The present arched windows and door at ground level are the most recent in a series of alterations over the years, adapting the building to various uses. There is evidence that the original entry was to the left, opening into a hall and stairway, and that the windows matched those above in placement and size. Of the old interior finish, nothing remains on the ground floor, but at the second floor much paneled wainscoting has been preserved, with room cornices and fireplace trim. The stair and room division at the third floor seem also to be original. Radical alterations on the first floor reflect the uses to which the property has been subjected in the past, including a dry goods and hardware store, a school, a plumbing and stove firm that installed large plate glass windows, and finally a restaurant.

On the exterior the brickwork remains nearly intact except below the belt course on the facade. The gambrel roof exhibits a wide moulded cornice with modillions beneath, and below these a row of dentils. These details are repeated in miniature at the level and raking cornices of the three pedimented dormers in the front roof slope that light the third story and account for much of the character of the whole. Twin chimneys rise from the end walls, carrying out the balanced arrangement. The roof covering is modern composition shingle. Foundation is built of the local Connecticut Valley sandstone. Brick is reported to be the once noted narrow type from the neighboring town of Windsor.

The structure is endangered.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE (Include Personages, Dates, Events, Etc.)

One of the few 18th century structures remaining in the city of Hartford, this building is reported to date from 1799 and to be a unique example of a town house of the period. Originally it stood at the sidewalk line, before being moved back in the early part of this century to its present position at the rear of a narrow lot. Less than 30 feet across the facade, it was planned to occupy a restricted city frontage, and the absence of original windows on the sides at the first two floors indicates closely abutting structures on neighboring lots.

The first owner, Amos Bull, resided in the building and by 1791 was advertising in the local newspaper his business in dry goods and a wide assortment of such items as window glass, glue, whalebone, and metals, largely imported from Europe. He offered the property for sale in 1820, but before parting with it he opened a "reading academy" that imparted also arithmetic, geography, and other useful and necessary subjects. By 1887 the property housed a business dealing in furnaces, ranges, and plumbing, which occupied it more than thirty years, to be followed by various interests including an automobile dealer and finally a restaurant. It has been vacant for several years.
