Summary

Koon House #6 is a single-story, intersecting gable roof residence constructed of relatively small logs placed vertically and split in half so that the round, unfinished side faces the exterior while the smooth, flat side faces the interior. Its floor plan is irregular, with a recessed porch being placed beneath a gabled porch roof on the eastern elevation. The building is supported on concrete block piers and covered with an asphalt shingle roof.

Elaboration

Koon House #6 is a single-story, intersecting gable roof residence constructed of relatively small logs placed vertically and split in half so that the round, unfinished side faces the exterior while the smooth, flat side faces the interior. Its floor plan is irregular, with a recessed porch being placed beneath a gabled porch roof on the eastern elevation. There are no visible chimneys. The building is supported on concrete block piers and covered with an asphalt shingle roof.

The eastern or front elevation is composed of the end of the main, gabled section of the house, into which a recessed porch has been set at its southeast corner and into which another gabled section intersects from the south. The gable roof porch is supported upon composite wood columns and covers a wood porch deck that leads to a single-leaf entrance and a single four-over-four wood window. The wall to the north is lit by a pair of identical windows, and the side gable wall to the south is lit by another identical pair.

The southern elevation is sheltered by the carport (which appears to be later, but which in fact may be original). The wall beneath features a central, single-leaf entrance that is flanked by three windows on either side of varying sizes. The western or rear elevation has been refinished with flat wood paneling; it is lit with a single window to the south and a pair of smaller windows to the north, near the center. The northern elevation is composed of two larger windows placed evenly across the house's main section and a smaller window toward the rear.

The known alterations are limited to what appears to be the recovering of the rear vertical log wall and the enclosing of a porch at the building's northwest corner. Otherwise the building is largely unaltered and in good condition.

Summary Criterion C, local significance

Koon House #6 is being nominated to the National Register under Criterion C with local significance by virtue of both its distinctive vertical, split log construction and its direct association with Hillary Henry "Pappy" Koon, the local farmer and carpenter who built these unique structures. As such, it is associated with the historic context The Vertical Split Log Buildings of "Slabtown," Arkansas, 1935-1945 and the historic significance of these properties noted therein.

Elaboration

Built c. 1940, the building known as Koon House #6 was constructed by local farmer and carpenter Hillary Henry "Pappy" Koon as one of several vertical split log buildings he constructed for residents of the relatively new community that sprang up along State Highway 167 south of Sheridan after it was paved by the state.

It was this building and the others built like it that gave the community the name of "Slabtown," as it was mistakenly believed that these buildings were of slab construction, which in fact they were not. Rather, the split vertical logs are notched into a sill below and plate above which supports the roof, and the logs serve as the load-bearing structure of the building. It is this unique construction method that distinguishes these buildings architecturally and thus the reason for their nomination.
