Dillon Downtown Historic District
Name of Property
Dillon County, South Carolina
County and State

The Dillon Downtown Historic District is a collection of seventy-five commercial buildings in the downtown area of Dillon, South Carolina, a small railroad-centered town in the agriculturally-based Pee Dee region of the state. The district is centered along the town's Main Street and the east and west sides of the railroad corridor, along MacArthur Avenue, Railroad Avenue and West Harrison Street.

Sixty buildings contribute to the character of the historic district while fifteen are noncontributing. The contributing properties represent the development of the downtown as a center of commerce in Dillon and the county seat of the newly-formed Dillon County in 1910. The properties were constructed between ca. 1903 and 1948 with the majority constructed between 1903 and 1946.

The historic resources in this district are representative of commercial, institutional and governmental architecture in many small towns in rural South Carolina, especially in county seat towns that developed in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. The commercial area features either one- or two-story brick buildings with first-story glass and metal storefronts, second-story double-hung sash windows, brick panels and corbeled cornices. Many of them retain their original storefront openings and forms, though not their original materials, but storefronts do not determine the contributing or noncontributing status of buildings in the district. Most buildings retain the original elements of the upper portion above the first-story storefront, whether one- or two-story buildings. Several buildings have had their facades altered by the addition of metal or wood/composition-shingle awnings, or the infill of second-story windows. Though the cumulative effect of some alterations classify fourteen buildings as non-contributing, in most instances such alterations do not impair either the individual buildings' architectural integrity or the historic district's ability to convey its character from the period of significance.

One property that anchors the west end of the historic district and identifies Dillon as a seat of county government in South Carolina is the Dillon County Courthouse, at 301 West Main Street, a large brick and limestone embellished neoclassical edifice designed by Atlanta-based architect and Darlington County native William Augustus Edwards. Constructed in 1911 following the establishment of the county the previous year, it was listed individually in the National Register of Historic Places on 30 October 1981.

Several other representative historic resources define the architectural character and significance of this district.

Perhaps the three most significant and visible properties are the Atlantic Coast Line/Seaboard Air Line Railroad Station, at 100 North Railroad Avenue, the Bank of Dillon, at 101 West Main Street, and the Anderson Brothers Bank, at 100 North MacArthur Avenue [corner of East Main Street]. The railroad depot, constructed in 1905 at the junction of the Atlantic Coast Line Railway and the Seaboard Air Line Railroad, is located at the center of the district and retains its characteristic hipped roof and flared eave supported by elongated brackets, cross-gable at the station master's bay, decorative roof vents, windows and entrances. The Bank of Dillon, built in 1910 according to plans by Montgomery, Alabama, architects Edward Okel, Jr., and Carl B. Cooper, this bank and office building was contracted at $20,000, and retains its monumental pilastered elevations at the corner of West Main Street and South Railroad Avenue. The Anderson Brothers Bank building, remodeled in 1935 according to plans by Lafaye & Lafaye, prominent architects of Columbia, is essentially intact from that time, with its monumental "Tower of the Winds" Corinthian columned façade and glazed terra-cotta tile-enhanced window surrounds.

The sizable commercial building at 207 West Main Street was built in 1903 as a grocery, but for many years housed a local hardware store, with the upstairs serving briefly before 1911 as the Dillon County Courthouse. The building, an excellent example of a two-story commercial building in Dillon's downtown area, retains its second story paired windows with peaked lintels accented with a white corbeled band, zig-zag corbelling and white brick corbeled cornice.

The Evans Pharmacy, at 120 West Main Street, was built ca. 1908 and still boasts its upper floor paired and tripartite windows and white glazed terra-cotta cornice and accents. Also a corner building, the wraparound storefront was re-faced with black structural Carrara glass by the post-World War II period.

Another two-story building that helps define the district's character is the Dillon Theater, at 114 North MacArthur Avenue. Constructed in 1919, the theater and its neighboring commercial building at 112 North MacArthur were remodeled ca. 1935 in a Spanish Colonial Revival design motif by Robert S. Lafaye, of the Columbia architectural firm of Lafaye & Lafaye. The theater retains its Moorish architectural vocabulary.

Of particular interest is the ca. 1928 Coca-Cola Building, at 102-104 West Harrison Street, adapted from the standardized designs produced by Atlanta architect Francis Palmer Smith. This two-story, hip-roofed structure retains its cast stone entry surround, terra-cotta signature plate, metal-framed hopper windows, and modillioned cornice.

Character-defining one-story buildings with excellent integrity in the historic district include the G.H. Bell Jewelry Store, at 104 North MacArthur Avenue, constructed in 1908; the ca. 1910 Bracey Furniture Building at 209 North Railroad Avenue; the ca. 1946 Lemmon Building at 301 and 303 East Main Street; and the 1948 Lee Building/Piggly Wiggly Grocery Store at 226-228 East Main Street.

The following properties contribute to the character of the Dillon Downtown Historic District:

1. Dillon County Courthouse, 301 West Main Street, 1911

Individually listed in the National Register of Historic Places on 30 October 1981 (Courthouses in South Carolina Designed by William Augustus Edwards Thematic Resources).

2. 217 West Main Street, ca. 1940

One-story brick construction, yellow running bond. Two separate storefronts. Left: Cornice of dentil contrasting brick headers. Recessed entry with flanking display cases. Right: Parapet wall and rectangular pediment capped by contrasting brick header cornice. Recessed nameplate triangle with decorative angled concrete block rows at each corner. Lower level had glass double entry doors flanked by display windows. Matching masonry bulkheads. Fluted pilasters on each side of storefront. Continuous suspended metal awning units over both storefronts. Originally Dillon Motors, Inc., currently houses Singer and a Mexican grocery.

3. 206-210 West Main Street, 1941

Two-story running bond brick construction. Four brick pilasters divide façade vertically into three bays. 206 West Main Street, Central bay: Entry door with transom to upper level blocked, upper level window boarded. Right bay: Two upper level windows boarded, blocked storefront cornice, two glass display windows, double entry doors on right, transom above. Originally these two separate storefronts were the "Cottingham Building" occupied on lower level by Allen Stores, Inc., a branch grocery and on the upper level by insurance agents and attorneys. Southern Finance presently occupies the building. 210 West Main Street, Left bay: Upper level window boarded over, lower cornice blocked, suspended metal awning. Central bay: Entry door with transom to upper level blocked, upper level window boarded. Originally part of the "Cottingham Building" with the lower level part of a branch grocery store, currently occupied by Mishue Jewelers.

4. 207 West Main Street, 1903

Two-story brick construction with storefront level subdivided into two separate area businesses. Two-tone masonry, decorative cornice of cream corbelled brick with widely spaced medallions below soffit of cornice. Deep triangular continuous band of corbelled brick across the façade provides transitions to shallow recessed table in upper façade. Five regularly spaced pairs of 1/1 windows. Each pair joined under a triangular masonry arch. This is topped by a continuous band of light brick supported by decorative inverted corbelled triangles of brick on each side of every pair of windows. Storefront cornice spans width of façade under corbelled masonry stringcourse. Slightly projecting horizontal band below. Left side of storefront has centered double plate glass doors with transom, large glass display window on left and divided plate glass window on right. Second level entrance is centered between the two storefronts. Originally the first floor was wholesale grocery. From 1913 through the 1950s it was a hardware store. During the 1930s a cannery was operated in the back of the building as a project of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration. The upper level served as the Dillon County Courthouse until 1911. After that the upper level served as a meeting place for the local Masonic lodge, Woodmen of the World, and other organizations.

5. 203-205 West Main Street, ca. 1920

Two-story brick construction with replacement Roman bulkheads. Building has the look of two identical storefronts separated by a thick brick pier. Continuous dentil cornice with corbelled brick fascia forming square masonry decorative medallions beneath architrave. Storefronts each vertically halved by brick pilasters resulting in four regular bays. The upper level of the façade is further divided by an area of raised brick in the center of each bay that runs from the architrave to the belt course. Each bay has two segmented arched window openings. The left four have been boarded; the right four have replacement glazing systems of 18 panes, removable muntin and mullions. Recessed storefront cornice. Left storefront has one central glass and metal entry door flanked by plate glass display windows. Separate canvas awnings over each storefront. 205 West Main Street was originally Gaddy Motor Sales and Service featuring the first body shop on a second floor utilizing a car elevator. 203 West Main Street was originally Dillon Electric & Furniture Company; both addresses are currently occupied by Nelson's Hardware.

Two-story brick construction with stucco on upper level facade and vinyl clad roof addition. Slight rectangular pediment with one layer concrete cornice. Upper level divided into 3 equal bays by fluted pilasters based on belt course. Each bay divided horizontally into two tables, the lower 3 slightly recessed. The upper center table bears the legend "The McRae Building" and the date "1996" (it originally read "1941" but was replaced when the building was extensively remodeled). Tall storefront cornice, suspended metal awning spans facade. Lower level facade has double entry doors with transom of glass and metal slightly left of center. Display windows to left and right of center doors. Brick bulkhead. First Avenue facade has large display window with metal canopy. Unarticulated boarded windows. Two fluted pilasters, corbelled dentil cornice. Originally a general store and for many years Kornblut's Department Store. Currently vacant.

7. 129 West Main Street, ca. 1920

Two-story brick construction. Decorative masonry cornice. Masonry framed signage table. Continuous suspended metal awning. Paneled transom infill. Inset entrance. Flanking plate glass display cases. Masonry bulkheads. Originally dry goods and furniture company, then the site of the Piggly Wiggly Grocery Store. During the 1930s the second floor was part of the Dillon Hotel. Currently vacant.

8. 127 West Main Street, ca. 1903

One-story brick running bond construction. Rowlock capping cornice course. Suspended metal awning. Glass and metal door with transom on left. Plate glass display window on right. Masonry bulkhead. Originally Peter's Drug Store. Currently occupied by World of Faith Church.

9. 120 West Main Street, ca. 1908

Two-story brick construction in modified Flemish bond. Elements of Italianate style present. Facade framed by 2 projecting brick pilaster and slightly projecting concrete cornice. Rectangular pediment. Dentil water table with green metal medallions. Pilasters decoratively capped with concrete finials. Horizontal tile banding and decorative panels on upper pilasters. Blue and white terra-cotta garland panel in the Della Robbia tradition in place of name plate framed by masonry and 4 terra-cotta tiles. Triple upper story central window with double flanking smaller windows. Concrete and masonry wall sill, green decorative blocks at upper window corners. Storefront cornice demarcated by header and rowlock frame punctuated by square green metal decorative blocks. Lower facade faced with black-pigmented structural glass. Recessed glass and metal door with transom. Two small display windows to left, two large plate glass windows to right. Entrance to upper story at far right. Recessed wood door. Suspended metal awning spans facade and wraps around corner. Ghost signage on storefront cornice. N. First Ave facade: There are seven sets of 1/1 windows with concrete wall sills on the upper level with decorative rectangular and square terra-cotta tile pattern band above. Decorative voussoirs and keystones above lower level doors and windows. Originally occupied in 1910 by Evans Pharmacy, the City offices of the Mayor, Clerk and Magistrates were on the second floor. Edward Jones, Inc., presently occupies the building.

10. 117 West Main Street, ca. 1935

One-story brick construction. Stone capping cornice. Lower storefront has paneled facing surround a centered glass and metal door with transom flanked by 3 tall narrow ribbon windows of plate glass on each side. Windows/doors slightly recessed. Panel-faced bulkhead. Originally the site of a general store and millinery on the lower level and the Dillon Hotel on the second level. Present building was originally occupied by the Royal Café and is currently occupied by Delta Loans.

11. 115 West Main Street, ca. 1903

One-story brick construction with rowlock cornice. Recessed table for signage in upper facade. Lower facade has paneled facing surrounding a centered glass and metal entry door with transom flanked by plate glass display windows. Window/door system slightly recessed. Running bond. Panel-faced bulkhead. Originally a general store, now occupied by Dollar Deal.

12. 113 West Main Street, ca. 1903

One-story brick construction. Faced with large white tile panels on upper facade and side pilasters. Framed by narrow red tile. Individual letter signage above lower level storefront. Double entry doors off center to right. Three plate glass display windows on left, one to right. Glass transom over door. Window and door system recessed. Originally a dry goods store, then a five and ten cent store. In 1942 the Firestone Home and Auto Store opened and it remains in the same building today.

Two-story brick construction, running bond. Continuous brick cornice with dentils. Upper level facade divided by brick pilaster. Brick rows step down to recessed table level. Each side has five single-hung 2/2 windows topped by a flat French arch and a contrasting stone keystone. Brick wall sashes. Renovated lower facade includes entry to the upper floor from the street level at far left. Two sets of double doors and a virtually uninterrupted span of plate glass display windows, all covered by a suspended metal awning. Originally occupied by a grocery and dry goods business, the building is now occupied by Citi-Trends, a clothing store.

14. 110 West Main Street. ca. 1903

Two-story brick. Elaborate two-tone detail in masonry. Façade bracketed by two brick pilasters constructed with red brick stretchers, dark contrasting brick flare headers and green closures and light rusticated stone bases & square terra-cotta medallions. Simple layered cornice broken by a small brick visual pediment framing a square terra-cotta date plate. Top quarter of building devoted to decorative brickwork. Rectangle framed red soldier and stretcher courses. Corner treatments are square terra-cotta medallions. Inner frame of dark headers, row blocks with smaller square terra-cotta corner treatments. Central triangle within is defined by rectangular terra-cotta tiles and contains two diamond shaped terra-cotta medallions. It is flanked by two similarly defined squares containing one diamond shaped terra cotta tile. Upper level fenestration observed by signage. Nameplate paneled over. Renovated lower level with entered recessed entry doors flanked by sidelights and display windows. Originally part of The Moore Company, the building became the site of the Evans Pharmacy for many years. M & G Furniture presently occupies the building.

Two-story painted brick construction, running bond. Dentil header row indicates cornice. Slightly recessed frieze. Three regularly spaced rectangular boarded windows with rowlock sills. Soldier course above lower facade. Transom of small square glass panes across storefront facade of predominantly original glazing. Centered plate glass display case. Entry door on right, glass and metal. Recessed transom, left sidelight. Canted display case on left. Entry door on right storefront. Glass and metal with transom and right sidelight. Recessed canted display case to right of door. Although, originally a bank, the building was occupied for years by Dillon Pharmacy. The Fashion Tree, a women's clothing store, presently occupies the building.

Two-story brick. Shallow masonry dentils at cornice. 106 West Main Street: Two-story brick. Shallow masonry dentils at cornice. Upper level divided into two slightly recessed tables articulated by stepped masonry at top. The window opening is centered in each table with a slight segmented arch. Openings are currently boarded over. Lower level consists of deeply recessed entry shifted left of center. Double entry doors with transom and sidelights. Display windows angle back toward doors as well as address the street. Far right quarter of lower facade is paneled over. Suspended metal awning spans façade. Built in 1910 as part of the Moore Buildings, which sold dry goods. This

Dillon Downtown Historic District
Name of Property
Dillon County, South Carolina
County and State

The Dillon Downtown Historic District is significant under National Register Criterion C as an intact collection of buildings associated with the commercial growth and development of the town of Dillon, from ca. 1903 to 1948. The historic district is also architecturally significant as a typical example of commercial development and evolution in a small Southern town in the agriculturally rich coastal plain or Pee Dee section of South Carolina during the first half of the twentieth century. The district's buildings reflect the one- and two-part commercial blocks found in towns throughout the nation and represent stylistic influences ranging from late Victorian period examples displaying elaborate brick-corbeled cornices and pediments to the more simplified and minimalist Depression-era examples with typical low relief detailing and vertical piers. The 1911 Neoclassical or Beaux-Arts Dillon County Courthouse, corner stores and banks featuring Classical Revival vocabulary, the brick depot, other highly decorative buildings, as well as modest but intact commercial stores help to define and anchor the district along both the town's Main Street and its intersecting railroad corridor.

The district is also significant as an illustration of the commercial development of the town of Dillon between ca. 1903 and ca. 1940, a period of growth and prosperity in a town whose success was based on its role as an agricultural market for such cash crops as cotton and tobacco.

The City of Dillon, chartered in 1888, developed around agriculture and the railroad. The town rose from marsh and swamp to fulfill the vision of John W. Dillon, for whom the city is named. Plotted around the train station, the design included an extremely wide main thoroughfare with oak-lined avenues. The town radiated from railroad rights of way as the new transportation era arrived. In 1905, the original frame station was replaced with the brick station and it is currently in use today by CSX and Amtrak. The earliest buildings housed businesses supporting the agricultural economy: tobacco and cotton. Banks, cotton mill, tobacco warehouses and hotels as well as the businesses necessary for living in a rural area began to thrive. Homes and churches were built. The first graded school was built in 1896 and is still in use today. Dillon County was established in 1910 from the northern part of Marion County, and the town of Dillon became the new county seat. The population of Dillon at that time was 3,000. The business of government joined the growing community and in 1911 the Dillon County Courthouse, designed by William Augustus Edwards, was completed. By 1913 more than fifty percent of the commercial buildings contributing to the character of this historic district were standing. The commercial architecture of downtown Dillon reflects the growth of a turn-of-the-century railroad community. Impressive buildings such as the Bank of Dillon, designed by architects Edward Okel, Jr. and Carl B. Cooper in 1910, took the place of frame structures. In 1935, H. H. Anderson hired Lafaye and Lafaye of Columbia to redesign three properties: the Anderson Brothers Bank, the Dillon Theatre and adjoining offices. Each building appears to have good overall integrity from the district's period of significance. In 1989, the theatre underwent exterior refurbishment while the interior was adapted to use for live theatrical productions.

The Federal Emergency Relief Administration operated a cannery in the building at 207 West Main Street during the Great Depression. By 1940 the population of Dillon had grown to 5,072 and sixty-one of the sixty-six contributing buildings in this district had already been erected. The remaining five were built extending Main Street to the east and west. The Works Progress Administration (WPA) assisted in the construction of the Dillon County Agricultural Building in the Art Moderne style in 1941.

Verbal Boundary Description

The boundary of the district is shown on the accompanying map "City of Dillon Downtown Historic District," drawn at a scale of 1" = 225'.

Boundary Justification

The nominated property includes sixty contributing properties and fifteen noncontributing properties along East and West Main Street, North and South Railroad Avenue, North MacArthur Avenue, and West Harrison Street in Dillon, primarily along both sides of Main Street and Railroad Avenue. This district is centered along Main Street and along Railroad and MacArthur Avenues on either side of the railroad tracks, illustrating the significance of Main Street and the Seaboard Air Line Railroad/ Atlantic Coast Line Railway in the establishment, growth, and commercial development of Dillon. It includes the historic downtown area as it developed between ca. 1903 and 1948 and is the commercial core of Dillon. The entrance into the town from the west on Main Street is dominated by the Dillon County Courthouse, in the block bounded by West Main Street, South 3rd Avenue, West Hampton Street, and South 5th Avenue. The northern and southern boundaries of the district are generally the back property lines of the historic resources facing East and West Main Street, North and South Railroad Avenue, North MacArthur Avenue and West Harrison Street. The eastern and western boundaries of the district begin with the Dillon County Courthouse on the west and end with the 300 block of East Main Street on the east.
