Continuation SheetSection number 7 Page 1Description

The Harvey Lea House is a one-and-one-half story, wood frame Craftsman residence. It features an essentially rectangular plan covered by an intersecting gable roof. The roof material is composition shingles, the walls are sheathed in weatherboarding, and the continuous foundation is constructed of brick.

The eastern or front elevation consists of a central doghouse dormer and a recessed porch below. The dormer is lighted with three four-pane fixed wood windows and decorated with exposed beams, exposed rafters, triangular knee braces and applied stick detail. The porch is supported on four sloping wood box columns which are connected with a wood balustrade. The recessed porch continues around to the south side, resulting in an asymmetrical house block beneath the porch. The central stair to the front of the porch leads to an entrance directly behind. To the north, three four-over-one wood sash windows light the interior. To the south, the porch continues around to another entrance in the center of the rear wall.

The northern elevation is composed of the gable end, a slightly projecting shed roof bay, the side wall of the rear gable roof ell, and the side of the lower rear gable roof wing. The gable end is fenestrated with a central pair of four-over-one wood sash windows in the pediment and a single central window of identical configuration below. The shed roof bay is lighted with three of the same type of window, and the rear side wall is lighted by another pair with a smaller sash window finishing this wall. The wall of the wing features a continuous screened opening. The southern elevation is similar except for the fact that the porch continues around to this side and a smaller, projecting gable end is set into the main gable end. To the west, a pair of four-over-one sash windows is followed by a single identical window, and the screened porch in the lower rear wing finishes the wall. Both elevations are decorated with triangular knee braces and exposed rafters and beams.

The western elevation is relieved only by an entrance into the northern end of the screened wing and a pair of four-over-one wood sash windows in the peak of the principal rear gable, above the shorter wing gable. Here also the cornice is decorated with triangular knee brackets.

The Harvey Lea House has suffered few alterations of note and is in good condition.

Significance

Criterion C, local significance

The Harvey Lea House (Part E, Historic Context #4) is the best example in Russell of a one-and-one-half story, wood frame Craftsman residence. Such delicate details as the shallow exposed beam ends resemble knobs more than the ends of beams and the triangular brackets grant an impression of structure and strength. It is the combination of this typically Craftsman emphasis upon structural honesty with the irrepressible desire to ornament and beautify that elevates this design above the mundane, for it is the soaring proportions of the wood porch columns and the elegance of the simple knee braces which continually draw the eye upward and grant this design its distinction.

It is also important to note that the roofline here also is relatively steep and hence more visible to the eye than those earlier Craftsman designs; furthermore, the porch is increasingly being pulled in beneath the gable roof. As such the Harvey Lea House is typical of the second phase in the evolution of the Craftsman house designs in White County, in which the wings and appendages tend to be placed more symmetrically around the house block and beneath a single, all-inclusive roof form, despite the continuing tendency for the elevations to exhibit an asymmetrical, picturesque aspect.

Reviewer's Comments

The boundaries of this property are presently located along building lines. A resource listed in the National Register should include all features of the property which contribute to its significance. In almost all cases this includes its historic setting. Page 77 of National Register Bulletin 16, Guidelines for Completing National Register of Historic Places Forms, states that "the boundaries of buildings should include the land surrounding the building, unless the lot occupied by the building contains no surrounding land as in the central business district of most cities."

Please revise the boundaries to include the property historically associated with the resource. If a portion of the original setting has lost its integrity, please explain.
