THE HEMLOCK

There are frequently a few hemlocks among the broadleaf trees throughout the forest in the Park, but on the north facing slopes that hemlocks are more numerous. The slender pennant-like tip of these fine evergreens, even at

A black and white photograph showing a road junction. In the foreground, a gravel shoulder is on the left, leading to a dark asphalt road. The road curves to the right. A sign stands on a grassy bank between the road and a dense forest of trees. The sign is dark with white text and an arrow pointing right. The text on the sign reads "ELKWALLOW PICNIC GROUNDS" with a small arrow pointing right. Below this, there is smaller, less legible text.
