ARCHITECTURAL DESCRIPTION:

The Harrington Residence is rectangular in plan, and one story high with an attic. It is sided with shiplap and has a steeply pitched gable roof with boxed eaves. The windows are four over four double hung sash with simple wood surrounds. The wrap around front porch has seven boxed posts which rest on small wooded plinths. Some of the first story window sashes and surrounds and a one attic window have been replaced. A garage has been attached to the rear of the building. The house measures 34' x 28'.

HISTORICAL DESCRIPTION:

The Harrington House is on a piece of land that Joel Palmer deeded to his son, William, in December 1875. The piece included the acreage east of the platted Town of Dayton up to the Brookside Cemetery. In 1879, William sold off a 120 foot square parcel at the east corner of Mill and Third to Daniel Harrington. In the 1880 census records, Harrington is listed as a carpenter. It is assumed that Harrington built the house as a residence for himself soon after acquiring the property. He apparently died in 1882 as the Estate of Daniel Harrington sold the property in July of 1882 to Peter Werfs.

In 1890, the property was sold to John Baxter; it is not known whether he resided there before living in his residence at Fifth and Church (Resource #24). After a series of owners, Ernest and Flora Duzan acquired the property in 1943. It appears around this time that the original shape of the parcel was modified by the realignment of Highway 221. The property is still owned today by members of the Duzan Family.

SIGNIFICANCE: The Harrington House is an example of a local interpretation of the Classic Revival style of architecture. The house was constructed by its owner, a carpenter by trade. Criterion c.
