Architecture: An exceptionally fine example of Colonial architecture, with both Greek Revival and Federal influences. The architect was Joseph Jackson, an Irish immigrant who, before coming to Green Bay in 1837, apparently lived in the east long enough to gain an outstanding grasp of and appreciation for Colonial architecture. The Martin home was Jackson's first commission but he later built many of Green Bay's finest Colonial homes.

Political and historical: Hazelwood has been described as one of the half dozen most historically significant structures in Wisconsin. It was in this home that Morgan L. Martin did the preliminary drafting of the state constitution which remains in effect in Wisconsin today.

Martin was born March 31, 1805, graduated from Hamilton College, Clinton, New York in 1824, studied law in Lowville, New York and moved to Detroit in 1826. He was admitted to the bar there in 1827 and later that year moved to Green Bay. From 1831 to 1836 he served as a member of the Michigan territorial legislature. When Wisconsin received territorial status in 1836, Martin and Moses M. Strong called a convention at Green Bay to organize the Democratic party in Wisconsin. From 1838 to 1844, Martin served in the upper house of Wisconsin's territorial legislature and was president of this body in 1842-1843. From 1845-1847 he was territorial delegate in Congress and in 1847-1848 served as president of the second Wisconsin constitutional convention, which finally produced a state constitution in 1847. Morgan, who did most of the preliminary work on the constitution in Hazelwood, at a table which still stands in the home, was cited as being one of the guiding spirits who framed the charter under which Wisconsin still operates.

Martin served as a state assemblyman in 1855 and state senator in 1858-1859. During the Civil War he served as paymaster in the Union Army. After the Civil War, Martin again served in the state assembly (1874). He was appointed Indian Agent in 1866 and held that position until 1869. After practicing law again for a time, Martin was elected Brown County Judge in 1875. He remained on that bench until his death in 1887. He was one of the leading figures in the early history of Wisconsin.

Marked with an Official Wisconsin Historical Marker.
