Description

The Arthur W. Woodson House is a single story, structural brick wall Craftsman residence. The gable roof of the main house intersects with the perpendicular gable of the carport to form an irregular plan. A single, exterior brick chimney is placed against the side wall at the rear of the carport. The roof material is composition shingle, the walls are brick, and the continuous foundation is constructed from stone.

The northern or front elevation is composed of the symmetrical, gable end of the house, and in front of which a low, hipped roof porch extends to the east, a parallel, gable roof entrance porch projects near the edge of the western wall, and a perpendicular, gable roof carport extends toward the west. The front of the house features two entries, one directly behind the entrance porch and one to the east, and both have multi-pane wood doors. The wall is fenestrated with an assortment of eight-over-one wood sash windows and pairs of eight-pane casement windows. The porches are low, decorated with exposed rafters, and supported by pairs of squat wood columns with slanted sides and capitals set upon pairs of connected brick piers. The porch pediment is decorated with thin exposed beams in the cornice and clearly displays the broad sills which rest upon the columns and support the porch roof. The porch roofs display various cornice lines.

The western elevation is fenestrated with one pair of casement windows to the north of the asymmetrically-stepped exterior brick chimney and an assortment of casement and wood sash windows to the south. The eastern elevation is similar, with the exception that a gable roof bay projects from the wall near the southern end of the building.

The southern elevation is seven bays in length, with four small windows to the east, two larger windows to the west, and an entry separating the two types.

The Arthur W. Woodson House has suffered virtually no alterations and is in excellent condition.

Significance

Criterion C, local significance

The Arthur W. Woodson House (Part E, Historic Context #4) is the best example in this neighborhood of Searcy of a single story, structural brick wall Craftsman style bungalow. Though the plan of the house itself is actually rather balanced and symmetrical, it is the porches and carport which not only unbalance the plan but which transform the principal elevation of the house into a jumble of varying cornice lines, roof shapes, and unsettling intersections. The ultimately picturesque impression with which the viewer is left is the result of the deft handling of these forms and their placement relative to one another.

As such, the Arthur W. Woodson House, in addition to its obvious merits as a Craftsman design, stands as a particularly good example of the first phase of the evolution of Craftsman house design in White County, when the aesthetic was still relatively new and the resulting designs drew more directly from the design ethos which stressed rambling, functional plans, picturesque elevations of various indigenous materials, and low, spreading eaves which emphasized the design's site and inevitable relationship with the earth.
