DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Angus Hotel dominates a prime location at the intersection of Western and Selby Avenues in the Saint Anthony Hill area of Saint Paul. The structure is divided into four distinct five storey masses separated by airways and linked on street level by stone arches. The corner portion forms the focal point and pivotal element of the building; it is dominated by a tower. The other three portions (one fronting on Western Avenue and two on Selby) are identical in mass and architectural treatment.

Architecturally, the Angus Hotel represents the high Victorian eclectic tastes of the late 1880s. A combination of materials is used throughout to accomplish design effect. Red pressed brick is used in the upper four storeys over a street level of rusticated pinkish Bayfield sandstone. Accent is provided by elaborate pressed metal bay windows which extend above the street level to the roof. The roof line is highlighted by a corbelled brick cornice above which is a handsomely moulded parapet of galvanized iron and copper, Each storey is defined by a beltcourse of brick or stone which continues around diminutive tournels at the corners. These are surmounted by slate cone-shaped roofs; the similarly designed large cone over the major corner tower has been removed.

The street level retains original openings for fenestration. This level is devoted to commercial space, lobbies, dining rooms and food preparation areas. The interior of the building is constructed as to provide against spread of fire. Each area is isolated from the others by twenty-inch firewalls and floors packed with mineral wool. Stairways are of iron.

When constructed in 1887, the building was designed as apartments or flats. Each flat comprised five or six large rooms. The flats were accessible from private halls which branch off from the reception halls on each floor; these reception halls were provided with elevator access. Each flat was arranged to allow the parlor to have a large bay window with stained glass transoms and a fireplace with a cherry mantel. Other woodwork throughout is of oak. Besides the parlor were a dining room, chambers, bathroom, and kitchen. Kitchens in this building were considered extremely modern in that gas stoves were provided for cooking. In addition, the landlord provided curtains for all windows to insure uniformity when viewed from the exterior.

In 1893, the apartments were converted into hotel rooms and suites, however relatively little physical alteration was necessary. Also at that time the lobbies were paneled with oak and beveled mirrors of geometric design were installed. Since 1893 the building functioned as a hotel until it closed in 1971. It was then in a deteriorated condition, however the 1893 fixtures, decorative treatment, room arrangements, and exterior architectural elements remained. The property was purchased in 1973 and work is now in progress to restore the street level and apartments to their 1880s appearance.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Saint Paul architects Hermann Kretz and William H. Thomas were commissioned in 1887 to design the Blair Flats at the request of a progressive property owner named Frank P. Blair. The building was exemplary of current tastes in the high Victorian mode of architectural design and at the time of completion was considered one of the most fashionable apartment buildings in Saint Paul. It was noted in 1888 for high quality workmanship, comfort, convenience, and modern amenities. The cost totaled over $300,000.

The building was described with reference to Blair's enterprise in 1888: "It is situated in one of the most fashionable neighborhoods of the city, and is passed, upon either side, by a principal horsecar line and cable road, making it so accessible that it is practically downtown, and yet enjoys the fresh air and residential surroundings. The man who had the courage to put enough capital into this building to make it, in every respect, a house of many homes, free from the serious objections found in a poorly-planned, cheaply-constructed building, is Mr. F.P. Blair, who has made his money in Saint Paul and is investing it here."

In 1893 the Blair was converted into a hotel and re-named the Albion. It was during this time that the apartments were transformed into suites and the building operated as a residential hotel. In 1911, the hotel changed ownership and name. It was purchased by transportation magnet Thomas Lowry and re-named the Angus Hotel to commemorate one of Lowry's oil wells. The Angus remained in Lowry's hands until 1918. From that point the hotel changed hands a number of times and the once-fashionable neighborhood went through transition and deterioration. The hotel closed in 1971.

Presently undergoing restoration, the Angus Hotel is both architecturally and commercially significant in the history of Saint Paul. It is basically unchanged since its conversion from apartments to hotel in 1893 and is one of Saint Paul's most recognized examples of fashionable Victorian architecture. The Angus Hotel also exemplifies a bygone lifestyle and economic character of a neighborhood, as well as efforts of entrepeneurs such as Frank P. Blair to develop profitable enterprises in Saint Paul.
