DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Terminal Hotel is a three story, rectangular commercial structure of yellow-brown brick. Windows, twelve over one lights, have stone lintels and key stones. Quoining on corners stops just below the frieze line and bares at this point a metal "key" motif. There is a metal cornice above the first story. A stone course line separates the first and second floors. A cornice of dentils with ogee mold above crowns the building. The first story has stone capiteled pilasters between sheet metal infill. A single metal column marks the northwest corner.

A variety of colored ceramic tile patterns cover the floor on the first story. Other floors are wood. Walls are plaster. On the second floor is a setting room separated from the hallway by Tuscan columns. Doors opened from this room to a balcony now removed.

The current owners plan an adaptive restoration which will include replacing storefronts and balconies. Early photos will be used as documentation.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

initial
The location of the Terminal Hotel makes it significant. It is located in a deteriorated commercial area, two blocks from the Zeb Ward Building (now pending in Washington), and across the street from Little Rock's MoPac Station (listed in the National Register of Historic Places). The restoration of the Terminal Hotel will help to stabilize the area.

It is architecturally significant in that it represents railroad hotels of its era and because of its fine metal cornice and little interior alteration. It is the last of even hotels which served the MoPac station.

Interview with Charles R. Owen, February 9, 1978.

The Terminal Hotel is a three story, commercial structure of the Neo-Colonial style. The hotel is rectangular in plan with a flat roof below a short parapet wall finished in terra cotta coping. Windows, twelve over one (12/1) lights have splayed stone keystones and stone lintels. A metal ogee cornice separates the first and second stories, and a stone course line separates the second and third stories. Corners above the first story are quoined and under the architrave in stone motif of crossed "keys." Within the frieze area are filigreed cast iron vent covers. The building is topped in a box cornice with dentils below and ogee mold above. The first story has stylized stone capitated pilasters, and a single metal column marking the northwest corner. The structure is finished in yellow-brown cinder brick.

Storefronts have been removed and infilled with sheet metal. Below the three-part opening centered in the second story was a balcony.

A variety of colored ceramic tile patterns cover the floor on the first story. Other floors are wood. Walls are plaster. On the second floor is a sitting room separated from the hallway by Tuscan columns. Doors open from this space to the now removed balcony.

The current owners plan a restoration which will include replacing the storefronts and balcony.

SPECIFIC DATES c. 1905

BUILDER/ARCHITECT

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Terminal Hotel is an architecturally significant Neo-Colonial Revival structure as evidenced by the regularity of its massing. This style represents a rejection of the broken geometry of Victorian architecture and a return of the ordered symmetry of the Georgian Colonial period. The detailing, also, alludes to this earlier period with its dependence upon a classically correct dentiled cornice, quoined corners and splayed keystone. The stylized columns denote a more twentieth-century approach to classical design.

The Terminal Hotel was constructed in 1905 as a railroad hotel. It is sited across Victory Street from the MoPac Depot. In 1906 the original station was razed and a Second Empire was constructed on its site. This structure was replaced in 1920.¹ The railroad, first known as the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Railway, was well into the twentieth century the main artery for the distribution of immigrants and freight through the Great Southwest Territory. The Terminal is the sole survivor of seven (7) hotels which served this depot. With the decline of rail passenger service, through the advent of the airplane, this urban hotel lost prestige; until now it stands abandoned.

REDEVELOPMENT

The Terminal, with the help of a HUD insured loan and a possible Historic Preservation Grant, will be rehabilitated into low and moderate income apartments. The Capitol Zoning Commission² is working to develop the area by "reinforcing the transitional character of existing use (light industrial, offices, commercial) with emphasis on housing potential."³

¹ MoPac Station added to the National Register 6-17-77, Architecture and Commerce.

The hotel is the only survivor of ⁷¹⁻⁷
several which served the flow of commerce and immigrants through the midwest during the first two decades of this century. I would be delighted to see the hotel located on the USGS map as requested on 8/22/78

Dear Bill,

Enclosed is the new nomination for the Terminal Hotel. Please substitute it for the one now in your office. The UTM is not complete but is with the old nomination, as are the photoes.

The structure is one of the thirty semi-finalist for the Challenge Grants; when you have made your evaluation, please notify Bill Brookover, HCRS.

Thank you for all your, time, trouble, and consideration over this nomination. I will be very interested in your reaction.
