Narrative Description:

The Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District is a triangular shaped neighborhood containing approximately 9½ blocks. Located on the east side of the Cedar River south of First Avenue (U.S. Highway 151), the district is situated in the middle of a large residential section of the city. The district is bounded by Nineteenth Street SE on the east side, the alley between Park Avenue SE and Washington Avenue SE on the south side, and the rear property lines of lots facing Third Avenue SE on the west side. The district includes all of Redmond Park in the southwest corner of the district and the entire site of Johnson School (between Seventeenth and Eighteenth streets, Park Ave, and Washington Avenue). Third Avenue serves as a northbound one-way collector street while all other streets carry two-way traffic. The Second and Third Avenue Historic District (NRHP) is located immediately west and south of the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District.

Most of the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District is contained within sections of Bever Park (first) Addition laid out in 1892; Bever Park Second Addition laid out in 1905; Bever Park Third Addition laid out in ca. 1909; and Grande Avenue Place Addition laid out in ca. 1909. Grande Avenue is at the heart of the historic district with its wide public right-of-way set at 100' forming a grand west entrance route to present day Bever Park, a 70-acre park located two miles east of Third Avenue and north of Bever Avenue. Houses along Grande Avenue are some of the largest in the district with an average of eight or nine houses per facing block compared to ten or twelve along avenues to the south. Park Avenue, Blake Boulevard, and Ridgewood Terrace as well as the intersecting streets were laid out with standard 80' widths. All alleys measure 20'. Block size in the district ranges from 360' x 300' to 420' x 300' with 12 to 14 lots platted on the rectangular blocks in the east half of the district. Dimensions of the triangular shaped blocks along the west edge vary in size. The northeast/southwest direction of avenues that had been laid out perpendicular to the Cedar River in the Original Town Plat was reoriented to the compass points in this area of the city. All of the streets in the district are paved in asphalt except for short sections of Sixteenth Street and Park Avenue abutting Redmond Park. Here brick pavers are retained.

The terrain of the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District slopes gently from Redmond Park in the southwest corner of the district northeast along Third Avenue SE to Ridgewood Terrace rising only 10 feet. A more precipitous incline adds 25 feet in terrain change in the final block as Nineteenth Street SE is reached. Houses are sited level with the street or on slight upgrades in most of the district with retaining walls evidenced in only the northern and northeast blocks of the district. When originally developed at the turn of the 20th century, the area consisted of largely treeless farmland. Soon after the area was developed elm trees were planted in the parking strip and by the 1940s together with plantings of sycamore, sugar maple, and oak trees had grown to form an over arching shaded corridor. Dutch elm disease decimated the elm trees by the 1960s and in the 1970s the city removed the few surviving trees. In their place, maple, linden, hackberry, and ash were planted. There is a scattering throughout the area of larger and older examples of those same species, along with sycamores. Today, the avenues and side streets are lined by a mixture of 40 to 100 year old trees measuring 50 to 100 feet in height.¹

There are no natural water features within the district. One small city park – Redmond Park – contains 1.22 acres and is located at the intersection of Third Avenue SE, Park Avenue SE, and Sixteenth Street SE. Deciduous trees and shrubs dot Redmond Park. Mature maple and hackberry may represent original formal plantings in the park, a rarity in Cedar Rapids parks. The park also contains a restored cast iron water fountain, which was reassembled from pieces found at the City Water Works and in Ellis Park in ca. 1996.

Building stock in the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District includes a mix of single family dwellings, duplexes and small apartment buildings, several large apartment buildings, and two former churches. Buildings date from 1900 through the early 1930s.

Two smaller scale churches are also situated on the west and east edges of the district. They include the former Grande Avenue United Presbyterian Church (340 Sixteenth Street SE) constructed in 1914. It occupies a prominent site at the intersection of Grande Avenue SE and Third Avenue SE. Its simplified Neoclassical Style was in marked contrast to architect Louis Sullivan's design for St. Paul Methodist Episcopal Church just three blocks away. It has a rectangular plan, a flat parapetted roof, a pedimented entrance facing Third Avenue, and no bell tower. The exterior of the building remains largely unaltered with its non-ecclesiastical design suited to its conversion to use as "Park View Apartments."

The second church in the district is the former St. John's Episcopal Church (357 Nineteenth Street SE). This Tudor Revival Style building was constructed in 1919-20 when the east end of the neighborhood was still largely vacant. During the 1920s dwellings were infilled around it. The building has a cross-gable roof and a T-plan with the long side paralleling Nineteenth Street. Half-timbering and pointed arched windows set off the stone foundation and stucco walls.

Several small apartment buildings and duplexes are scattered throughout the district. Two examples include the duplex at 1625-27 Grande Avenue SE and the Grande Apartments next door at 1633-35 Grande Avenue SE. Both properties were originally acquired by members of the Tapper family with the duplex and apartment building both constructed in ca. 1910. Common design elements including flat roofs, exposed rafter tails, knee-brace brackets, and multilight windows suggest that both buildings were designed by the same architect.

The balance of the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District contains well-preserved housing stock that dates from the turn-of-the-20th century through the 1930s. Approximately 63 percent of the houses are architecturally significant individually and another 26 per cent qualify as contributing structures within the district. Only two buildings including Johnson Elementary School are non-contributing due to their date of construction or significant alterations. The district exhibits a variety of early 20th century historic architectural styles including examples of the Colonial Revival and Craftsman styles. Most of the houses are examples of vernacular house forms commonly found in Cedar Rapids during that period and are described more fully in the historic context included in the Multiple Property Documentation Form for "Architectural and Historical Resources of Cedar Rapids Residential Neighborhoods, 1870 – 1940." The vernacular forms that appear most frequently in the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District include the Hipped Roof 2-Story or American Four-Square, Front-Gabled Roof 2-Story, Suburban Cottage, Side-Gabled Roof 2-Story, Bungalow and Bungalow Cottage, Clipped-Gable Cottage, 1½-Story Gabled Cottage, and Gambrel Cottage. Several late 1930s houses are examples of the Cape Cod house form.

Residential blocks in the district are distinguished by their large, densely spaced houses with uniform set back. Lots are deep except for corner lots where rear portions have been divided to provide housing sites facing onto the intersecting streets. The general uniformity in the neighborhood was a result of careful planning by the original developers of the neighborhood, James and George Bever through the Bever Land Company and the Park Avenue Realty Co., Malcolm V. Bolton through the real estate company that bore his name, and Mathew J. Miles.

The district's 1, 1½, 2, and 2½-story houses are constructed of frame, brick, and stucco with frame being the most popular. Wood cladding includes narrow, medium and wide width clapboard laid in various exposure patterns or decorative shingles (fish-scale, square-cut, saw-tooth, cove-cut, octagonal, or diamond-cut shapes laid in straight, staggered or wave rows). Masonry materials include dressed and ashlar stone on trim components, rusticated concrete block for foundations, and pressed brick. The most common architectural styles in the district are the Craftsman Style and the Colonial Revival Style with a wide variety of forms in evidence throughout the district.

Some of the better examples of the residential architectural styles and vernacular house forms in the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District are listed below.

The condition of houses in the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District ranges from fair to excellent with a majority well-preserved. A substantial number of residences continue as single family homes with subdivision into duplexes or apartments more common for large houses at the south or west end of the district. The most likely alteration to houses in the district is the addition of synthetic siding including asbestos shingle siding dating from the 1940s and aluminum siding or vinyl siding added beginning in the 1960s. Other changes include the removal, alteration, or enclosure of porches with screening or fixed walls, the modification or addition of entrances, and the construction of rear wings and garages. The most egregious change was the lowering in roof pitch for one Front-Gabled Roof house (1805 Park Avenue, SE). Only one instance of demolition has occurred in order to create a small parking lot (356 Eighteenth Street, SE) opposite Johnson School. The most significant change in use has seen Grande View United Presbyterian Church (340 Sixteenth Street, SE) converted to the Parkview Apartments in ca. 1957 and St. John's Episcopal Church (357 Nineteenth Street, SE) become a day-care center during the past decade.

Statement of Significance:

General:

The Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District is locally significant under Criteria A and C. Under Criterion A it derives significance under the category "Community Planning and Development." The Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District is associated with an important era of intense residential development in Cedar Rapids at the beginning of the 20th century. The blocks in the south half of the district included in the Bever Park (First) Addition and Bever Park Second Addition highlight the residential neighborhood planning efforts of James and George Bever, local land developers and bankers. Building on the real estate dynasty established by their father Sampson Bever, the brothers established a progressive model for integrating utility services, transportation services, civic improvements, and private landscaping measures in residential development. The northern blocks included in the Grande Avenue Place Addition were developed by several real estate developers active during this period including Malcolm V. Bolton, Mathew J. Miles, and the Bever brothers through the successor firm to the Bever Land Company, the Park Avenue Realty Company. Development efforts in the original Bever Park Addition were integrally connected with the controversial trial and four-year legal battle that ensued following Sampson Bever's death in 1892.

Additional significance under Criterion A derives from the fact that the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District typified the development of streetcar suburbs in Cedar Rapids at the turn of the 20th century. Its occupants represented a cross section of middle and upper income households with prominent business and professional leaders living next door to commercial travelers and railroad workers. Individuals resided in the district who were leaders in the community and made significant contributions to local industry and commerce as well as the professional and cultural life of the community.

Under Criterion C the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District is significant as a representative collection of the residential architectural styles and vernacular house forms that appeared in Cedar Rapids neighborhoods from the 1890s through the 1930s. The district retains an extraordinary percentage of its original buildings with only two non-contributing structures and one vacant lot. It is likely that the work of Cedar Rapids architects survives here as well but no specific examples have been identified. In addition to single family dwellings, the district contains several significant examples of church architecture.

No properties within the district are currently listed on the National Register of Historic Places. The Second and Third Avenue Historic District which is listed in the National Register adjoins the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District along its west edge. No significance is asserted under Criteria B or D.

The Development of Bever Park Additions and Grande Avenue Place Addition:

The Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District includes a triangular shaped area made up of ten pairs of facing blocks extending along east/west streets of varying lengths. The first area of the neighborhood to be platted and settled was the first Bever Park Addition that included several blocks in the far southwest corner of the district. This addition was originally laid out in 1892 on former farmland owned by Sampson C. Bever. Bever had acquired the property in 1851-52 when he first settled in Cedar Rapids. During his lifetime he worked as a merchant, land agent, railroad promoter, banker, and real estate developer amassing a considerable fortune in real estate and stock holdings. In 1864 along with his sons Bever formed the City National Bank which came to be known as the "Bever Bank." In future years the efforts of the bank became closely tied to the family's real estate developments with hundreds of advertisements appearing in local newspapers jointly promoting the City National Bank and real estate for sale in various Bever owned residential additions.

By the 1880s with real estate development a booming business in Cedar Rapids, Sampson Bever moved towards retirement from active involvement in the family's various businesses leaving sons James, George, and John in charge. They continued to work in establishing residential additions along First, Second and Third Avenues SE. Lots sold briskly during the decade of the 1880s as Cedar Rapids experienced what was later described as a "town lot boom."

By 1890 population in Cedar Rapids stood at 18,020 and the city saw its boundaries expand with a major annexation that same year. New manufacturing concerns, wholesale distributing operations, and brisk retail sales kept the local economy robust. With all signs pointing toward continued local prosperity, the three Bever brothers formed the Bever Land Company in 1891 for the purpose of subdividing portions of the "Beverly Farm" located southeast of First Avenue.

During this same period, the Bever brothers were involved with a group of local investors to acquire the Marion and Cedar Rapids Railway and the Cedar Rapids Street Railway. Both railways operated streetcars under horse drawn power. The group's objectives were multifold. Some hoped to improve transportation within the city limits, others to provide for a better connection to the county seat town of Marion located several miles northeast of Cedar Rapids, and still others to spur real estate development on the east side of the Cedar River. The real estate holdings of the Bever family and the newly organized Bever Land Company in the southeast quadrant of the city would be especially benefited if the efforts of the group proved successful. After considerable negotiation, several reorganizations, and a franchise buy-out, the new street railway company installed electrified lines in 1891 with one of the routes extending along First Avenue. Other routes would eventually follow along several streets through the district including portions of Third Avenue, Grande Avenue, Blake Boulevard, and Eighteenth Street.

Formation of the Bever Land Company had been well-timed to coincide with the 1890 annexation and the completion of the electric street car lines in 1891. The next year, in 1892, the company initiated its first project when it platted 323 acres of the former Beverly Farm into 167 lots as part of the first Bever Park Addition. The addition was so named for a triangular shaped park located along Third Avenue SE between Park Avenue SE and Sixteenth Street SE.

The Bevers also saw the importance in aggressively supporting public infrastructure improvements in order to promote their real estate developments as well as the community as a whole. As with their efforts to extend streetcar lines, they promoted efforts to extend city water service and sewer lines and to build parks. In addition, the Bevers undertook private improvements on land they developed. That their work was considered progressive in their day and held in high regard by their contemporaries is evident in the following description of the first Bever Park Addition.

Probably the most notable addition to Cedar Rapids which was laid out between 1880 and 1900 was Bever Park addition, platted in 1892...The plat contains 167 lots. The lots are 60 feet in width and 140 feet in depth with a 20 foot alley at the rear. Before any of the lots in this addition were sold or offered for sale the streets and alleys were brought to grade, the lots also graded as to take off all storm water and make the whole plat uniform; and sewerage and gas were put in. These preparations relieved buyers from much inconvenience. Prior to the platting of Bever Park addition no such pains had been taken by those who laid out additions to put them into attractive shape. The splendid results which followed the methods pursued by the Bever Land Company attest to the wisdom of such a course. The lots in their addition were not handled for speculation, but were sold directly to parties desiring permanent homes. Nearly all of the lots have been sold and there are now about as many attractive homes in the addition as there were originally vacant lots for a few of the lots have been divided into forty foot lots. The prices realized from lots have varied according to the location and time of sale, the minimum figure being about $500 and the maximum figure being about $1,300. Bever Park addition is one of the many monuments of the energy, enterprise, discernment and taste of George W. Bever. (Italics added for emphasis)

The Bevers used these progressive development measures for a marketing advantage. An advertisement placed by the Bever Land Company in August 1892 appears below. The ad noted the ready availability of both city water and sewer service, proper drainage, and the added convenience of electric streetcar service.

As the advertisement indicates, the Bever Land Company laid sanitary sewers in the new Bever Park Addition before they sold any lots. City Engineering Department records show that the portion of the Bever Park Addition included in the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District (one block west of Sixteenth Street SE along Park Avenue) saw sanitary sewers installed in 1894 by M.S. Jackson. No individual sewer taps were made during the next several years, however, due to pending litigation that affected the lots within the addition.

The litigation referred to above came in the wake of Sampson Bever's death in August 1892. For the next four years, two of Bever's five children contested Sampson's will because they believed that it transferred a disproportionate amount of real estate assets to brothers James, George, and John through their holdings in the Bever Land Company. Their sisters, Jane Spangler and Ellen Blake, contended that the Bever Land Company had been established fraudulently because their father was not of sound mind in 1891. They claimed that the effect of creating the company had been to divide Sampson Bever's holdings in a disproportionate manner in contrast with his wishes expressed throughout his life.

The Bever will case was brought to trial in January 1893 with spectators filling the courtroom each day to hear the sisters make their case and the brothers defend their actions. Local real estate experts were called to testify about the value of the estate including platted lots owned by the Bever Land Company, undeveloped land, and buildings owned by Sampson Bever including residences of each of his five children. More than sixty detailed newspaper accounts traced the three-week trial and the appeal of the verdict to the lowa Supreme Court. In January 1896 with the five children agreeing to divide the estate equally, the will was set aside.

During the four years the Bever estate was litigated, it appears that land sales in the Bever Park Addition were suspended. In March 1896 two months after the settlement an advertisement appeared in the Gazette stating that Bever Park lots "are on the market again. Nothing finer or more desirable in this city. April 1, 1899 showing "sold" lots, no lots in the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue District were labeled as such. Later that summer, sewer and water tap records show construction of the first house in the district began at 1545 Park Avenue, SE.

When earlier residential additions sponsored by Sampson Bever and others were laid out south of First Avenue in the 1870s and 1880s, the Cedar Rapids' grid street/avenue system was continued. This system had numbered streets parallel to the Cedar River and avenues perpendicular to the river but on a northeast/southwest compass axis. When the Bever and Higley family farms were platted into residential parcels in the 1890s and 1900s, city planners took advantage of the opportunity to reorient some of the extended streets and avenues to the north/south and east/west points of the compass. Third Avenue SE continued in a diagonal fashion as far as Nineteenth Street SE and the numbered avenues from Fourth Avenue SE through Eighth Avenue SE were turned 45 degrees and continued with east/west orientations. This decision left a predicament for street names in the triangular area north of Fourth Avenue.

As a result of this change in street and avenue direction, new non-numerical names were required for the east/west avenues north of Fourth Avenue SE. The 1892 plat for Bever Park Addition gave the prominent "Bever" name to the avenue located one block north of Fourth Avenue and "Oakland" to the next street to the north. When Bever Park Second Addition was platted in 1905, Oakland Avenue was renamed "Washington Avenue." The next avenues to the north were Park Avenue that ran along the south edge of Bever Park (later Redmond Park) and then Grande Avenue. The third and last plat included in the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District was Grande Avenue Place Addition. Located north of the Bever Park Second Addition, it contained two east/west avenues - "Blake" (named for Ellen Bever Blake) and "Ridgewood Terrace." The new intersecting north/south streets in the district were laid out in grid form continuing east from Sixteenth Street SE through Nineteenth Street SE.

As noted above, the second area platted in the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District was the Bever Park Second Addition in 1905. The responsible parties included brothers John and James Bever working through the Park Avenue Realty Company. Advertisements promoting sale of lots in this addition noted that it was "in the center of the most desirable residence district in the city" and that shade trees were located in front of each lot. Like their earlier residential development efforts, the Bever Park Second Addition had city water mains and sewers installed and both lots and streets graded. Their ads noted that Park Avenue Realty Company was prepared to build houses on monthly payments. Records show that the Bever brothers were willing to speculate in this addition themselves. More than a dozen properties list the Park Avenue Realty Co. as the responsible for securing water and/or sewer connections. This role of developer continued with the platting of the Bever Park Third Addition located south of Grande Avenue and east of Seventeenth Street SE. The development pattern in this addition which was laid out in ca. 1909 saw the Park Avenue Realty Co. initiate home construction along the more valuable lots such as those along the south side of Grande Avenue while selling off less valued lots along Park Avenue to private buyers for purposes of construction.

The last addition laid out in the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District was the Grande Avenue Place Addition in ca. 1909. After the settlement of Sampson Bever's estate in 1896, Ellen Bever Blake took on Malcolm Bolton, a local real estate developer, as a partner. Their first project was Sampson Heights Addition in 1902 located west of the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District. This partnership apparently proved satisfactory to both parties with Bolton's real estate company handling the advertisement and sales of lots. Later, Jane Bever Spangler joined Bolton and her sister Ellen in co-sponsoring the development of first the Grande Avenue Place Addition which included those blocks north of Grande Avenue between Third Avenue and Nineteenth Street and later the Ridgewood Addition that included the blocks north of Grande Avenue and east of Nineteenth Street SE.

It is not surprising that the names of "Bolton & Co.," "Barton & Bolton" or "M.V. Bolton" appeared on more than dozen properties in the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District as the responsible party for securing water and/or sewer connection records. In other cases they sold off entire blocks to individual real estate developers who either resold separate lots, sponsored the further subdivision or replatting of lots, or built and sold individual houses.

One of those developers, Mathew Miles, provides an interesting case in point. Like many other real estate developers during this period, Miles was involved in civic activities. He was elected to the first city council after Cedar Rapids adopted the commission form of city government in 1908. The following year he acquired an ownership interest in a block in the new Grande Avenue Place Addition. In May 1909 following the death of Mayor John Carmody, Miles was elected mayor by the City Council. He continued in this capacity through 1912 during which time he continued his real estate business as well. During 1909 he took out frequent advertisements touting the advantages of the Grande Avenue Place neighborhood including a half-page promotional advertisement that encouraged individuals to speculate on the potential increase in value of lots in August 1909. His advertisement cited Grande Avenue Place as "the finest subdivision in the city of Cedar Rapids in point of improvements, transportation surroundings, class of buildings, location and price." The ad went on to suggest "why not make payment now and take advantage of increase in value during next five years."

Miles' role as a developer in the Grande Avenue Place Addition involved more than advertising and promotion, however. Water connection records maintained by the City of Cedar Rapids show that during 1909 and 1910 Miles was responsible for securing water taps for 16 separate properties in the 1800 blocks of Grande Avenue and Blake Boulevard. Sewer tap connections and construction dates suggest that Miles may have been responsible for initiating construction on several houses in these blocks as well.

Ownership, water, and sewer records show that several other individuals were actively involved in the Grande Avenue Place Addition. They included Herbert R. Shafer (336 Seventeenth Street, SE; 1609, 1701, 1712, 1725, 1727 Grande Avenue, SE; and 1606 Park Avenue, SE), Frank Buser (1611 and 1615 Grande Avenue, SE), B. and D. Tapper (1625, 1633, and 1635, Grande Avenue, SE), H.L. Marshall (357 and 359 Sixteenth Street, SE; 356 and 358 Seventeenth Street, SE), and Mrs. I.C. Woodruff (1730, 1840 Park Avenue, SE). The names of these individuals also frequently appeared on sewer tap records though specific addresses are difficult to identify.

Real estate development was a boom industry in Cedar Rapids between 1900 and 1930 – the period when growth was highest in the residential sections southeast of First Avenue. Population soared 119% in three decades from 25,656 in 1900 to 32,811 in 1910, 45,566 in 1920, and 56,097 in 1930. The building of new houses in the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District paralleled the increases in population citywide. The first decade after 1900 saw the first houses to be built under the new city ordinance that required building permits for new construction and major remodeling projects. Before World War I, another regulation adopted by the City gave protection to residential neighborhoods through the zoning provisions.

Municipal parks were the other important ingredients that made the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District successful. Today's Redmond Park located immediately adjacent to the district along Third Avenue SE was originally named "Bever Park." This triangular shaped parcel includes 1.22 acres and measures 465 feet along Third Avenue, 356 feet along Park Avenue, and 300 feet along Sixteenth Street SE. It was deeded to the City in 1892 by the Bever Land Company as part of the first Bever Park Addition.

Bever Park was destined to bear the name of the Bever family only briefly, however. In 1898 a larger 70-acre park located further east on land once owned by Sampson Bever was named in his memory by the City Council. The park located at Third Avenue, Sixteenth Street, and Park Avenue was later renamed for John Redmond, the mayor and key leader in the effort to adopt the commission form of government. The park had an ornate horse-watering fountain that was removed to the Cedar Rapids waterworks site for a time and reinstalled in 1995.

War I was the presence of several churches within easy walking distance or a short streetcar commute. Two small churches were built within the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District itself during this period as well. Both were organized as mission churches with parent congregations located in other sections of the city. The Grande Avenue United Presbyterian Church was established in 1914 at a prime location opposite Redmond Park - 340 Sixteenth Street SE. The Neo-Classical Style church was established as a mission of First United Presbyterian Church. Its founding pastor was H.H. Brownell. The congregation continued from this location for more than 40 years. In the late 1950s the building was abandoned for church use and converted into the Parkyiew Apartments.

The second mission church founded in the neighborhood was St. John's Episcopal Church. Originally established as a mission or outpost of Grace Episcopal Church in 1910, St. John's was founded at the behest of James Bever, senior warden at Grace Episcopal Church. To facilitate its construction, Bever gave the new congregation a lot at 357 Nineteenth Street, SE. In 1919-20 a Tudor Revival Style church was erected. The residential neighborhood filled in around the church during the 1920s. Its first pastor was Johnson Campbell who had formerly served as a chaplain at Ellis Island in New York City.

A number of other Cedar Rapids' churches selected suburban residential neighborhoods when they outgrew downtown sites at the turn of the 20th century. Members of the Second Presbyterian Church selected a site several blocks to the south at Third Avenue and Bever Avenue SE in 1903 and changed their name to Westminster Presbyterian Church when they relocated out of the downtown the following year. St. Paul Methodist Episcopal Church began plans for their move in 1909 and finished construction of their new building by 1914. Both new locations were along the route of the streetcar line that connected the new Bever and Wellington additions in southeast Cedar Rapids to the downtown via a line along Third Avenue. As residential development continued in the neighborhood after World War I, the First Congregational Church acquired several lots at the northwest corner of Washington Avenue and Seventeenth Street SE. In 1928 they erected a new church just west of Johnson Elementary School. Still other churches built new buildings to the south along Second Avenue and Third Avenue before World War I. They included the First Church of Christian Science (1910), the English Lutheran Church (1911), the First Christian Church (1913), and the First Baptist Church (1917).

Construction of new homes in the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District as well as adjoining neighborhoods to the west and south was accompanied by the call for completion of a new elementary school. As a result in 1909 a school referendum was held in which construction of new grade school building was proposed on a parcel owned by the school district on Washington Avenue between Seventeenth and Eighteenth streets. The measure failed by approximately 50 votes on its initial vote and plans for a new elementary school were put off until the measure received approval 1910. Architects Dieman and Fiske were retained to design the new building and construction began in late 1910 on lots the district already owned. General contractor for the job was H.F. Jones. Charles Dieman and Ferdinand Fiske lived a few blocks from the new school site and H.F. Jones and his wife Alice would build a new house in the district at 1630 Park Avenue, SE (Photo #1) soon after the school project was completed.

Construction of Johnson School proceeded ahead of schedule during 1910 and 1911 with classes opening there in September 1911. Newspaper accounts had promised that the new school would be an "ornament to Washington Avenue" and as its opening neared reports described the progressive nature of the building's design in great detail. It was favorably compared with buildings around the country in terms of modern layout, sanitation features, ventilation, effective use of natural light, and moderate construction expense (approximately $30,000). Completion of the school became an important neighborhood asset as building lots continued to attract new families and the school population grew. As if anticipating voter concerns, newspaper reports assured taxpayers that Johnson School had been designed to grow incrementally without new additions compromising the original design or efficiency.

An examination of Sanborn maps for Cedar Rapids for the years 1913, 1931, and 1963 sheds light on the general development patterns and growth of the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District. The 1895 Sanborn map did not show building in the district. By 1913 when the first map was completed depicting this section of Cedar Rapids, all four of the additions contained within the district had been platted and more than half of the district had seen buildings erected. The most intense development appeared along the western and southern edges of the district within a block and a half of Third Avenue SE. All but three of the houses that would be built immediately south of Redmond Park were in place and approximately 75% of the houses that would be built in the 1600 blocks of Park Avenue and Grande Avenue were already in place. Nearly all of the houses facing Seventeenth Street SE were constructed and most of the houses along Eighteenth Street SE were built. The balance of the neighborhood ranged from vacant to scattered development: the 1700 block of Park Avenue – 30% developed; the 1800 block of Grande Avenue – 10% developed; the 1700 block of Blake Boulevard – 50% developed; the 1800 block of Blake Boulevard – 30% developed. Further north scattered houses had been built facing onto Third Avenue just outside the district.

The 1913 Sanborn map confirms the completion of Johnson School in the south half of Block 18 of Bever Park Third Addition. Four houses were constructed on the northwest corner of this block with three facing Seventeenth Street. The balance of the block remained vacant and was used as a school playground. The only other public building in the neighborhood in 1913 was a small chapel – Grace Episcopal Chapel (357 Nineteenth Street, SE). This small 1-story stucco building was later incorporated into the northeast section of St. John's Episcopal Church.

By 1931 when the next Sanborn map was produced, the neighborhood had seen a major transformation. Two new public buildings – Grande Avenue United Presbyterian Church (1601 Grande Avenue, SE/340 Sixteenth Street, SE) and St. John's Episcopal Church (357 Nineteenth Street, SE) – were completed. Only a handful of house lots remained vacant in the neighborhood and all but one of these would see houses constructed during the late 1930s. More than half of the houses also saw construction of freestanding garages along rear alley property lines.

By 1931 Sanborn maps show important changes in the surrounding neighborhoods as well. To the west, First Avenue saw its prime residential sites gradually being replaced by a mix of multi-story apartment buildings and retail businesses. Along Second and Third avenues all but a few residential lots saw construction of large-scale residences. The blocks to the south of the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District had few vacant lots remaining by 1931. To the east and northeast, the irregular curving streets of Dow's Addition and the Ridgewood Addition were beginning to fill up with somewhat larger houses set on spacious lots.

The contrasts between the streetscapes of the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District and the Second and Third Avenue Historic District adjoining it to the west had became readily apparent by 1931. The housing stock in the Second and Third Avenue Historic District included a buildings erected over a longer time period (four decades) and beginning in the 1890s. Nearly all of the dwellings in the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District, on the other hand, were constructed in less than three decades beginning shortly after the turn of the 20th century. Given this different time frame for development it is not surprising that the older housing stock of the Second & Third Avenue Historic District had more examples of Neo-Classical Style residences. These included Colonial Revival houses, Georgian Style residences, and vernacular house forms such as the American Four-Square that freely borrowed Neo-Classical elements, detailing, and proportions. Although Neo-Classical features were occasionally found in dwellings in the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District, these instances were less frequent and less dramatic than along Second and Third avenues.

The opposite was true for the Craftsman Style. Dozens of well-preserved examples of this style rendered in various vernacular house forms are present in the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District. In some cases, every house along a block face has aspects of the Craftsman Style. The district's houses were predominantly built in variations of the Hipped Cottage or American Four-Square, the Front-Gable Cottage, Suburban Cottage, and Side-Gable house form with a few examples of the Gambrel Cottage, Bungalow Cottage, and Bungalow. Though several outstanding Craftsman Style examples are found in the Second and Third Avenue Historic District, this style was far less evident.

The Craftsman Style dominated the designs of a large majority of the houses in the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue His District. This resulted from the fact that the era of the style's popularity roughly paralleled the development years for Grande Avenue Place between ca. 1900 and 1925. The Craftsman Style is seen in such features as porch detailing, eaves treatment, window configuration and grouping, and cladding. The form most frequently used was the American Four-Square with its low hipped roof and attic dormers in the full cube shape or narrower version suited for smaller lots. The second common form for the Craftsman Style was the Front-Gable with its moderate-pitched front-gable roof and rectangular floor plan. The closed-gable version, the Suburban Cottage, was a variation of this form. The Side-Gable with its rectangular plan and long side facing the street was also popular.

Contrasting finishes for each level were common and porches usually extended across the full front with either a shed, hipped, or low-pitched front-gable roof. Simple straight or battered piers with narrow or wide board balusters in the balustrades and porch skirting finished out the porch detailing. Square-cut shingles, sometimes laid in alternating thin and wide bands, were placed in gable ends, on dormers, on upper levels of the houses, or all three locations. The integrity of the houses of this district is higher than would ordinarily be expected for buildings that are 70 to 90 years old.

In other ways, the two historic districts share visual attributes. Both districts demonstrate a preference for frame buildings and wood ornamentation over stucco and brick structures. Builders in the two neighborhoods shared an affection for front porches as well as a fondness for large windows, attic dormers, and changes in cladding on various levels of a house. Both neighborhoods had members of the Bever family as their initial developers and as a result, the neighborhoods share a similar approach to building set back and landscaping. In general the lot sizes are somewhat smaller in the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District and the houses were slightly more modest.

The Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District saw full development shortly after the 1931 map was completed and relatively little change has occurred within the district since then. The next Sanborn map available dates from 1963 and is useful in tracking the type of changes made. Some of the larger houses along the west side the district were converted to duplex and apartment use. The Grande Avenue United Presbyterian Church was discontinued in ca. 1957 and the building was converted into a six-unit apartment building. A number of new garages appeared along the alleys. Relatively few houses saw building additions though some saw the enclosure of all or part of their front porches.

Streetcar lines along Bever Avenue, Third Avenue, Grande Avenue, and Eighteenth Street offered convenient connections to employment centers and shopping in the downtown. They also linked other parts of the city with the newly Bever Park located east of the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District. Real estate promoters such as James L. Bever eagerly sought brick street paving. Several streets retain brick pavers today including Sixteenth Street between Third Avenue and Bever Avenue and Park Avenue between Third Avenue and Seventeenth Street. These streets include the blocks facing Redmond Park.

The Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District was occupied by a mixture of socioeconomic groups including a number of economically and socially mobile, second-generation Czech households. Families in the district were a mixture of middle and upper-income households. The were headed by railroad workers (clerks, conductors, engineers, and machinists), commercial travelers or traveling salesmen, downtown business owners and managers, industrial owners and plant managers, lawyers, doctors (physicians, osteopaths, and dentists), bank officers and cashiers, real estate agents, and teachers. The Architecture of the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District:

The architecture of the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District represents a range of building type, style, and form typical of early 20th century residential neighborhoods in Cedar Rapids. Two churches, one apartment building, several double-houses, and eleven different single-family house forms appear in the district. Although it is likely that several Cedar Rapids architects were involved in designing buildings in the neighborhood, no specific commissions have been identified.

The single-family residential building stock in the district includes examples of the Colonial Revival Style, the Craftsman Style, the Tudor Revival Style, and features adapted from the Prairie School Style. The single-family houses include common vernacular building forms popular locally and around the United States from the turn of the 20th century through the 1930s. They include the Hipped Roof 2-Story or American Four-Square, the Front-Gabled Roof 2-Story and its variations – the Suburban Cottage and the Clipped-Gable Cottage, the Side-Gabled Roof 2-Story, the Bungalow and Bungalow Cottage, the Gambrel Cottage, and the English Cottage. The most common house form in the district is the American Four-Square and the styles that appear the most frequently are the Craftsman and the Colonial Revival. Some of the examples of vernacular architecture may be the product of pre-cut housing manufacturers such as the Gordon-Van Tine Company of Davenport.

It appears that at least one architect – Charles Dieman of the Cedar Rapids firm of Dieman and Fiske – may have played the role of designer/builder in the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District. Dieman's name is listed on sewer connection records for 12 separate lots in the district between 1908 and 1928. Examples of individual buildings that can be identified in this group are 1705 and 1834 Grande Avenue, SE (1908 and 1919); 1829 Blake Boulevard, SE (1913); and 1809 Ridgewood Terrace, SE (1928). Sewer connection records for blocks in nearby neighborhoods frequently show Dieman's name during this period as well. He and his family lived in two houses located in the Second and Third Avenue Historic District further affirming his interest in the neighborhood.

Dieman worked for Josselyn and Taylor prior to setting up his own office in ca. 1899. His earliest design in the neighborhood after forming his own firm is just west and slightly south of the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District at 1560 Third Avenue SE, a house that he and his wife occupied briefly after its completion in 1899. Three years later Dieman designed a second house several blocks away at 1800 Second Avenue. A more mainstream design, this Four-Square form incorporated elaborate dormers in the steep hipped roof and several styles of projecting window forms.

One of the houses attributed to Dieman in the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District continued to adapt the Four-Square form. Built for David and Iva Orr at 1834 Grande Avenue (Photo #2), this example had a low-pitched bell-cast hipped roof with a raised first floor clad in wide clapboard siding and square-cut shingles laid in alternating narrow and wide bands on the upper level. The off set oversized entrance portico was atypical for Four-Square houses in the district. David Orr was one of the owners of Orr Brothers Supply Co., an agricultural implement company.

As was noted above, it is likely that local architectural firms designed other houses in the district but poor records make it impossible to identify them. As a result, the significance of these buildings is discussed in more general terms below.

Residential Architectural Styles

The Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District provides a sampler of architectural styles and decorative elements that were popular among American house builders from the turn of the 20th century through the 1930s. The earliest residential style to appear in the district is the Shingle Style. The house occupied by Russell and Clara Mantz, a physician, at 1545 Park Avenue, SE (Photo #3) is a well-preserved example of this style. Built in 1899-1900 the house has an asymmetrical front façade. The side-gable roof is extended to form the roof of the front porch and a multi-sided tower is positioned at one corner of the house. The house is clad in medium width siding with corner board and a belt course between levels. Vertical skirting boards and closely spaced square balusters in the porch balustrade finish off the porch trim. Though not clad in shingles, the low tower and dominant sloping roof mark this house as an example of the Shingle Style.

At the turn of the 20th century the architectural vocabulary of the Neo-Classical styles was being established in both commercial and residential buildings in Cedar Rapids. Four-Square houses were frequently embellished with rich Classical ornamentation to achieve a Colonial Revival Style appearance. The Edward and Hildur Killian House (Photo #4) at 1700 Grande Avenue, SE is one such example. Constructed in ca. 1908 by the president of Killian Co., an important Cedar Rapids department store, this house occupies a prominent corner lot in Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District. Its symmetrical plan included a low-pitched hipped roof, gabled roof dormers on the sides, and a flat roof porch extending across the full front. The most important Classical feature is the two-storied projecting portico centered on the front façade. Fluted Ionic columns extend two stories to support a closed gable or pediment.

The Martin and Amanda Hedin House at 1620 Park Avenue, SE (Photo #5) incorporates Classical features in a different vernacular house form – the Suburban Cottage. Built in ca. 1909 this 2½-story house has a closed front-gable with a pent roof. The gable end features a Palladian window group and square-cut shingle cladding. Other Classical ornamentation includes the keystone in the semi-circular arched window and second floor oval window, the fluted porch columns and the simple balustrade and porch skirting.

The most popular architectural style in the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District was the Craftsman Style. More than 60% of the district's residences evidence forms and features frequently used in this style. The Craftsman Style grew out of the Arts and Crafts Movement in America and was strongly promoted by native Wisconsin architect and furniture designer Gustav Stickley in his magazine The Craftsman published between 1903 and 1916. The Craftsman Style was predisposed towards simple, utilitarian forms, and straight or geometric lines. The Craftsman Style developed a multiplicity of forms but the American Four-Square, the Front-Gabled Roof 2-Story, and the Side-Gabled Roof 2-Story were the most common to appear in the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District.

One of the best-preserved examples of a Craftsman Style house in the district is the H.F. and Alice Jones House (Photo #1) located at 1630 Park Avenue, SE. As was noted earlier, this house was built in ca. 1912 soon after Jones' construction company completed work on the new Johnson School. The Jones House is an example of the Front-Gable 2-Story form. Its broad front-gable roof has gable attic dormers with a combination of exposed rafter tails, knee-braced brackets, and purlins typical of Craftsman designs. The shed roofed front porch extends across the full front with similar roof patterns used for the fixed awning above the second floor window group and the side entranceway. The wide vertical boards closely spaced in the porch skirting and balustrade are typical of Craftsman designs in this and other Cedar Rapids neighborhoods from the period. The house's simple cladding – medium width clapboard with corner board trim – differs somewhat from most other Craftsman designs in the neighborhood. More often they featured alternating finishes between various levels.

Other examples of the Craftsman Style include the Joseph Wicke House (Photo #6), 1805 Blake Boulevard, SE (ca. 1912) which features many of the same elements as the Jones House; the William and Alta Moehl House, 1821 Blake Boulevard, SE (ca. 1912); the Clarence and Jennie Sellye House, 1708 Grande Avenue, SE (ca. 1910); the Homer and Audrey Pitner House (Photo #7), 1815 Grande Avenue, SE (1910); the Weaver and Maude Fowler (first) House, 1820 Grande Avenue, SE (ca. 1915); the Charles and Bess LeClear House, 337 Seventeenth Street, SE (ca. 1915); the Edward and Bess Misak House (Photo #8), 332 Eighteenth Street, SE (ca. 1915); and the George and Minnie Beattie House, 315 Nineteenth Street, SE (ca. 1912). Many of the examples of the Four-Square, Front-Gabled Roof 2-Story, and Side-Gabled Roof 2-Story forms discussed below also feature Craftsman elements.

Although a number of buildings in the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District have features common to the Prairie School Style, the only house to fully embody the style is the Myron and Fay Aubineau House at 1801 Grande Avenue, SE (Photo #9). Prairie School residences are typified by their horizontal massing, low-pitched roofs which are frequently punctured by projecting gables, ribbon groupings windows, and horizontal beltcourses separating differing materials. The house built in ca. 1922 by Myron Aubineau, a sales manager for the Quaker Oats Company, and his wife Fay, occupies a prominent corner lot in the district. It is an example of a Prairie School variation of the American-Four Square house form with an unusually low-pitched hipped roof that extends over the 2-story sleeping porch. This roof form combines with several other features including the variation in cladding between levels and the bands of window groups on the upper level, to give the house a strong horizontal feeling. The use of a raised first level separated by a belt course with bands of narrow and wide square-cut shingles on the upper level in the Aubineau House adds to the Prairie School design of the house.

At the same time that homebuilders were constructing Colonial Revival, Craftsman, and Prairie School houses elsewhere in Cedar Rapids, they were also building Tudor Revival Style single-family houses. No such houses were built in the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District, however. The only example of this style is the St. John's Episcopal Church (Photo #10) at 357 Nineteenth Street, SE. This church occupies two residential lots along a busy north-south street. Its modest scale allows it to blend in with the surrounding domestic building stock rather than stand out as an institutional building. It has a complex plan consisting of a series of intersecting gable sections superimposed on a T-plan. Like many Tudor Revival Style buildings from this period it has a stone foundation with stucco walls and half-timbering trim. Tall, pointed arched stained glass windows are inset in a rectangular window opening with another group of windows set beneath a segmental arch. The building has no steeple and its modest size reflects its early role as a neighborhood based church initiated as a mission of a larger church.

Vernacular House Forms:

Although many of the houses that were constructed in the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District drew inspiration from architectural styles sweeping the country from 1900 through the 1930s, most were built without benefit of custom designs. Buildings of this type generally fall into the category of "vernacular housing" and for purposes of discussion are grouped by building form and/or type rather than style. The major vernacular house forms that appeared within the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District were, in descending frequency, the 2-story hipped roof house form commonly referred to as the American Four-Square (33%), the Front-Gabled Roof 2-Story (28%), the Side-Gabled Roof 2-Story (18%), and the 1 or 1½-Story Bungalow or Bungalow Cottage (6%). The remaining houses (approximately 15%) included one or more examples of the 1½-Story Gabled Cottage form, Gambrel Cottage, Clipped-Gable Cottage, and the Cape Cod Cottage.

Homebuilders for these houses turned to pattern books and design catalogues available from local lumber companies such as the Limback & Jeffrey Lumber Co. or to local planing mills such as Williams & Hunting Co. After the turn of the 20th century, residents may have turned to manufacturers of pre-cut or "kit houses" such as those offered by a number of Midwest manufacturers. Kit houses included materials for the entire house with numbered parts and instruction booklets as well as paint and nails. Among the companies offering homes in the Midwest were three Bay City, Michigan manufacturers – the Aladdin Company began in 1906 and offered 450 models between 1910 and 1940; Lewis Homes/Liberty Homes; and Sterling Homes/International Mill and Timber.

Three Chicago firms included Sears Roebuck and Company, Montgomery Ward Company, and Harris Brothers. The best known of these was Sears, the nation's premier merchandiser at the turn of the 20th century. The company began offering house plans in 1895 and by 1908 had begun operations of a "Modern Homes" division that supplied building plans, materials, and kit houses that were shipped by rail around the United States. The first catalogue was limited to several dozen plans for medium size houses but by 1916 the first Sears kit-houses with numbered parts were available.

Incomplete records make the total output of kit homes difficult to estimate, however, it is likely that by World War II, Sears had sold more than 100,000 homes nationally.

Soon after Aladdin and Sears began manufacturing homes, an lowa company joined their ranks. Located just 85 miles southeast of Cedar Rapids in Davenport, the Gordon-Van Tine Company advertised nationally selling construction materials to builders beginning in 1906. By 1910 they offered house designs and were among the first companies in the country to offer fully pre-cut houses. The company's catalogues allowed the homebuyer to select from among dozens of floor plans, finishes, design features, and equipment choices. The Gordon-Van Tine Company likely knew of the brisk market for residential construction in Cedar Rapids during this period. Their advertisments regularly appeared in the Cedar Rapids Gazette and contained copy intended to appeal to homeowners, carpenters, and contractors. ¹⁰

As noted above, the American Four-Square was the most common house form in the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District. A total of 65 houses were built in the district between ca.1910 and ca.1930 in variations of this form. Common characteristics included a 2-story, 3-bay configuration; hipped roof of various pitches; centrally placed, hipped or gable roof dormer(s) on one or more facades; porches across entire front façade or off-set entrance porticos; asymmetrically placed entrance door (common); a cottage window on first floor (common); double-hung windows or groups of windows on upper floors and secondary facades with either 1/1, 4/1,5/1 or 6/1 configurations; and beltcourses separating first and second floors. Four-Squares are distributed evenly throughout the district. Its national popularity during the years immediately preceding World War I was consistent with the substantial period of growth of the neighborhood during the same period.

The Gordon-Van Tine Company included 18 separate plans in the Four-Square house form in its 1923 catalogue seeking to capture the interest of homebuilders with such descriptive phrases as "An Impressive Colonial Home," "A Big 6 Room House at a Low Price," "A Big Square Home – Four Bed Rooms," "Substantial Two-Story Home," "An Every Popular Home of Fine Proportions," "Impressive Home – A Space and Money Saver," "A Substantial Seven Room House," and "A Square House with Big Comfortable Rooms." "11

The typical plan for a Gordon-Van Tine Four-Square featured all of the elements noted in the preceding paragraph. The four rooms on the first floor usually contained an entrance hall with stairs to the second floor, a "cased opening" (one featuring pillars, shelving or other trim) between the living room and dining room, and a spacious kitchen. The upper level contained a bathroom and either three or four bedrooms. Examples in the 1923 catalogue were sized for a range of budgets with the smallest examples containing less than 700 square feet per floor, moderate examples sized from 800 to 900 square feet, and one large house containing 1,100 square feet per floor. Although no specific examples of Gordon-Van Tine Co. houses have been identified within the district, the designs and floor plans included in the company's catalogue shed light on both the aesthetic and practical preferences of the day.

The Four-Squares within the Redmond Park-Carnida Avenue Historic District can be grouped within several sub-types. The "narrow front" Four-Square had a slightly marrower front lapide and was most often used in mid-tokic bloadins where building loss had been solicityded. Examples sculate the Fyrage from the property of the Control of Another group of Four-Squares in the district might be described as the "classic" or 'basic" form. They have a single style of cladding on lower and upper levels, a flui-width prior hardons the front, simple port from, and uncomplicated window treatment. Examples include the Fred and Clara Brink House (Photo # 12), 1812 Grande Avenue, SE; the William and Minnie Maddern House, 160 Park Avenue, SE (cs. 1999); Morden and Lerma Carter House, 1614 Park Avenue, SE (cs. 1999); Morden and Norma Anders House, 1614 Park Avenue, SE (cs. 1999); Walter and Morta Burden House, 1625 Park Avenue, ESE (cs. 1999); Walter and Morta Burden House, 1625 Park Avenue, ESE (cs. 1999); Walter and Morta Burden House, 1625 Park Avenue, SE (ca. 1910); Delight Meader House, 1714 Park Avenue, SE (ca. 1910); and William and Beatrice Hoag House, 344 Eighteenth Street, SE (ca. 1915); and Samuel and Grace Romey House, 345 Eighteenth Street, SE (ca. 1910). The Brink House was built in ca. 1913 and has narrow clapboard siding, wide eaves, hipped roof attic dormers, and a low-pitched hipped roof extending across the full front. Brink worked as a manager for the Fawcett Company, jobbers of electrical, mechanical, and automobile supplies.

The third group of Four-Squares is distinguished by a change in cladding between levels. This practice was common among all of the Craftsman Style house forms in the district. Well-preserved examples include the Four-Squares at Louis and Lillian Shepherd House, 1611 Grande Avenue, SE (ca. 1910); the David and Iva Orr House, 1834 Grande Avenue, SE (Photo #2); Perry and Lizzie Mitchell House, 1609 Park Avenue, SE (ca. 1910); Frank and Elizabeth Dance House, 1628 Park Avenue, SE (ca. 1916); Benjamin and Leila Jones House, 1640 Park Avenue, SE (ca. 1910); Emmett and Maude Bolger House (Photo #11), 1804 Park Avenue, SE (1913); Augustus and Pauline Stonebraker House, 349 Seventeenth Street, SE (ca. 1910); and Robert and Helene Hasher House, 350 Seventeenth Street, SE (ca. 1910). The change in cladding between levels was often accompanied by a change in paint color or raising of the belt-course position. Together these three elements accentuated the horizontal feeling of this sub-type of the Four-Square form.

The last sub-type of the Four-Square house form is generally larger in scale (a 28' width and more 900 to 1,100 s.f. per floor) with a steeper roof pitch and an asymmetrical appearance. They generally have pronounced wall dormers or projecting window bays that are set off-center. Porch and house entrances are usually located beneath these dominant dormers adding to the overall asymmetry of their design. One noteworthy example is the John and Sarah Abbott House (Photo #13) built in ca. 1910 at 1611 Park Avenue, SE. John worked as a hog buyer for the Sinclair Co., an important local meat packer at the time the house was built. The house's steeply pitched hipped roof has a flared gable wall dormer on the left side and wide eaves with exposed rafters. Cladding varies between floors with narrow and wide clapboards on the lower level, narrow siding on the upper level, and square-cut shingles in the gable dormer. Wide paneled porch columns rest on ashlar concrete block pedestals and the porch balustrade and skirting have an unusual scroll-cut pattern. The entrance is set off-center beneath a bay window and an oval window in the dormer.

These large, asymmetrical Four-Squares frequently occupied prominent corner lots. The George and Bertha Doty House (Photo #14) at 1800 Blake Boulevard, SE built in ca. 1915 is such an example. George was the secretary-treasurer for the Foy Supply Co., an auto supplier when the house was finished. It has prominent attic gables with pent roofs placed in an asymmetrical fashion along the corner facing facades. Large paneled porch pillars and a paneled balustrade created a substantial, weighty look. The offset entrance and porch steps finish off the asymmetrical appearance. Other examples of the asymmetrical Four-Square sub-type include the houses at Stanley and May Walker, 1615 Grande Avenue, SE (1909); Weaver and Maude Fowler House, 1820 Grande Avenue, SE, (ca. 1915); John and Sarah Abbott House, 1611 Park Avenue, SE (ca. 1910); William and Mattie Donnelly House, 336 Seventeenth Street, SE (ca. 1910); and Edward and Bess Misak House (Photo #8), 332 Eighteenth Street, SE (ca.1915).

Although research in the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District has not identified specific houses attributable to the Gordon-Van Tine Company, an examination of the company's 1923 catalogue finds a number of designs typical of the Front-Gabled Roof 2-Story houses built before and World War I. This popular house form is depicted in Gordon-Van Tine Home Nos. 501, 534 and 577, which are similar to examples from the district. Like the catalogue houses these local examples frequently featured varied cladding between levels, had either a hipped or broad gabled porch across the full front, had two or three square pillars resting on concrete block pedestals, and used Craftsman Style windows with multiple vertical lights in double-hung sash. Approximately 55 houses or 28% of the houses in the district are examples of the Front-Gabled Roof 2-Story house form.

A good example of the Front-Gabled Roof 2-Story house form from the district is the Theodore and Louisa Blaul House constructed at 1824 Grande Avenue, SE (Photo #15) shortly before World War I. Like the Gordon-Van Tine Houses of the next decade it featured "simple straight lines" in its balustrade, porch skirting, and battered columns. Cladding changed from narrow clapboard on the first floor to narrow and wide bands of square-cut shingles on the second floor, and regular coursed square-cut shingles in the gable end. Paired windows appear in the gable peak with all double-hung sash having a vertical light configuration in the upper sash (4/1 or 5/1).

A slightly earlier and more elaborate variation of the Front-Gabled Roof 2-Story house form was the Suburban Cottage. The Suburban Cottage term was first applied to variations of this house form by lowa architectural historians Herbert Gottfried and Jan Jennings in their book American Vernacular Design 1870-1940: An Illustrated Glossary in 1985. It applies to a number of houses built in Cedar Rapids shortly before and after the turn of the 20th century but is relatively rare within the district. The form is set apart from other examples of the Front-Gabled Roof 2-Story house form by the presence of a slightly wider front façade and most importantly, the use of a closed front-gable. Other common elements include wall dormers on the side facades, bay windows on one or both levels of the front façade, and full front porches. Examples include the Martin and Amanda Hedin House (Photo #5) built in 1909, the Guy and Anna Mitchell House at 1721 Blake Boulevard SE built in ca. 1910, and the Mary Irving House (Photo #18) at 1610 Park Avenue SE built in ca. 1915.

The Hedin House described previously features Colonial Revival window treatments and porch millwork. The Irving House has a flared roofline. Its narrow clapboard siding is flared above the belt course that divides the two levels and square-cut shingles fill the closed gable end and the porch gable. The balustrade and porch skirting do not match in this example with narrow balusters used on the porch and wide boards on the skirting. Mary Irving was a widow at the time she built this house.

Gottfried and Jennings named another variation of the Front-Gabled Roof 2-Story house form for its defining feature – the Clipped-Gable Cottage. A pair of particularly well-preserved examples of this form are the Louis and Gertrude Rosenbaum House (Photo #19) built in ca. 1915 at 1721 Grande Avenue SE and the Sarah Maier House (Photo #20) built a few years later a block away at 1821 Grande Avenue SE. Louis Rosenbaum owned a downtown clothing store at the time he and his wife moved into their Grande Avenue house. In addition to the house's distinctive clipped gable, it had a combination of narrow clapboard siding on the lower level and narrow and wide bands of square cut shingles on the upper level. The windows had a 10/1 configuration with a combination of Craftsman Style elements finishing of the design including knee-braced brackets along the cornice, narrow and wide porch balusters, and a bracketed sill beneath the gable peak windows. The Maier House matches the Rosenbaum House in most details except that the windows have a 5/1 or 6/1 configuration and the front porch has a hipped roof line with three battered columns rather than a gable form with square columns.

After the Four-Square and Front-Gabled Roof 2-Story house forms, the Side-Gabled Roof 2-Story form is the next most common vernacular form in the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District. As its name suggests, its roof form distinguishes this house form. Examples within the district were similar to Gordon-Van Tine Home No. 505. They generally have a symmetrical front or included 1 or 2-story porches positioned at the gable ends. Attic dormers were frequently used and front porches or entrance hoods were usually centered on the front façade. Fenestration included individual or grouped double-hung windows with 1/1, 4/1,5/1 or 6/1 configurations. Beltcourses frequently separated first and second floors with cladding differing between levels.

The house built for Selden and Jessie Hoaglan at 1838 Blake Boulevard SE (Photo #21) is an especially well-preserved example of the Side-Gabled 2-Story house form. Constructed in ca. 1920, the Hoaglan House contains the requisite features of this form. It is clad in narrow clapboard siding on the lower level with bands of narrow and wide square-cut shingles above the raised beltcourse. A low shed roofed attic dormer has exposed rafter tails and knee braced brackets. The front façade has a flared gable roof over the entrance, a combination of 5/1 and 6/1 double-hung windows, and a 2-story sleeping porch at the gable end. Such porches became especially popular as a means for discouraging contagious diseases such as tuberculosis and influenza.

More than 35 examples of the Side-Gabled 2-Story house form, most with Craftsman Style detailing, appear in the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District. This form was frequently used for slightly wide lots because of its horizontal form, an appearance that was accentuated by the fact that is roof pitch and overall height were lower than most of the Front-Gabled 2-Story houses in the neighborhood. A list of the better preserved examples of this form is included on page 6.

Less than a dozen examples of the Bungalow and Bungalow Cottage appear in the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District. Examples were constructed from shortly before World War I through the early 1920s. The Bungalows to appear in this district were generally modest 1½-story residences with broad front-gable roofs for both the main house and the front porch. In the Bungalow Cottage, the gable faced the side with a shed or gable dormer facing the street. Craftsman detailing was frequently used for porch trim, eaves, brackets, and interior finishes.

The modest size of many of the Bungalows made them popular for single occupants. The Arvilla Stamp House built in ca. 1920 at 1828 Park Avenue SE (Photo #22) is a good example of the Bungalow form. Mrs. Stamp built the house after she became a widow. Located on a narrow 40' wide lot, it was clad in narrow clapboard siding on the first floor with square-cut shingles in the gable end. The building was given extra height by the use of tall clapboard clad porch pedestals and short battered columns. The balustrade had a diagonal patterned balustrade and the porch was just large enough to hold a porch swing.

Another well-preserved Bungalow is located several blocks north along Ridgewood Terrace. The Charles and Nettie Preussner House (Photo #23) located at 1828 Ridgewood Terrace SE was completed in ca. 1923 for a cost of $5,000. Charles worked as a Cedar Rapids patrolman at the time the house was completed. This Bungalow is a well-executed example of the Craftsman Style. It uses square-cut shingles on the foundation level, narrow clapboard siding on the first floor walls, and square-cut shingles in the gable ends. Battered piers support the broad gable roof of the porch and the balustrade is composed of narrowly spaced square balusters. A matching vertical board design in the porch skirting and 6/1 double-hung windows round out the Craftsman features.

The Bungalow and Bungalow Cottage house forms are neither rare nor commonplace within the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District. Other well-preserved examples to survive in the district include the Jennie Zigler House, 1723 Blake Boulevard, SE (ca. 1915); the Loretta Soles House, 1841 Grande Avenue, SE (ca. 1920); Charles and Della Harter House, 1834 Park Avenue, SE (ca. 1919); and the Anthony Tschirgi House, 1801 Ridgewood Terrace, SE (ca. 1915).

The Gambrel Cottage is another house term used by architectural historians Gottfried and Jennings. It describes the group of houses built from before World War I through the 1930s in Cedar Rapids. These houses were distinguished by their gambrel roofs oriented with the gambrel end facing the street or as is more often the case in the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District, to the side. The house built by Stanley and Bessie Cejka (Photo #24) at 1819 Grande Avenue is one of four examples of this form within the district. Stanley worked as a clerk for the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad when the couple moved into the house in ca. 1924. The combination of a gambrel roof with a wide shed roof dormer gave the house nearly 1,000 s.f. on each level. Like most of the other houses in the district, the Gambrel Cottages such as the Cejka House varied cladding between levels. The symmetrical front had groups of double-hung sash flanking an entrance portico with a small balcony. A new feature found in this house is the use of a brick foundation rather than concrete block. Another intact example of the Gambrel Cottage form in the district is the James and Elizabeth Munger House at 321 Nineteenth Street, SE (ca. 1928).

The last vernacular house form found in the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District may be a form unique to Cedar Rapids. Known locally as the "Garlow," these small houses or bungalows were built near the rear of the lot as starter homes for the owners. Over time larger houses built to conform to traditional setbacks replaced them and the original small houses were converted to garages, hence the name Garlows. Few examples survive of garlows that were not converted to garages. One example is the Glenn and Mabel McCollister House built in ca. 1923 at 1815 Ridgewood Terrace SE. Glenn worked as a switchman for the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad at the time the couple moved into this house. This small 1-story house has a side-gable roof, no porch, and a scarcity of windows. The construction of Garlows was probably in keeping with the house lot boom that affected a number of east side neighborhoods after the turn of the century. Advertisements encouraged the speculative purchase of lots and the construction of Garlows appears to have been a related outcome.

Contributing and Non-Contributing Properties:

The Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District contains a total of 196 properties with 193 contributing buildings of which 124 are key or individually significant. The balance of the district is composed of one contributing city park, 2 non-contributing buildings and 3 parcels containing parking lots or vacant land. No buildings are listed on the National Register. Garages are not included in the number count. Although many houses have garages, none have carriage houses and the remainder are less than 50 years old or have received major alterations through the years (changes in garage or passage doors, windows, siding, etc.).

Integrity requirements used to determine contributing and non-contributing designation were drawn from discussion included under "Section F. Associated Property Types" of the Multiple Property Documentation Form for "Architectural and Historical Resources of Cedar Rapids Residential Neighborhoods, 1870 – 1940" approved by the National Park Service on August 10, 2000. The Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District was one of nine potential historic districts identified in a survey of older residential neighborhoods completed in 1993-1995 by the City of Cedar Rapids. Buildings included in these residential districts are expected to be minimally altered with the most change expected in the earliest buildings. For a building to be designated as "contributing," its integrity will be considered sufficient if principal facades remain relatively intact, window and door openings appear intact, decorative trim survives, and roof lines are unaltered. Synthetic siding will not automatically preclude designation of a building as contributing if it its scale and massing remain, its placement is critical to maintain a sense of streetscape, it is felt the installation of the siding is reversible, and the balance of the building meets the other integrity tests. In a similar fashion, the addition of later porches, unobtrusive additions on non-principal facades, and modern roofing materials will not automatically disallow a building from consideration.

As was noted in the MPDF, integrity standards for churches located within historic districts are somewhat higher than for residential buildings. Churches are expected to retain their original shape and proportions with original window openings, doors, spires, and other architectural features preserved. Construction materials for foundations, walls, and windows should be original. The use of modern roofing materials is an acceptable alteration. In general, modifications made more than 50 years ago will be accepted as part of the historic appearance of a church. New additions or wings will be accepted if they are located along a non-principal façade, have sympathetic design elements, and are constructed of compatible building materials.

The third building type in the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District is the apartment building. For these buildings, the integrity standards require retention of basic form, materials, and design elements. Minor changes made more than 50 years ago will be accepted as part of the historic appearance of the apartment building. New additions will be accepted if they are located along a non-principal façade, have sympathetic design features, and are constructed of compatible building materials. The issue of replacement windows will be treated on a case-by-case basis.

A list of buildings within the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District follows with their designation as contributing or non-contributing noted. "Key" buildings (those that would be considered individually significant if located outside of the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District) are marked with an ②. Non-contributing properties are so designated because they contain buildings that were built outside of the period of significance for the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District, alterations to the building are of a substantial nature, or the building has been moved to the present site.

The Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District contains an unusually high level of physical integrity. Several dwellings have been razed from lots located at the northwest corner of Block 18 of Bever Park Second Addition. These lots are now part of the playground for Johnson Elementary School. Several other houses have been razed at the northwest corner of Block 21 of Bever Park Third Addition for use as a parking lot for Johnson School. No other demolitions have occurred in the neighborhood.

Summary:

In summary, the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District is locally significant under Criteria A and C. Under Criterion A it derives significance from its association with an important era of residential development in Cedar Rapids at the beginning of the 20th century. The real estate prowess of brothers James and George Bever is evident in their development of three Bever Park Additions beginning at the turn of the century. Later efforts saw the Grande Avenue Place Addition developed by their sister Ellen Bever Blake in partnership with local realtor/developer Malcolm Bolton. Additional significance under Criterion A derives from the district's development as a streetcar suburb in Cedar Rapids at the turn of the 20th century with its occupants representing a cross section of middle and upper income families. A number of these individuals were leaders in the community and made significant contributions to local industry and commerce.

Under Criterion C the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District is significant as a representative collection of the residential architectural styles and vernacular house forms that appeared in Cedar Rapids neighborhoods from 1900 through the 1920s. The district has an extremely high level of physical integrity. The combination of visual qualities and historical associations gives the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District its neighborhood identity and significance.

Boundary Justification:

Because of the triangular shape of this historic district, it has three edges. The western boundary (from southwest to northeast) for the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District is the rear property line of houses facing Third Avenue SE. Third Avenue is a wide, one-way street that is the last of the diagonal avenues in this part of Cedar Rapids. Nearly all of the houses facing Third Avenue were built before the adjoining lots to the east within the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District were developed.

The east boundary for the district extends along the center line of Nineteenth Street SE. Nineteenth Street is a busy two-way collector street that marks a transition point between the streets and avenues laid out in a regular grid pattern within the Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District and the longer blocks and meandering streets northeast of Nineteenth Street SE.

The south boundary runs along the east-west alley between Park Avenue SE and Washington Avenue SE. Redmond

Park is located near the east end of this boundary where it joins Third Avenue SE. The only variation in this boundary is between Eighteenth Street and Nineteenth Street where the boundary drops to the south in order to include all of Block 18 of Bever Park Second Addition. This block is now fully occupied by Johnson School and although the school is a non-contributing structure within the district, a school at this site has served as an important neighborhood institution since its establishment here in 1910-11. The boundaries of a the locally designated historic district include the school property for planning and neighborhood preservation purposes reinforcing its inclusion in the National Register District as well.

The Redmond Park-Grande Avenue Historic District is the second of four contiguous residential historic neighborhoods in southeast Cedar Rapids. They are more fully described in the Multiple Property Documentation Form prepared for "Architectural and Historical Resources of Residential Neighborhoods, 1870 – 1940."
