The North Salina Street Historic District consists of 98 properties located within the area of Syracuse commonly referred to as the "Northside." This urban commercial thoroughfare is bounded on the north by Union Place and on the south by Butternut Street. Developed throughout the nineteenth and first quarter of the twentieth centuries, the district is predominantly composed of commercial row buildings, but also includes 11 residences, one church, one school, and six miscellaneous buildings. The buildings in the district are chiefly from the Victorian period, mostly Italianate in style. There are also many good examples of the various "Revival" styles from the late nineteenth and early twentieth century. The 15 non-contributing buildings in the historic district include the modern structures at; 619, 727-29, 737 & 743, 801-05, 819, 829, 901 and 933 N. Salina St., and 516 Prospect Ave., the severely altered structures at 628-30, 642-52, 643, 706-10, and 827 N. Salina St., and the front addition on the Greek Revival house at 758 N. Salina St. The district contains 85 contributing bldgs.

The collection of structures in the district relates directly to the North Salina Street corridor and the history of the street as the main artery between the early villages of Salina and Syracuse, and a principal avenue of commerce after the city was incorporated in 1848.

The district was identified as a result of a comprehensive survey completed on the Northside of the city. The Northside is historically identified as the 1st and 2nd wards of Syracuse and presently corresponds to local community development target areas.

The neighborhoods surrounding the North Salina Street Historic District included late nineteenth century commercial structures to the south, which are similar to those in the district but altered. To the west are altered nineteenth and twentieth-century industrial warehouses and small residential developments. To the east are late nineteenth and early twentieth century residences all with varying degrees of alterations. North of the district is Union Park, which is not significant.

The boundaries of the district were drawn to include the most architecturally intact structures which face North Salina Street, taking into consideration the cohesiveness of building types. The southern boundary of the district falls where the integrity of the structures diminishes and modern intrusions persist. The northern boundary lies at Union Place, a park which is the terminus of the commercial row on the west side of the street. On the east side, it extends only to Isabella Street due to the lack of architectural integrity in the block of buildings beyond.

In the first half of the nineteenth century, the street was sparsely settled with small houses and coopers' (barrel makers') shops. The earliest building surviving in the district is the pre-1850 house at 753 N. Salina St. This modest, wood frame structure reflects the early days of the area and is one of very few Federal style buildings which survive in the city. Alterations at the first floor and synthetic siding do not disguise the original two-story, three-bay-wide, side entry configuration of the facade. Diagonally across North Salina Street and set back from the road, the Greek Revival style house at 758 N. Salina St. is the only other early residence remaining in the district. Despite the additions of synthetic siding and a one-story store to the front, the form of the columned temple front is visible evidence of the residences that characterized the district in the mid-1800's. Once freestanding, both of these structures have been incorporated into rows of later Victorian period commercial buildings.

Throughout the majority of the nineteenth century, the street was the community center for the city's German immigrants, who lived and operated their businesses here. The typical commercial row building in the district had a shop located at the first floor with apartments or offices at the upper floors. This traditional use continues to present day. While architectural styles in the district vary, common characteristics include: brick construction, scale of design, 2/2 window sash and modest brick cornices.

The architecture of the district is predominantly Italianate in style. Constructed between the 1860's and the 1880's, the facades of these row buildings are characterized by regularized, round-arched window openings and corbeled brick cornices. All variations of the style can be found, such as in the east side of the 700 block of N. Salina St.

The north end of the district contains the older buildings, which are smaller and simpler in design than the later buildings constructed at the south end of the street, closer to the city's metropolitan center. All the buildings on the 900 block of N. Salina St. are only two (instead of three or four) stories high and have simple detailing. The most elaborate ornamentation here are the acanthus leaf designs on the keystones over the second floor windows at 925-29 N. Salina St., an Italianate style structure built c.1865. The best preserved example of the more modest row buildings is at 921-23 N. Salina St. Built by 1870, the structure is four bays wide with a storefront in the south half of the first floor facade and an office or residential entrance in the north half. The second floor window openings are rectangular with stone lintels and sills, and a simple brick cornice with corbeled "brackets" extends across the top of the parapet. This structure was built in conjunction with its neighbor at 917-19 N. Salina St., which has since been altered at the first floor facade.

The 800 block of N. Salina St. contains some of the most distinctive buildings in the district, all built in the last half of the nineteenth century. The domed towers of Assumption Church, 812 N. Salina St., are visual landmarks from any Northside location. The largest structure in the district, it occupies a sizeable lot in the center of the block, flanked by other church buildings and commercial structures. Built in 1865, the church was designed by noted Syracuse architect Horatio Nelson White and is the most lavish of all his Romanesque Revival style churches. The only example of the Second Empire style in the district is 807-11 N. Salina St. built c.1880. Contrasting stone banding on brick piers divides the two separate storefronts and side entrances. The upper floor windows have cast-iron hood moldings with a curvilinear floral design. An excellent example of a pressed sheet metal facade is 839-41 N. Salina St., built in 1890. Here the chiseled quality of the profuse detailing in the metal sheathing on the upper story walls resembles the style of the English architect Charles Lock Eastlake.

In the middle of the district is its only Victorian Gothic style building at 745-47 N. Salina St. Built c.1875, the facade has rusticated limestone piers which separate the bays of the storefront and continue to the gabled parapet at the roofline. Decorative brickwork adorns the wall in several patterns, making it one of the most elaborate facades on the street. At the end of the same block is the only commercial Romanesque style building in the area. The Walier Building, 755 N. Salina St., was built in 1890 and has four-story arcades along its six N. Salina St. and eleven Catawba St. facades. The south half of the district is notable for its generally larger buildings and examples of the Queen Anne and other late nineteenth and early twentieth century styles. Queen Anne style buildings at 601 N. Salina St., built c. 1892, and 600-08 N. Salina St., built in 1885, are both corner commercial blocks which are important focal points within the streetscape. Common to both are large turrets and embellished facades on both N. Salina and Ash Streets. The gabled dormers and ornate brick and tile work throughout the facade at 567-73 N. Salina St. (built c.1890) are classic details of a commercial Queen Anne style building and make this the most high style of the Queen Anne designs on the street.

The strong horizontal lines and rusticated voussoirs on the facades of the Albany Block (530-36 N. Salina St., built c.1896) modify the Queen Anne style massing of this building with characteristics of the Neo-classical style, popular at the turn of the century. This structure provides an important anchor at the southern end of the district, at the fork of N. Salina St. and Prospect Avenue.

The five houses on the 500 block of Prospect Avenue comprise the only residential group in the district. All but one are late Victorian period houses with modest Queen Anne or Neo-Classical style detailing. The exception is the imposing brick residence built in 1889 at 518 Prospect St. (corner of Ash), which combines Romanesque Revival style porches with a Queen Anne style corner turret and Baroque style facings on the dormers.

The Italians, who settled in the area after the turn of the century, introduced Mediterranean Revival design elements to the streetscape. The Spanish tile pent roof across the facade of 557-559 (built in 1915) is an example of this style used on an early twentieth century commercial style facade. Several buildings on the 700 block of the street are more typical of this design. A modest but interesting example of this exists at 702 N. Salina, built c.1926. The small, two-story structure has French doors across the entire first floor, historically a restaurant which could be opened to a sidewalk cafe. An iron balcony projecting from the second floor and the Spanish tile roof are in an excellent state of preservation.

The other important development on the street in the early twentieth century is related to Assumption Church and its position as a centerpiece for the community. The Romanesque Revival style parish center at 808 N. Salina St. (built in 1880) and the Renaissance Revival style convent adjacent at 810 N. Salina St. (built c.1900) were severely damaged in a fire that swept through the church complex in 1934. Public support enabled the restoration of the buildings within the walls that were left standing, though large portions of the parish center exterior had to be completely reconstructed. At that time, this building was enlarged and the brick rectory house at 804 N. Salina St. was constructed. The historic designs of each of the church buildings have been well preserved.

The following structures do not contribute to the historic district because they are either less than fifty years old or have been extensively altered: 619, 628-30, 642-52, 643, 706-10, 727-29, 737 & 743, 801-05, 819, 827, 829, 901, 933, N. Salina St., 516 Prospect Avenue, and the one-story addition at the front of 758 N. Salina St.

The following is an annotated building list describing each structure in the district. For further information, please refer to the building/structure inventory forms on file with the N.Y.S. Historic Preservation Office.

Statement of Significance (in one paragraph)

The North Salina Street Historic District is an architecturally and historically significant group of buildings that represent the intact core of one of Syracuse's distinctive neighborhoods. Situated on the north side of Syracuse, the district contains a five-block commercial area and a small enclave of residential, religious, and school buildings that illustrate the neighborhood's development between 1850-1934. The district contains the largest collection of architecturally distinctive nineteenth and early twentieth century commercial row buildings in Syracuse, including examples of the Italianate, Victorian Gothic, Romanesque, Queen Anne, and Neoclassical styles. The residences range from a modest example of the Federal style to a group of large-scale late Victorian period buildings that exhibit modest Queen Anne and Neoclassical style features. The area was home to the city's German community in the nineteenth century and the Italian immigrants in the early twentieth century. Well-preserved commercial buildings on either side of North Salina Street reflect the area's prosperity as an urban mercantile center, while the contiguous block of modest Queen Anne houses on Prospect Street and the dominant towers of Assumption Church demonstrate the close relationship between business and social life in a typical nineteenth-century American city.

Historically, North Salina Street was the only road between the village of Salina, settled in 1804 above the Onondaga Lake salt springs for which it was named, and an established trade route along an important Indian trail which is the present day Genesee Street. In 1806, a travelers' lodge was constructed at the intersection of these two roads, and the settlement of Syracuse was begun. The completion of the Erie Canal in 1825 brought increased prosperity to Syracuse and spurred the development of North Salina Street.

Early in the nineteenth century, North Salina Street was called "Cooper Street" due to the proliferation of cooper shops on the road, which provided barrels to the salt manufacturers in Salina. As the principal artery between the prosperous villages of Salina and Syracuse, the street was also the site of the County Courthouse, built in 1829 (burned in 1856) on the east side of the present day 600 block. The two first-generation buildings which survive today reflect this range of occupants on the street in the first half of the nineteenth century. The wood frame building at 753 North Salina Street is the last remaining example of the small, Federal style, tradesmen's homes which were once scattered along the route. Typically, the owner's business would have been located in the first floor of the house, or in a shed to the rear. Despite the addition of synthetic siding and new windows, the three-bay, side-entrance configuration of the facade can still be discerned. Diagonally across the road (set back behind a modern storefront) is a Greek Revival style house at 758 N. Salina St. Despite the addition and synthetic siding, the elegant character of the house is still apparent in the temple front form of the facade.

By mid-century, the Northside was being built-up by German immigrants, whose skill at carpentry made them valuable in building the barrels and vats used in transporting salt. North Salina Street developed as the center of their community. Assumption Church (812 N. Salina St.) was constructed in 1865 to serve the new German Catholic population. Designed by the prominent central New York architect Horatio Nelson White, the church is the most lavish of all his Romanesque Revival style churches. The baroque, fresco panels on the interior and the 4,000 pipe organ typify the wealth of architectural detail which reflects the stature and financial success of the original parishioners.

Though the salt industry declined after 1862, German craftsmen were able to transfer their mechanical and carpentry talents to the manufacture of domestic goods such as clocks and furniture. In the period of economic growth during and immediately following the Civil War, North Salina Street developed as a commercial and small manufacturing center, encouraged by civic improvements such as paved streets and sidewalks, and a street railway built in 1871. The majority of the existing brick row buildings were built during this period by the Germans, with the owner's shop on the first floor and his home or other apartments in the upper stories. The names and types of businesses listed in city directories in the last half of the nineteenth century reflect the uniform ethnic makeup of the district. These include men named Ludwig, Conrad, Markert and Hayden who were tailors, shoemakers, cigar manufacturers, milliners, cabinet makers, grocers, undertakers and saloon keepers. Typical of these, Peter Knaul sold hats and caps from his shop at 657-59 N. Salina St., with his home in the apartment above, in the 1870's and '80's. The majority of these buildings were modest in their Italianate designs; however, some reflected the prosperity and pride of their owners. More elaborate than most is the Victorian Gothic building at 745-47 N. Salina St. Built c.1875, the building was owned by Christian Freeoff who had his vinegar works and glue making operation there, as well as his home.

Toward the end of the century, as the Clinton Square area of Syracuse emerged as the city center, demand for property at the south end of North Salina Street increased, and several large "block" buildings were constructed. In 1892, Jacob Haas built the large Queen Anne style building at 601 N. Salina St., with his saloon on the first floor and apartments on the upper floors. The Albany Block at 530-36 North Salina was built in 1896 by Louis Lohman to house a combination of shops, offices, and apartments. Its architecture combines elements of the Queen Anne style, such as curved bays and projecting chimneys, with Neo-Classical style designs such as dados, rusticated archivolts and flowered medallions in the entablature. Both of these buildings were much larger than others along the street, introducing a new scale of commercial structure which was not widely imitated in the district.

The 500 block of Prospect Avenue was developed with freestanding homes for upper middle class German families during the 1880's and 1890's. Typical of these are the almost identical brick structures at 512 and 514 Prospect Ave. Both built in 1886, the Queen Anne style houses have facades dominated by two-story window bays capped by enclosed end gables. The house at 512 Prospect Ave. was originally occupied by William H. Haberle, the treasurer of Haberle Brewing Company, one of Syracuse's largest at that time. Its neighbor was owned by Dr. Leonard A. Saxer, a physician who operated out of offices at the same address. Both men were also business partners with Charles Hoffman, a highly successful entrepreneur who counted presidencies of the National Brewing Co. and the Haberle Brewing Co. in his portfolio and the Honorable Thomas Ryan, Mayor of Syracuse, among his business associates. Hoffman built his home at 518 Prospect Ave in 1889. The massive brick structure combines elements of the Romanesque Revival style in the porches with Queen Anne style massing and Baroque style dormers. Highly visible at the bend of N. Salina St. where it meets Prospect Ave., this was the last and most impressive residence constructed in the district, symbolic of the success of the German community.

At the turn of the century, N. Salina Street appeared much as it does today, and the roster of businesses in 1900 is typical of the occupants behind the storefronts from the 1870's onward. Eleven saloons lined the street, serving either their own home-brewed beer or ale from one of the several large German breweries located in the Northside. There were six groceries and meat markets here to serve the local community, and five each confectioners and furniture makers. Candies and sweets were apparently popular with the Germans; the large commercial Romanesque style building at 755 N. Salina St. was built by Joseph Walier in 1890 to house his burgeoning confectionery manufacturing business. The Victorian furniture makers normally doubled as undertakers. The most successful in this neighborhood was John Gang who built the then modern, commercial building with large plate glass windows at 800 N. Salina St. c.1900, when his business outgrew its quarters in an older building up the street at 850 N. Salina. Bakers, tailors and bootmakers were also well represented. The oldest of these was Jacob Brand, who operated his bakery out of the small, Federal style house at 753 for over forty years. Perhaps the most famous of the N. Salina St. merchants was Francis Baumer, one of the founders of the world famous Will & Baumer Candle Company. His first candle business operated out of the building at 831-33 N. Salina St. until 1890, when he constructed the building at 839-41 with its handsome, three-story, pressed metal facade with Eastlake style detailing.

Italian immigrants settled in Syracuse in 1883, after providing the labor for construction of the West Shore Railroad up the Hudson, 150 miles to the east. Some made homes among the Germans in the Northside, though not becoming a real factor in the business community until the second and third decades of the twentieth century. As early as 1900, Dr. Vincenzo Sarlo had his practice in 921 N. Salina St., a modest old building at the less fashionable end of the street. Within 15 years the status of the Italians had improved and Domenico Falcone built his "Venetian Restaurant" closer to the heart of the city at 557-59 N. Salina St. The Mediterranean influence of the design is apparent in the Spanish style pent roof over the second floor windows, behind which still exists an elegant dining room decorated with fancy plasterwork and painted murals of Venice. Falcone and his brothers also operated a bakery up the street at 649 N. Salina St. The Mediterranean influence is also present in the wrought-iron balcony and tile roof at the second floor level of each of the facades at 537 and 702 N. Salina St. The latter was built about 1926 by Antonio Simiele who produced soft-drinks during prohibition in the building next door. Here, full-height French doors opened the first floor dining room to the passers-by and indicates the intent for a sidewalk cafe.

One of the most recent buildings included in the historic district is at 911 N. Salina St. Built in 1919 as the North Side Garage, the structure represents the early popularity of the automobile in this part of the city, near the manufactories on Wolf Street.

A devastating fire swept through the Assumption Church complex in 1934, destroying most of the 1880 building now used as a parish center and causing extensive damage to the 1865 church and c.1900 convent. Reflective of the continued support of the community despite hard financial times nationwide, the buildings were quickly repaired and restored to their present appearance.

The North Salina Street Historic District was on the original route of transportation and trade between the early villages of Salina and Syracuse. It developed as a commercial center, first, to service the salt industry, and latter, as the focal point of the city's influential German and, to a lesser extent, Italian communities. It contains the highest concentration of nineteenth-century commercial row buildings in the city and is notable for its cohesive architectural character. The buildings represent the major activities of this urban neighborhood during its development, and most of them are still used in their historic capacity.

RE: North Salina Street Historic District

Dear Mr. Harwood:

As a property owner in the 600 Block of North Salina Street, Syracuse, New York, I object to my property being included in the State and National Registries of Historic Places as part of the North Salina Street Historic District.

As a property owner on North Salina Street, I have made improvements to my property in accordance with the laws of the City of Syracuse.

I also understand that if the "North Salina Street Historic District" gets the preservation designation, it will further complicate and add more governmental "red tape" in regards to remodelization and new construction in this area.

Very truly yours,

Dear Mr. Harwood;

Please be advised I am opposed to our business being included in the North Salina Street Parcel that is being nominated for inclusion in the National Register of Historic Places. I base this opinion on two substantive points and a third dealing with principal.

First, I feel that the city's codes on remodeling & building are restrictive enough to protect the quality of our neighborhood.

Secondly, I am opposed to any proposition changing our zoning status from Commercial A.

As for my third contention I am quite surprised we have not been notified of the States Proposal; a proposal with many widespread ramifications for we property owners. Thank-you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Harwood:

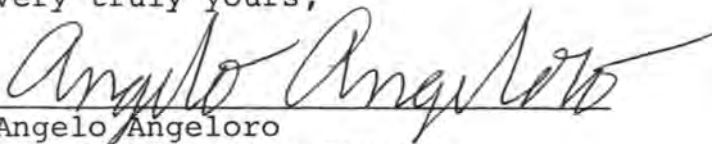

I am in objection to the listing of my property on the State and National Registries of Historic Places and part of the North Salina Street Historic District.

As a property owner on the 500 Block of North Salina Street, Syracuse, New York for many years I have made improvements to my property in accordance with the laws of the City of Syracuse.

I also understand that if the "North Salina Street Historic District" gets the preservation designation it will further complicate and add more governmental "red tape" in regards to remodelization and new construction in this area.

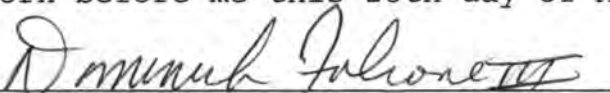

I also understand that the designation may change the commercial zoning of North Salina Street, which I also object to.

Dear Comm. Lehman and Mr. Harwood:

We do not endorse but disapprove of the National Register designation of the North Salina Street Historic District, Syracuse, New York.

Since the State does not have money for renovations and has taken away our commercial "A" zoning from our properties and the State and Landmark Association have never notified the taxpayers and Property owners of their rights, we therefore object. The Planning Board, the Commissioner of Syracuse Community Development and Permit Department have not notified us either. The Common Council has not notified us either.

We also see that the Landmark Association of Park Street, Syracuse, New York has never filed for a permit or application for the North Salina Street Historic District.

The only map shown, was by Randall T. Crawford dated 09/13/76, drawn while Mr. Crawford was a student at school. We feel that the State has taken upon itself to file the map of North Salina District from 500 to 800 Blocks on the East Side and 500 to 900 Blocks on the West Side which no application was ever filed by any of the parties involved, only the State in the legal notes of the Post Standard dated 02/15/85. The Syracuse North Salina District has pushed it on the taxpayers and property owners of the new district from Butternut Street to Union Park.

We feel that it is and unjust law taken by the State, Landmark Association, City Permit Department, Comm. Dave Michel, Community Development Director, Ann Michel, Chairman of the Planning Board and the Common Council.

The only map shown, was by Randall T. Crawford dated 09/13/76, drawn while Mr. Crawford was a student at school. We feel that the State has taken upon itself to file the map of North Salina District from 500 to 800 Blocks on the East Side and 500 to 900 Blocks on the West Side which no application was ever filed by any of the parties involved, only the State in the legal notes of the Post Standard dated 02/15/85. The Syracuse North Salina District has pushed it on the taxpayers and property owners of the new district from Butternut Street to Union Park.

We feel that it is and unjust law taken by the State, Landmark Association, City Permit Department, Comm. Dave Michel, Community Development Director, Ann Michel, Chairman of the Planning Board and the Common Council.

Dear Comm. Lehman and Mr. Harwood:

We do not endorse but disapprove of the National Register designation of the North Salina Street Historic District, Syracuse, New York.

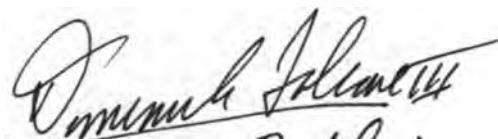

Since the State does not have money for renovations and has taken away our commercial "A" zoning from our properties and the State and Landmark Association have never notified the taxpayers and Property owners of their rights, we therefore object. The Planning Board, the Commissioner of Syracuse Community Development and Permit Department have not notified us either. The Common Council has not notified us either.

We also see that the Landmark Association of Park Street, Syracuse, New York has never filed for a permit or application for the North Salina Street Historic District.

Dear Comm. Lehman and Mr. Harwood:

We do not endorse but disapprove of the National Register designation of the North Salina Street Historic District, Syracuse, New York.

Since the State does not have money for renovations and has taken away our commercial "A" zoning from our properties and the State and Landmark Association have never notified the taxpayers and Property owners of their rights, we therefore object. The Planning Board, the Commissioner of Syracuse Community Development and Permit Department have not notified us either. The Common Council has not notified us either.

We also see that the Landmark Association of Park Street, Syracuse, New York has never filed for a permit or application for the North Salina Street Historic District.

The only map shown, was by Randall T. Crawford dated 09/13/76, drawn while Mr. Crawford was a student at school. We feel that the State has taken upon itself to file the map of North Salina District from 500 to 800 Blocks on the East Side and 500 to 900 Blocks on the West Side which no application was ever filed by any of the parties involved, only the State in the legal notes of the Post Standard dated 02/15/85. The Syracuse North Salina District has pushed it on the taxpayers and property owners of the new district from Butternut Street to Union Park.

We feel that it is and unjust law taken by the State, Landmark Association, City Permit Department, Comm. Dave Michel, Community Development Director, Ann Michel, Chairman of the Planning Board and the Common Council.

Dear Comm. Lehman and Mr. Harwood:

We do not endorse but disapprove of the National Register designation of the North Salina Street Historic District, Syracuse, New York.

Since the State does not have money for renovations and has taken away our commercial "A" zoning from our properties and the State and Landmark Association have never notified the taxpayers and Property owners of their rights, we therefore object. The Planning Board, the Commissioner of Syracuse Community Development and Permit Department have not notified us either. The Common Council has not notified us either.

We also see that the Landmark Association of Park Street, Syracuse, New York has never filed for a permit or application for the North Salina Street Historic District.

The only map shown, was by Randall T. Crawford dated 09/13/76, drawn while Mr. Crawford was a student at school. We feel that the State has taken upon itself to file the map of North Salina District from 500 to 800 Blocks on the East Side and 500 to 900 Blocks on the West Side which no application was ever filed by any of the parties involved, only the State in the legal notes of the Post Standard dated 02/15/85. The Syracuse North Salina District has pushed it on the taxpayers and property owners of the new district from Butternut Street to Union Park.

We feel that it is and unjust law taken by the State, Landmark Association, City Permit Department, Comm. Dave Michel, Community Development Director, Ann Michel, Chairman of the Planning Board and the Common Council.

Dear Commissioner Lehman:

On behalf of the Preservation Association of Central New York, we would like to express our organization's firm support of the North Salina Street National Register Historic District.

Our organization, as you know, not only processed the nomination, but has been actively involved since its inception. We have taken exceptional measures to aid the State in informing the property owners, neighborhood and business groups, and the Syracuse Common Council of the pending designation and the positive benefits of listing. Although there are a very few vocal opponents to the District, we have generally found overwhelming support.

We appreciate your consideration of this matter and we are pleased to submit this formal letter of support to list the North Salina Street Historic District in the National Register.
