proceed southwest along this line to the intersection with the Main St. curblineline. Then proceed southeast along the curblineline to the point of beginning.

Boundary Justification: ___ See continuation sheet.

This boundary includes all of the property historically associated with this resource that retains its integrity, including the house, smokehouse, and two retaining walls.
