Handsome Ionic columns, delicate drawn-wire railing on the porch and balcony, and perfect proportions of the white wooden structure are features of this beautiful ante-bellum home, considered an outstanding example of the Greek Revival architecture of the Old South. It was built in 1853 by Judge Asa Holt.

The Holt's home became known as the Cannon Ball House after it was struck by a cannon ball from Union forces under General George Stoneman in East Macon during the battle of Dunlap Hill July 30, 1864. General Stoneman's large body of Federal Calvary advanced on the Clinton Road within about three miles of East Macon. The cannon ball "struck the sand sidewalk, passed through the second column from the left on the gallery and entered the parlor over a window, landing unexploded in the hall. Its course may be traced by the mended column, a patch in the parlor plaster and a dent in the hall floor." Mrs. Holt displayed the cannon ball on a parlor table until she gave it to the Macon Volunteers who participated in the defense of Macon.

In 1963 the Sidney Lanier Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, purchased the house from a descendant of Judge Helt living in the old family residence. It is being restored for preservation as a museum and chapter house.

The two parlors have been furnished to recreate the sorority rooms of the Adelphean Society, which was the first secret sorority for college women, the mother of the Alpha Delta Pi Sorority, and the Philomathaen Society (Phi Mu Sorority) which were organized in 1851 and 1852 respectively in old Wesleyan Female College. Adelphean Hall was restored and dedicated in 1942 in the Conservatory building of Wesleyan College, with furnishings historically authentic of the times of the society's founding. The Phi Mu Hall was restored in the same elegant manner, and both rooms were special attractions at old Wesleyan until the demolition of the building in 1962.

The other rooms of the house are also furnished with handsome antique pieces and ornaments, gold-leaf mirrors, beautiful crystal and china which are gifts from Macon homes dating as far back as the era in which the Cannon Ball House was built, creating an atmosphere of charm and elegance.
