Vann House, a furnished historic house museum, administered by the Georgia Historical Commission, was dedicated and opened to the public in July, 1958. When the Commission acquired the property in 1952, the house was rapidly deteriorating but had not been significantly changed architecturally from the way it appeared about 1805. The restoration architect was Dr. Henry Chandlee Forman of Easton, Maryland.

The plantation residence first of James Vann (1768-1809), a rich Cherokee half-breed, and then of his son, Joseph, the house was begun about 1803. James Vann moved into the house March224, 1805. Involved in its building were Moravian missionary craftsmen from nearby Spring Place, Georgia, and other carpenters one of whom was from North Carolina. Its architectural style is best described as Federal, but the continuing tradition of the American Georgian style is apparent.

m Exterior: Two single outside brick chimneys rising at the gable ends of a saddleback roof, frame two-story high solid brick walls, of bricks made on the place and laid in a mixture of both Flemish Z and English bonds. \ Front and rear facades each have a classic S cornice with modillions and a row of dentils, two-story white-washed plaster pilasters, and two fanlighted doorways one above 고 the other framed by large painted wood paneling and opening off C wide hallways onto covered porches. These porches had disappear-0 ed. Dr. Forman conjectured that they were divisions of a Federal style temple-front portico rising two stories with a pediment. The entrance facade, which faced the old Federal Road, is perfect Ο ly symmetrical. The rear façade has irregularly spaced windows z and a dining room doorway leading to the outside. All windows ഗ are nine-over-nine, capped by a whitewashed lintel.

Interior: On each of the two main floors are two rooms, 30 by 20 feet, with a wide hallway between. (The attic story contains two long coffin shaped rooms.) Inside, to the left of the main entrance, of scan elaborately carved and wainscoted stairway, an early example of cantilevered construction. This intricate carpentry and other fine woodwork throughout the house, derives its beauty from expert joinery, fine carving and workmanship, good proportion, and striking color combinations. Outside and inside, a special feature is a small carved rose medallion representing the variety of rose known as Cherokee.

An imposing chimney piece reaches the high ceiling in the drawing room to the right of the main first floor entrance. An especially fine example of wood craftsmanship and design in the Federal style, there are also strong late-Georgian overtones in the arched and columned overmantel surmounted by a formal entablature. Its original painted decoration of blue, red, green, and vellow uncovered during restoration has been matched.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE (Include Personages, Dates, Events, Etc.)

March 24, 1805, the Moravian Missionaries James Vann helped establish near his plantation at Spring Place, wrote in their diary, "Vann moved into his newly built house today." Located on the Federal Road, Vann House commanded an elevation amidst a complex of dependencies. The showplace of the Cherokee Nation, it is significant as a mansion house of architectural and historical distinction deep in Indian country.

James Vann (1768-1809) whose mother was Cherokee and his father a Scot, made his major contribution to his mother's people, as well as to Georgia history, by sponsoring the Moravian mission and making it part of the complex of buildings in and around Spring Place. A hard-driving, Hard-drinking business man. Vann encouraged the missionary effort so that young Cherokees might begin their education in the mission school. Future Cherokee leaders Elias Boudinot and John Ridge were educated by the Moravians, as was James' own son, Joseph. Two entries made in the Spring Place Moravian Diaries are especially important. The first dated January 17, 1804, reads, "Brothers Byhan and Martin Schneider again went to help Vann in building his new home." And the second, dated August 13, 1804, "Today the chiefs assembled at Vann's new house close by our place. They were lodged at Vann's,"

Joseph Vann inherited Vann House and much of his father's other property in 1814 after much litigation. An even better businessman than his father, he soon became known as "Rich Joe Vann" by the Indians and whites alike. In May,1819 Vann received President Monroe, Secretary of War John C. Calhoun and other dignataries as they made their way along the Federal Road. The Mission diary records it is this way: "Very late in the evening ...the President of the United States and his party...arrived at Joseph Vann's."

In 1834 William N. Bishop leading a troop of Georgia guardsmen turned Joseph Vann and his family out of Vann House during the Cherokee Removal. Later the Federal Government paid Vann $19,605.00 for his property in Georgia; the inventory of that property is significant: "one fine brick house, 800 acres of cultivated land, 42 cabins, six barnes, five smokehouse, a grist mill, blacksmith shop, eight corn cribs, a shop and foundry, a trading post, a peach kiln, a still, 1.133 peach trees, 147 apple trees, /etc./"
