Describe present and historic physical appearance.

Tanglewood is located on a four-acre rural tract of land on the western side of Pike County Road #468, less than one mile north of its intersection with State Highway 48. Accessed from the county road by a circular graveled drive, Tanglewood is a two-and-a-half story, frame Greek Revival house that originally rested upon stone piers, later replaced on the perimeter by a brick foundation wall. The house is sheltered by a gabled roof that is pierced on the front slope by two gabled dormers dating to ca. 1940. The house is flanked at each gable end by an outside chimney featuring cap detailing and buttressed bases that are common to pre-Civil War houses in neighboring Amite County. A double-tiered gallery extends the full-width of the facade and is sheltered beneath the broken slope of the roof. The gallery is supported on both levels by wooden posts linked by a railing of rectangular-sectioned balusters; the first-story gallery floor has been reconstructed in concrete. The gallery posts are shallow in profile but wide in front to give the appearance of a box column. Both stories of the easterly facade are matching and are finished in horizontal tongue-and-groove boards with a baseboard. The facade is a six-bay, symmetrical composition with each three-bay half containing an entrance doorway flanked by windows (w-d-w-w-d-w). The doorway and window openings of the facade have narrow, unmolded surrounds with corner blocks. All windows of the house are filled with six-over-six, double-hung sash and are closed by shutterblinds, except for the attic windows which are filled with four-over-four double-hung sash. The entrance doorways are filled with eight-light transoms (arranged in two tiers of four lights) atop single-leaf, molded four-panel doors.

The interior plan is a double-pile plan, two rooms across, with no central hallway. The interior door and window surrounds feature narrow unmolded surrounds with diminutive corner blocks identical to the Hampton Lea House in Amite County. Baseboards have two fascias and are unmolded. Interior doors are two-paneled and molded and set beneath four-light transoms. All interior mantel pieces but one are original and they are simple and pilastered.

State significance of property, and justify criteria, criteria considerations, and areas and periods of significance noted above.

Tanglewood is a vernacular Greek Revival plantation house that derives regional distinction from its two-and-a-half story form, double-tiered porch, and matching first and second-story facades. Tanglewood exhibits stylistic details that relate closely to surviving pre-Civil War houses in neighboring Amite County. The close similarity between the Pike County's Tanglewood and Amite County's 1859 Hampton Lea House (Hampton Lea House, Amite County, National Register File, Mississippi Department of Archives and History, Jackson ) indicate that both houses were probably the work of the same builder. Both Tanglewood and Hampton Lea houses feature door and window surrounds with narrow unmolded facings and diminutive corner blocks, matching stairways, and transomed interior doorways. Additional architectural details shared by Tanglewood and most pre-Civil War houses in Amite County include exterior chimneys with buttressed bases and capitals with cornice and frieze band, log or stone piers, gallery posts that are made to resemble box columns in width but are shallow in profile, and flush board walls instead of plaster. Tanglewood was built as the residence of Joel Jackson Coney (Pike County Records were destroyed by fire ca. 1882). The overall integrity of the house is good with significant alterations limited to the replacement of one original mantel piece, the installation of roof dormers and a concrete gallery floor, and the 1980's addition of a rear, one-story wing.

The main staircase to the upper story is located in the southerly front room and features rectangular-sectioned newels and balusters. The stair runs in a northerly direction along the westerly wall to an intermediate landing, where it makes a quarter turn to continue in an easterly direction along the northerly wall. The stair terminates in the southern, second-story front room. The builder of the house provided no access between the southern and northern halves of the second story of the house. The northern half of the second story is accessed from the first story by a second staircase located in the northerly, first-story rear room. This stair, which is similar in detail to the main staircase, runs principally along the southerly wall and terminates in the rear room above. Although the second-story mantel pieces match the original of the first story, the door and window surrounds lack the corner block embellishment of the lower story.

A new, gabled-roof frame addition at the rear has been built to replace an earlier deteriorated addition. Historic dependency buildings are limited to a log crib located just northeast of the main house.

To the north of the house are two noncontributing outbuildings: a masonry well house and dairy barn, both of relatively recent construction.
