DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Greek Revival style of white clapboard with brick foundation piers. Portico supported by Doric columns on pedestals, gable roof. Large central door is flanked by smaller doors, the latter crowned by a transom. Building is four bays long (third is a door). Others are large rectangular three-sash windows with clear panes. The square tower which rises from the gable ridge pole contains two sections. The first is enclosed but possesses a section which may have been open formerly. The second, which contains the bell, is open. Its roof is supported by four round columns.

Interior - Two side aisles lead to communion table, in front of a high wall-type pulpit that is entered from either side by a balustraded staircase. Floor of random-width boards. Box pews. Slave gallery in rear is supported by chamfered columns.

Church and cemetery surrounded by ancient moss laden trees.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The church and a dwelling are the remains of the old town of Gillisonville (one-time seat of old Beaufort District), which was burned by Sherman's Army in 1865.

Church was constituted 1836 as the summer home of Coosawhatchie Baptist Church so it might escape the insects and "fever" of the hot summer months. Built 1838, and named Gillisonville Baptist Church in 1886.

Architecturally significant: It was apparently constructed by local craftsman and possesses many original features such as the box pews, flooring, and balcony with columns.

Historically: Church was used as headquarters for a contingent of Union troops during the Civil War. The old communion set was etched by a Union soldier "War of 1861-2-3-4. Feb. 1865. This is done by a Yankee soldier." The set is still in use.
