D.C.C. & P. Inscription B(exploration theme)

This resource exhibits no architectural features. It is accessible only from the confluence of the Green and Colorado Rivers. The setting remains nearly as it was when the William Brewster Stanton's railroad survey expedition visited the site nearly one hundred years ago and left their company's initials, survey information and date. The inscription remains visible and shows no evidence that it was ever more extensive than it is today. It must be assumed that the D.C.C. & P. inscription looks as it did when placed there in 1889.
