NATIONAL REGISTER CRITERIA STATEMENT (if applicable)

The Tiffany-Leonard House is significant for its association with the developing mill economy, its new gable-front orientation and Greek Revival ornament, and its use of brick as a building material. It meets National Register criteria A and C at the local level and retains integrity of location, materials, workmanship, design, feeling, and association. The boundaries indicated on the attached assessors map are those of current ownership.

ARCHITECTURAL SIGNIFICANCE Describe important architectural features and evaluate in terms of other buildings within the community.

This brick temple-front house with its two story quadristyle porch and facade pediment is one of the most imposing 19th-century residences in Southbridge. That it was also considered to be one of the most outstanding of its own day is suggested by a comment made in the Quinebaug Historical Leaflets written around the turn of the 20th-century. This source reported that the Judson-Litchfield House (form #D-448) (ca. 1830-1837) on South Street was built so as to "outrival" Ammidown Castle" and the Be a Tiffany or Leonard house."

Although the temple form of the Tiffany-Leonard House and much of its ornament is distinctly Greek Revival, the slimness of its reeded Doric columns and the less massive treatment of the entablature and cornice are inspired by the earlier Federal style. The use of brick rather than wood construction is also more typical in Southbridge of Federal period residences than of later ones. (See Continuation Sheet)

HISTORICAL SIGNIFICANCE Explain the role owners played in local or state history and how the building relates to the development of the community.

Bella Tiffany about 1832, this house was owned for a much longer period by the Leonard family. It belonged to Manning Leonard in 1855 and was still owned by his heirs in 1898.

Bella Tiffany (1786-1851) was the original partner of Samuel Slater (the so-called "father of cotton manufacture in the United States") in establishing Slater & Tiffany, the first cotton mill in Webster, Massachusetts about 1812. According to Ammidown's Historical Collector (1870): "Bella Tiffany, John Tyson and Edward Howard were the chief managers - the pioneers, the moving spirits - that executed the plans of Mr. Slater in founding what is now the principal business of Webster..." As a result of a depression in cotton manufacturing which occurred due to a flood of English manufactured goods on the American Market following the close of the War of 1812, Tiffany sold out his holding in the business in 1816. He then dealt in "the commission sale of American cotton and wool manufactures" in Boston and New York. Retiring from that business in about 1832, Tiffany moved himself and his family to Southbridge "where he maintained a favorable social position." While in Southbridge, he was involved in the founding of the Southbridge bank and numerous public improvements. He also represented Southbridge in the state Legislature. His wife, Deborah, died in 1839 at the age 52.

Manning Leonard was an active Southbridge businessman and citizen during a major portion of the 19th-century. He served as clerk of the Central Manufacturing Company (form #B-203) when it was formed in 1837. By 1845 he was a holder of fifteen of the eighty shares

During the 1830's and 1840's in larger Worcester County towns, such as Worcester, houses of well-to-do families like the Tiffanys were being built which were wholly Greek Revival in character. Hints of the earlier Federal style lingered longer in smaller outlying communities like Southbridge. Other Southbridge houses built in the 1830's and 1840's, such as the Judson-Litchfield House (mentioned above) and the Hamilton Millwright's/Mill Agent's House (form # D-461), display a blending of characteristics of both styles.

in the company. With Chester A. Dresser he became an owner of the mill in 1858, finally withdrawing from the business in 1863. Leonard was active in conservative political circles in town and served as justice of the peace from 1849 to 1883. He was married to Mary F. Ammidown, the daughter of Ebenezer and Rebecca Fisher Ammidown, in 1840. They had several children.

At the time of the construction of this house, the section of the east side of Elm Street between Main Street and the original Congregational Church (1822) was occupied by barns and sheds and only one residence, that of Holmes Ammidown (no longer standing) which had been erected in 1830. The first Town Hall was erected on the site of the present Town Hall in 1838, several years after the construction of the Tiffany-Leonard House.
