Southwest Third and Southwest Madison Historic District
Jackson County, Missouri
Historic Resources of Lee's Summit, Missouri

Summary

The Southwest Third and Southwest Madison Historic District (Photos 1-11; Figs. 1-4) is located in a residential area west of the central business district in the city of Lee's Summit, a city of 91,000 located in Jackson County, in west-central Missouri, 20 miles southeast of Kansas City. This c. 1-acre linear district is exclusively residential in character and consists of a row of six detached houses and associated outbuildings, all on the north side of Southwest Third Street. Architecturally, the properties include examples of the Prairie (Photo 9), Free Classic Queen Anne (Photo 7), and Dutch Colonial Revival styles (Photo 4), and of the American Foursquare house type (Photos 2, 5). All of the houses are contributing elements in the historic district, one outbuilding, a newer garage located at 208 Southwest Third Street, is non-contributing due to its age. The district is associated with the "Historic Resources Lee's Summit, Missouri," Multiple Property Documentation Form (NR 2005; hereafter referred to as the MPDF and incorporated by reference into this document).¹ The district meets the MPDF's registration requirements as described in Section F of the MPDF under the category Single-Family Residential Property Types, circa 1865-1960.

Elaboration

The Southwest Third and Southwest Madison Historic District is topographically flat, with well-tended yards and uniform setbacks. The six lots exhibit nearly uniform frontages and side and rear dimensions; 204, 206, 208, and 210 Third Street have 77-foot frontages, and 202 Third Street has a frontage of 83 feet. 202 Third Street has a side dimension of 150 feet, 208 and 210 Third Street have lots that are 150 feet deep and the lot at 206 Third Street is deeper than the others, at 278 feet. Southwest Third Street is asphalt-paved and street lighting relies on lighting units mounted on utility poles. Sidewalks extend along the Southwest Third Street perimeter.

The houses in the district are two- and three-stories in height. Exterior finishes include stucco, wood shingle, stone, weatherboard, and, in one instance, vinyl. Roof forms include the hipped, pyramidal, intersecting gable, side-gable, and gambrel; all roofs are clad in asphalt shingles and most roofs are penetrated by chimneys located on the gable ends or on the interior slopes of the roofs.

Fenestration in this district is nearly exclusively flat-topped, with original wood sash is characteristically intact; in some instances exterior storm windows are present. The house at 208 Southwest Third Street (Photos 3, 4) has oval art glass oculi in the pediments of its gable ends and in a dormer centered on the façade. The house at 202 Southwest Third Street (Photo 8) exhibits some transoms glazed with colored glass panels and the house at 206 Southwest Third Street (Photo 5) has attic-level windows with delicate geometric tracery.

Outbuildings associated with the district's six houses include garages dating from within the period of significance, along with one more recently-constructed non-contributing garage.

Resource Inventory

The following properties are located in the Southwest Third and Southwest Madison Historic District. The relative locations of each are shown on the district map accompanying the nomination.

202 SW Third Street; 1889; contributing (Photo 8)

A gable-front-and-wing house, this is a 2-story L-shaped National Folk-style vernacular² house of wood construction, finished in weatherboard with a full portico in the angle of the ell on the west side of the façade. The portico is supported by wood pillars with shallow paneling but otherwise lacking notable ornament. The placement of the front door suggests a central-passage interior plan. Windows are flat-topped, 1/1, with molded heads with drip labels. One window has a transom with rectilinear colored glass lights. Fixed exterior shutters are anchored outside the window frames although original shutter hinges remain.

Garage; c. 1920; contributing

1-story front-gable wood frame garage with an extended front to accommodate larger vehicles. Pediments of the gable ends are trimmed with sawtooth wood shingles.

This house was erected for Elijah Thorton Browning proprietor of the Browning Dry Goods Company and a one-time mayor of Lee's Summit. Browning (1852-1901) was from Pendleton, Kentucky and settled in Lee's Summit. His dry goods business became one of the community's leading stores in the late nineteenth century. In 1875 he married to Sally Ann Wandelohr (b. 1855); she was also known as Anna and the couple would eventually have 7, the youngest of whom, Charles, was only seven years of age at the time of his father's death. The 1904 Jackson County Atlas depicts the property and the surrounding 3.41 acres as being owned by the E. T. Browning Estate. The house remained home to his widow into the 1930s and was later occupied by Elizabeth Browning, his daughter.

204 SW Third Street; c. 1900; contributing (Photo 7)

This is an eclectic 2½-story house of wood construction, with a prominent steeply-hipped roof penetrated by a hipped dormer on the west elevation. It would meet the design requirements for what Virginia and Lee McAlester describe as Free Classic Queen Anne.³ The eaves are broad and are trimmed with a dentil band and an offset gable is on the west side of the façade, finished in decorative square-butt wood shingles and penetrated by a single-hung window with delicate geometric tracery similar to that found in a dormer next door at 206 SW Third Street. The first story is finished in conventionally-dimensioned weatherboard and the second in narrower weatherboard, providing the building with a distinctive multi-faceted finish. A hip-roofed veranda wraps around a portion of the façade and east elevation and is supported by slightly battered wood posts with caps and is enclosed within a paneled solid wood balustrade. The corners are finished with stylized pilasters with plain caps and a finish board extends around the house between the levels of the first and second story. A single-story bay window is on the west elevation and a 2-story bay window is on the east elevation. Windows are flat-topped with some exhibiting replacement sash. Bands of original decorative windows are on both the first and second story.

At the rear of the lot is a side-gable-roofed 1½-story outbuilding with a center gable on the façade and overhead garage doors.

206 SW Third Street; 1904; contributing (Photos 5, 11)

² The term "vernacular" as it is used here conforms to the definition Ward Bucher's Dictionary of Building Preservation: "a building built without being designed by an architect or someone with similar formal training; often based on traditional or regional forms." This term is not to be interpreted as a pejorative, since so many more buildings built nearly everywhere reflect local building traditions and the skill of local builders rather than the work of formally-trained architects.

Distinctive 2½-story American Foursquare with the first story finished in random ashlar stone with grapevine mortar joints. The upper story is finished in original square butt wood shingles. A hip-roofed stone porch extends across the 2-bay façade and extends eastward to form an open patio. An oriel window is located part way up the east elevation, likely opening onto a landing within. A 2-story porch is on the rear (north) elevation. On the façade, the hipped roof is penetrated by a hipped dormer with paired windows incorporating delicate geometric tracery similar to that found in a window next door at 204 SW Third Street.

This was the home of Willis Browning, one of Elija Thornton Browning's sons, who was associated with his father's dry goods business.

208 SW Third Street; 1924; contributing (Photos 3, 4)

Dutch Colonial Revival style wood frame house of two stories with a side-gable gambrel roof penetrated by three substantial gable dormers on the façade. Each of the dormers has partial returns of the cornice and the centermost, the largest, has a 3-part window above which is an oval oculus glazed with art glass. The exterior surfaces are of weatherboard on the first story and wood shingles on the second. Partial returns of the cornices are on the gable ends which are penetrated by two windows on each floor. In the pediments of each gable end is another art glass oculus, matching that in the dormer on the façade. The main entrance is centered on the façade, with a modest frontispiece, and is flanked on each side by oriel windows, each with three 9/1 windows. A non-historic deck enclosed within a board enclosure is on the rear. This was the home of Joseph H. Powell.

Garage; c. 1980; noncontributing

This is a non-historic side-gable-roofed wood frame garage with two overhead garage doors, one larger than the other.

210 SW Third Street; c. 1910; contributing (Photos 1, 2)

2½-story stucco-finished American Foursquare with a nearly square footprint and a flared hipped roof penetrated by matching flared hipped dormers. The dormers are finished in wood shingles and are penetrated by multi-light casement windows. The three-bay façade has an offset single-leaf door on the west side, flanked by sidelights. The second story of the façade is 3 bays as well, with a centered smaller 3-unit casement windows and the outer bays exhibiting conventional 1/1 sash. A gable-front arcaded front porch extends across the façade, also finished in stucco, and enclosed with a solid stuccoed railing.

Garage; c. 1920; contributing

A 1-story hip-roofed stucco-finished garage is behind the house, accessed from Southwest Madison Street. It has a single-leaf door on the south elevation and an overhead door on the west elevation.

This was the home of Thornton Browning another of Elijah Thornton Browning's sons, who was associated with his father's dry goods business.

300 SW Third Street; 1926; contributing (Photos 9, 10)

This is a 2-story nearly square Prairie-style house of wood construction finished in weatherboard, with a hipped roof and broadly overhanging eaves. The house is oriented to Southwest Madison Street but has a Southwest Third Street address. A step-shouldered painted brick chimney is on the exterior of the south elevation. Extending across a portion of the façade is a shallow-pitched hip-roofed porch, supported by paneled wood posts and enclosed within a stylized Chinese Chippendale balustrade; the porch is accessed from a set of wood steps on the Southwest Third Street elevation. Windows are flat-topped, with 4/1 and 3/1 sash, set singly and in bands. Some windows have non-historic fixed exterior shutters. A hip-roofed oriel is on the north elevation, penetrated by a row of three 9-light casement windows. Beneath the oriel is a basement-level garage, accessed from Southwest Madison Street.

Summary

The Southwest Third and Southwest Madison Historic District meets National Register Criterion C for architecture in that it consists of an unbroken row of domestic architecture representing elements of many of the architectural designs which were popular during the district's 1889-1926 period of significance. The beginning of the period of significance marks the date of construction of the earliest of the resources in the district, the Elijah Browning House at 202 Southwest Third Street and ends in 1926. The closing date refers to the date of construction of the Joseph Noel House at 300 Southwest Third Street, the most recent of the primary resources. As noted above, the district consists of six houses and four associated outbuildings and retains integrity in all of its composite qualities.

The Southwest Third and Southwest Madison Historic District is associated with two of the historic contexts set forth in the Lee's Summit MPDF. The historic contexts associated with this district are Residential Development: 1860-1960 and Architectural Styles and Vernacular Property Types: 1860-1960. The associated property type set forth in the MPDF and found within the Southwest Third and Southwest Madison Historic District is Single-Family Residential Property Types, circa 1865-1960.

Elaboration

A detailed description of the historical development of Lee's Summit and the economic and cultural forces which accounted for the community's rise are described in detail in the MPDF. Historically, much of this district is immediately adjacent to Butterfield's Addition, platted in 1909 under the ownership of Jesse Butterfield. The majority of the nominated area was not shown to be platted into lots on the 1909 plat (Fig. 4); it was referred to as "Tract A" and Tract "B." The house at 300 Southwest Third Street was built on Lot 1 of Section 1 of Butterfield's Addition (Fig. 4).

The oldest house in the district is the 1889 E. T. Browning House at 202 SW Third Street. Browning was a local business and political leader whose family members built some of the other houses within the district, hence the name by which the area has been locally known for decades.⁴

National Register Criterion and Architectural Styles

With respect to the Southwest Third and Southwest Madison Historic District, National Register Criterion C for architecture is applicable. The district contains a row of detached domestic architecture representing the Free Classic Queen Anne and Dutch Colonial Revival styles and the American Foursquare house type. As noted above, the district's properties represent the Property Type A, Single-Family Residential Property Types, circa 1865-1960, as set forth in the MPDF.

Section E of the MPDF describes the variety of architectural styles found throughout Lee's Summit. Within the Southwest Third and Southwest Madison Historic District, these styles include what Virginia and Lee McAlester describe in A Field Guide to American Houses as Eclectic Houses (1880-1940),⁵ among which are houses executed in the Colonial Revival and Prairie styles. Within this district, the Colonial Revival mode is represented by the Dutch Colonial Revival-style house at 208 Southwest Third Street (addressed incorrectly in the MPDF) and the Prairie style house at 300 Southwest Third Street. In addition, the National Folk style, as described by the McAlesters, appears at 202 Southwest

Third Street, the Free Classic Queen Anne style at 204 Southwest Third Street, and the American Foursquare house type at 206 and 210 Southwest Third Street.

Clearly, the Southwest Third and Southwest Madison Historic District and its individual components represent the property types set forth in the MPDF, retain integrity individually and as a unit, meet the registration requirement set forth in the MPDF, and consist of a district eligible for the National Register under Criterion C.

Verbal Boundary Description

The boundaries for the Southwest Third and Southwest Madison Historic District consist of that area depicted on the map submitted with the nomination documents, prepared by the City of Lee's Summit GIS Department, at a 1:100 scale.

Boundary Justification

The boundaries for this district include only that contiguous row of properties in this neighborhood which are chronologically linked and retain integrity. As illustrated in Fig. 1, the downtown and modern commercial development lies to the east and the properties which are nearby on the other sides of the nominated area date from a significantly later period and represent distinctively different architectural styles from those in the Southwest Third and Southwest Madison Historic District.

Re: National Register Historic District Nominations for three districts:

- Southwest Market & Southwest Fifth Streets Historic District
- Bayles Addition Historic District
- Southwest Third and Southwest Madison Streets Historic District

Dear Mr. Miles:

As Chair of the Historic Preservation Commission of the City of Lee's Summit, Missouri, a Certified Local Government, I am pleased to inform you that the Commission has reviewed the National Register nominations for Southwest Market & Southwest Fifth Streets Historic District, Bayles Addition Historic District, and Southwest Third and Southwest Madison Streets Historic District in Lee's Summit, Jackson County, Missouri. It is the opinion of the Historic Preservation Commission that these properties are of historic significance and we recommend these district nominations to the National Register of Historic Places.

The nomination efforts were initiated by the City of Lee's Summit, who enlisted the professional services of Taylor and Taylor Assoc. to perform the necessary tasks to file the National Register nomination. The City of Lee's Summit Department of Planning and Development has received no letters or phone calls in opposition to the proposed nominations as defined.

The above referenced documents were reviewed by the Historic Preservation Commission at their scheduled public meeting on September 24, 2012. The Commission, by a unanimous vote, recommended approval of these three National Register nominations.

Sincerely,

Kathy Smith
Chairperson, Historic Preservation Commission
