Continuation SheetSection number 7 Page 1Description

The Arthur W. Hoofman House is a one-and-one-half story, brick English Revival residence. Its irregular roofline, composed of parallel and intersecting gables of different heights and asymmetrically-placed chimneys, belies the virtually rectangular plan of the house. An exterior, stepped brick chimney is placed toward the west on the northern or front elevation and an interior square brick chimney rises from the western slope of the intersecting rear ell. The roof is covered with composition shingles, the walls are constructed of tapestry brick, and the continuous foundation is formed from poured concrete.

The northern or front elevation is composed of an arched entry to the east, which accesses a recessed porch, a projecting, gable roof, arched entrance porch, and a western wall divided by a stepped brick chimney with concrete offsets. The eastern recessed porch entry is formed by brick piers and features a low, decorative brick balustrade built of tapestry bricks which form low, squat columns. The gable roof entrance porch features a steep gable roof and an entrance arch accented by a tall, decorative keystone and springers. The chimney to the west rises through a blank stuccoed dormer and is punctuated with a blind arch which is also accented with a decorative keystone. Two pair of twelve-pane wood casement windows flank the chimney and complete the elevation.

The eastern elevation consists of the one-and-one-half rear shed at the southern end, the side wall of the gable in the center, and the two gable ends to the north. The rear hipped roof addition is sheathed with novelty siding on the upper half-story and fenestrated with two pair of nine-over-one wood sash windows on each floor. The side wall of the intersecting rear gable is symmetrically fenestrated, with two pair of nine-over-one wood sash flanking a central one-over-one wood sash window. The two northern gable ends are placed so that the southernmost is flush with the side wall of the rear gable while the northern gable projects slightly. The gable ends are decorated with half-timbering and stucco in their pediments. The northern gable features a simple arched porch opening while the larger gable end to the south is accessed by two identical arched openings decorated with formed concrete springers.

The rear addition extends across the width of the southern elevation and is composed of a western shed section in addition to the hipped roof section. It features a central entry in the hipped roof section flanked by two pairs of one-over-one sash windows and another entry in the shed roof section.

The western elevation is composed of the southern one-and-one-half story shed roof section, the side of the rear gable roof section and the end of the front intersecting gable. The gable end is decorated with half-timbering in the pediment and fenestrated with a pair of twelve-pane casement windows. A group of three windows is placed in the center of the side wall of the rear gable ell and a smaller one-over-one sash window is placed to the south. A pair of one-over-one sash windows in the side wall and a single one-over-one sash window in the upper part of the shed section complete the elevation.

With the exception of the shed section of the rear addition and the replacement of some of the windows, the Arthur W. Hoofman House is intact. It is in good condition.

Significance

Criterion C, local significance

The Arthur W. Hoofman House (Part E, Historic Context #4) was constructed by a builder known only as Mr. Kayler and was named for the client who commissioned it as his private residence. Arthur W. Hoofman was an agricultural entrepreneur who cultivated strawberry plants and shipped them to other growers in both the United States and abroad during the time of the strawberry boom in White County.

The Arthur W. Hoofman House is significant as the best high-style English Revival design in this neighborhood of Searcy. However, it is significant also for its associations with the local building trade which grew in response to the needs of the growing middle class for high quality yet economical homes.

The improvements in both transportation and communication not only encouraged the dissemination of new architectural styles but also increased the availability and lowered the cost of various building materials and prefabricated architectural elements. A variety of entrepreneurs sought to attract new homeowners through being able to take advantage of these conditions and offer a new stylish home design at a reasonable cost without the expense of an architect or craftsman builder. The result was the smaller scale suburban home. These home designs exhibited a significant amount of detail and bespoke a certain level of owner status while being generally affordable.

Of particular favor among such homeowners was the English Revival style. Frequently constructed of brick, it was available at a reasonable cost and recalled the large Tudor style homes that were being designed for wealthier suburbanites around the United States. The Arthur W. Hoofman House is a remarkably intact and high-quality example of this trend.

Reviewer's Comments

The boundaries of this property are presently located along building lines. A resource listed in the National Register should include all features of the property which contribute to its significance. In almost all cases this includes its historic setting. Page 77 of National Register Bulletin 16, Guidelines for Completing National Register of Historic Places Forms, states that "the boundaries of buildings should include the land surrounding the building, unless the lot occupied by the building contains no surrounding land as in the central business district of most cities."

Please revise the boundaries to include the property historically associated with the resource. If a portion of the original setting has lost its integrity, please explain.

ABSTRACT/SUMMARY COMMENTS:

This small house illustrates the adaptation of Tudor Revival architectural detailing & design to a relatively modest house - an adaptation made possible by the mass distribution of building materials and stock designs in the 1920s & 1930s.

Concerns raised in earlier return have been addressed.
