Summary

Located at 637 Park Avenue in Hot Springs, the c.1936 Bellaire Court is composed of a Craftsman bungalow owner's residence/manager's office connected to five attached Craftsman bungalow style guest units and a separate building consisting of three bungalow guest units designed in the same style. Laid out in a recurrent tourist court arrangement, the "L" shaped plan, the Bellaire has undergone minor exterior and interior alterations, little of which have affected its historic integrity. The wood-framed, brick veneer cottages are currently rented as apartments.

Elaboration

All of the structures are of wood frame construction, with buff-colored brick veneer and brown brick trim at the window sills, lintels, and at the arched parapets above the original garages. The cottages have porches with brick pedestals and battered wood columns. Railing on the porches consists of decorative clay tile units laid horizontally to create a geometric pattern. The gable ends of the roofs of both the owner's residence/manager's office and each rental unit have a clipped gable, or jerkin head, facing the front. The roofs are covered with composition shingles. The original windows are double hung wood, with the upper sash having 12 lights over a single-light lower sash.

Bellaire Court is laid out in an "L" shape, with the inside of the "L" being the auto court accessed from Park Avenue. The "L" shape layout was one of the most common for tourist courts of this era. The owner's residence/manager's office faces Park Avenue with the long leg of the "L" running perpendicular to Park Avenue. Five of the cottages face the auto court, while the remaining three face Magnolia Street to the north.

Each of the cottages originally had a one car garage. The façade of the garage has an arched brick parapet above the garage door. The garage was at grade level, with the rental units and porches raised three steps above grade. The garages were enclosed for use as additional interior space when the units were converted to apartments during the mid-1970's. The five units facing the auto court were enclosed with 12" wood lap siding, painted brown to match the brick trim. They have a 2'x3' sliding glass window, and various styles of exterior doors. The garages of the three units facing Magnolia Street were enclosed with three double-hung windows which filled the garage door opening, with brick below the windows to match the existing walls.

With the exception of the enclosure of the original garages, the exterior of the buildings are very close to the original construction. A few of the units, including the owner's residence/manager's office, have had aluminum awnings installed over some doors and windows.

Summary

The Bellaire Court Historic District is being nominated under Criteria A and C with local significance as an important contributing to highway and transportation-related architecture in Arkansas between the years 1910–1965. Bellaire Court is one of the finest extant examples of a Craftsman style tourist court on Park Avenue in Hot Springs, Arkansas. The district consists of two buildings. The larger of the two buildings contains the owner's residence/office, which is attached to five connected guest units. The smaller building contains three guest units. Bellaire Court remains virtually intact on both the interior and exterior of the building.

Elaboration

Bellaire Court was one of the first tourist courts to grace Park Avenue as the conversion from large residential homes to commercial businesses aimed at automobile travelers began in the mid to late-1930s. Beginning with the completion of the paved Little Rock-Hot Springs highway (Highway 70) in 1925, Park Avenue being the final stretch into "the Spa City," residents of Hot Springs and Park Avenue saw an opportunity to "make a buck" off the growing automobile traffic the highway guaranteed. In addition to being a convenient overnight stay en route to Dallas, Texas, Hot Springs thrived as a tourist destination. Known primarily for the healing powers of the thermal waters that flowed from its hillsides, Hot Springs also boasted alligator and ostrich farms, a horse-racing track, several theaters, and two amusement parks during its visitation peak. With the growth of automobile traffic, and the expansion of the city of Hot Springs in the 1930s–40s, travelers began looking for convenient and accessible overnight lodging near highways. The high-class downtown hotels could not offer on-site parking for the most part, and carried additional expenses such as porter's fees for baggage handling and charges for clubs and social offerings.

As a result, traveler services, including tourist courts and service stations, began appearing along Park Avenue because of its proximity to Hot Springs' major attractions and entertainment venues. The tourist courts along Park Avenue are generally a conglomeration of widely-circulated tourist court "plan books" and popular architectural styles of the period, with a little of the individual owner's/builder's personality thrown in for good measure.

The Bellaire Court, built circa 1936, consists of a Craftsman bungalow serving as the owner's residence/manager's office, and eight individual cottages in the Craftsman style. The Craftsman style utilized by the builder was a popular residential architectural style during the 1930s. Tourist courts aimed to be "a home away from home" for their guests, so it is no surprise that popular residential styles were used in commercial construction during this period. The wood-framed building is covered in brick veneer with Craftsman detailing on the interior and exterior. The condition of the building, fine Craftsman details, and minimally-altered exterior and interior of Bellaire Court's guest units and owner's residence/manager's office make it eligible for nomination under Criterion C to the National Register.

Early records of Bellaire Court are minimal, with the primary identifying information coming from the City Directories of Hot Springs. The building first appears as lodge apartments in the 1938 City Directory under the ownership of Frank I. Clark. Little is known about Mr. Clark and his occupation, but he did convert the original Bellaire Lodge Apartments to Bellaire Tourist Camp in 1939, and finally to Bellaire Tourist Court in 1943. By the early-1950s, medical advancements made drugs more readily available for ailments previously treated with thermal baths. Combine this with the rise in popularity of several recreational lakes south of Hot Springs, and tourists began to abandon the courts of Park Avenue. In the 1951 City Directory, ownership of Bellaire Courts shifts to John H. Howard, and was converted back to apartments in the mid-1970s as it remains presently. Because Hot Springs moved south and west toward the lakes and because of the availability of land open to development surrounding the city, many of the tourist courts along Park Avenue have remained virtually unaltered. In their current state, neglect has been their biggest enemy, although the majority remaining are used in some capacity, several still hosting travelers as motels.

Bellaire Court Historic District is being nominated under Criterion A for local significance because of its role as one of the earliest tourist courts on Park Avenue serving automobile travelers along the Little Rock – Hot Springs Highway as the city changed with the demand for convenient, accessible, and stylish overnight lodging for visitors to Hot Springs. It is also being nominated under Criterion C as an excellent example of a Craftsman designed tourist court. The nomination is being submitted under the multiple property listing "Arkansas Highway and Transportation Era Architecture, 1910-1965" in conjunction with the historic context "Arkansas Highway History and Architecture, 1910-1965."
