DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Banzai Cliff is located at the extreme northern tip of Saipan Island on the edge of the Banadero platform. The cliff consists of a deep drop of approximately one hundred twenty (120) to one hundred fifty (150) feet to the ocean below. The cliff face is concave; it is bordered by two points of land jutting out into the ocean--Puntan Sabaneta on the west and Puntan Lagua Katan on the east.

The cliff face has remained basically unchanged, excepting a certain amount of natural erosion caused by the constant action of the waves below. The top of the cliff has been developed for tourism purposes. A gravel-coated parking area has been constructed. Two peace memorials have been erected through the cooperative efforts of the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands Government and various Japanese government interests. One memorial is a small Buddhist shrine and the other is a larger monument representing a mother and child kneeling in prayer at the edge of the cliff. A gravel and concrete walkway leading to an overlook point on the edge of the cliff is also present. A guardrail has been constructed to protect this overlook.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Banzai Cliff is one of two sites where, during the World War Two American invasion of Saipan, hundreds of Japanese civilian and military personel chose to die by throwing themselves over the edge of the cliff rather than to face surrender to the American forces. The mass suicides occurred during the last week of the American invasion, when all hope for the Japanese defense of the island had disappeared.

The exact number of deaths which occurred at Banzai Cliff is unknown. In spite of the American military's attempts to convince the Japanese to surrender, the number of those who chose to jump--men, women and children--is very large. Accounts of survivors of Banzai Cliff have been found. Some who survived the drop to the ocean were rescued by American ships waiting below. Most of those who jumped, however, did not survive. Many of the bodies were never recovered from the rocks and waves at the base of the cliff.
