DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Perry Street Historic District encompasses just over 12 blocks near the heart of downtown Montgomery. An early residential area, the district contains excellent examples of Greek Revival, Italianate, Dutch Colonial, Gothic Revival and Victorian architecture. Much of the character of the area remains despite a growing number of small modern commercial buildings.

The Teague House and the Lomax Home, both of which are listed on the Historic American Buildings Survey are two of the city's finest antebellum The Teague House is an outstanding example of a two-story boxmansions. type Southern home. A full length veranda with marble flooring has six beautifully proportioned Ionic columns. The double central door has a semi-circular fanlight and a pediment supported by two pilasters. Directly above this door is a door leading onto a small balcony with iron railing. The exterior of the house is of solid brick construction on a brick foundation, and the interior walls are plaster over wooden lathes.

The Lomax Home, is a two-story mansion of highly refined Greek Revival architecture, closely resembling the houses of Maryland and Virginia. Endinterior chimneys on either side of the house are linked to each other by a low paraphet extending above the end gable of the roof. A two-story portico of unusual refinement has four massive round Doric columns supporting a pediment the width of the porch. The house has brick foundations, exterior brick walls, pine floors, interior walls of plaster over wooden lathes, and a metal roof with standing seams. The rear of the house which is a later addition, is copied in detail after the main body of the house.

Located at the intersection of High and Perry along with the Teague House is the Cody Home, a transitional Federal-Greek Revival one-story home with a front door frame, fanlight and sidelights in the Adamesque style. A small front porch with columns supporting a pediment was once a stoop enclosed by a trellis. The foundation of the house is of hand-hewn logs held together with square-head nails. The interior has been drastically remodeled and all of the original woodeowk has been removed. Originally the house had six rooms, but in 1902 it was enlarged to twelve.

Across from the Cody Home is the Hannon-Washburn Home, a one-and-a-halfstory white frame Dutch Colonial house which has a front porch with six square wooden columns and a gabled roof with three dormer windows across the front.

Other antebe Alvalstructures in the district are the Falconer House, a T-shaped Greek Revival reised cottage with a Victorian portico; the Foster-Stevenson Home a square white frame two-story building; the Greil Mansion, a two-story brigk structure built in the Italianate Mediterranean Villa style with later Elessic Revival features and an interior which is almost entire Victorian the William Knox Home, now partially enclosed by an apartment building; and two/churches. fatur co

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Perry Street Historic District contains a large number of antebellum structures of architectural merit, several of which are among the oldest surviving in the city. Located close to the center of downtown Montgomery, the district is threatened by the expansion of the business district into the area. A number of the homes have been successfully adapted for business use and two, the Teague House and the Lomax House are among the outstanding examples of adaptive use preservation in the state. Among the more significant homes in the district are the Teague House, the Lomax House, the Cody House, the Washburn House, the Falconer House, the Greil House, the Foster-Stevenson House and two antebellum churches.

The Teague House, one of the two structures in the district listed on the Historic American Buildings Survey, was built in 1848 by Berry Owens, a prosperous livery stable operator who sold it four years later to James Ware. In 1865, when Gen. James Wilson occupied the city, the house was selected as one of the Division Headquarters for the Union forces. The proclamation declaring Montgomery to be under martial law was read from the veranda. Ware sold the house in 1884 to a Col. Graham who in turn sold it to William Martin Teague, one-time mayor of Montgomery. The Teague family owned and occupied the house from 1889 until 1955. In 1955 the house was acquired by the Alabama State Chamber of Commerce and, under the direction of John Meriwether Ward, founder and first executive vice-president of the Chamber, was adapted for use as the official headquarters of the organization.

Located at the same intersection as the Teague House are two of the city's oldest homes, the Cody and Washburn homes. The Cody Home, believed to be Montgomery's oldest surviving downtown residence, was built about 1830 as a town house for a planter named Parker. The house remained in the family until 1899 when it was sold to Michael Cody, a prominent businessman, who founded the Union Bank and Trust Co., one of the state's feeding financial institutions. Cody was the author of an Alabama faw feedlating state banks and was largely responsible for the enactment of the Taw. After his death his widow lived in the house until her death in 1971. The Cody House area was recently proclaimed a historic district by the City of Montgomery to temporarily prevent its demolition.

7. Description--Perry Street Historic District

The First Presbyterian, of Gothic Revival architecture, is a rectangular brick structure with a flat roof. The top of the outside walls and the top of the tower, which rises from the center of the front elevation, are surmounted by battlements. St. Peter's Catholic Church is a stuccoed structure in the Spanish Mission style.

The most notable of the Victorian structures are a grouping of four white two-story frame homes at the intersection of Perry and Scott, and a large red brick two-story Queen Anne house.

8. Significance--Perry Street Historic District

Across the street and facing the Cody Home is the Washburn Home, built in 1836 by Beyton Stubbs as a wedding gift for his daughter, Mary Ann, wife of Elliot Cromwell Hannon. The house is presently owned and occupied by Mrs. W. T. Washburn.

These three houses, the Teague, Cody, and Washburn, were recently proclaimed historic districts by the city of Montgomery.

The Lomax Home, the other structure listed on the Historic American Buildings Survey, was built in 1847-8 for James T. Gilmer, who soon sold it to Rueben C. Shorter, Jr., a member of a politically prominent Alabama family. After Shorter died, his widow married Tennent Lomax, a Colonel in the Confederate Army, who was killed leading his regiment at the Battle of Seven Pines in 1862. She continued to live in the House until her death in 1907. In 1932 the house was purchased by the First National Dank-Preferred Life Insurance Company for use as their offices. The Lomax House is perhaps the first major abiding example of adaptive use Feservetton In Alabama. It is open to the public by appointment.

Other antebellum homes in the district include the Greil House, built in 1854, and occupied for the first two years of the Civil War by Governor John Gill Shorter; the Falconer Home, built in 1845; the Foster-Stevenson Home, 1850, residence of Priscilla Tyler, granddaughter of President John Tyler; and the Martin Barnes Home, 1830; and the William Knox Home, c. 1850's. Two of the homes, the Greil Home and the Falconer Home, have been restored by local groups.

The Greil Home which was restored by the Junior League of Montgomery, houses offices for several organizations, including the Alabama Historical Commission. The Falconer House, restored by the Y. W. C. A., has been adapted for an arts and crafts center and a visitors' welcome center for the Montgomery Chamber of Commerce.

The district also includes two antebellum churches: St. Peter's Catholic Church, an 1850 structure, and the First Presbyterian Church, the oldest in Montgomery. Built in the mid-1840's, the First Presbyterian Church was

7. Description--Perry Street Historic District

The Carnegie Library of Montgomery is a two story structure with a full basement designed in the style of Beaux Arts Classicism. The large symetrical building is rectangular in shape and is constructed of cut limestone and glazed cream-colored brick. The foundation, columns and ornamental carvings are all of limestone. The interior finishes are plaster, wood and marble.

The facade features a three bayed recessed plane framed by a forward plane. The recessed plane is terminated at either end by engaged Ionic columns, while pairs of similar columns separate the bays. Front and rear elevations are similar as are the side elevations which differ from the former in that they are composed of only two bays.

A projecting cornice with dentils encircles the building and is surmounted by a parapet. The low mansard roof is constructed of slate with a copper top. Small rounded dormers are louvered for ventilation.

8. Significance--Perry Street Historic District

The Carnegie Library building in Montgomery was constructed through a gift of $50,000.00 from Andrew Carnegie to the Montgomery Public Library provided the library would raise $5,000.00 and purchase a suitable site. The rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, The Rev. Edgar Gardner Murphy, was responsible for the contact with Carnegie and thus brought the first Carnegie Library building to Alabama.

The corner stone was laid in 1902. The firm of York and Sawyer of New York were the architects with Frank Lockwood of Montgomery as consulting architect. The building was completed in January 1904 and was formally opened to the public as a free library on May 2, 1904. The building served as the public library until 1960 when a new building was built. The old Carnegie building was bought by the Water Works and Sanitary Board and subsequently sold to the County of Montgomery. It is currently used for storing voting machines and as a polling place for precinct 4.
