Narrative Description

(Describe the historic and current physical appearance and condition of the property. Describe contributing and noncontributing resources if applicable. Begin with a summary paragraph that briefly describes the general characteristics of the property, such as its location, type, style, method of construction, setting, size, and significant features. Indicate whether the property has historic integrity.)

Summary Paragraph

The Hamilton Cross Farmhouse is located in southwestern Stillwater. At the time of its construction, the farmhouse was in a rural area, where today, it is surrounded by mid twentieth century minimal traditional and ranch style houses. The house remains on a large city lot, surrounded by trees and approached from Gray Street rather than 9th Street. Constructed in the Colonial Revival style, the Hamilton Cross Farmhouse is the only Colonial Revival house in this area of Stillwater and maintains excellent historic integrity.

Narrative Description

Set against a backdrop of mid twentieth century housing, the Hamilton Cross Farmhouse is a stark contrast to the surrounding residential buildings. While the surrounding residential buildings are minimal in design, the Colonial Revival design of the Hamilton Cross Farmhouse features traditional elements associated with the style: steeply pitched roof, a continuous dormer and symmetry.

The basement of the house is constructed of brick. While a depth could not be determined on the outer, supporting walls, the interior walls are two wythe thick. Two pane hopper windows are located throughout the basement walls; however, on the exterior of the house, they are covered with concrete slabs. The walls are clad with wood clapboards on the first floor and wood shingles on the dormers and second floor. The gambrel roof is clad with asphalt shingles.

The façade, north elevation, has a centrally located door that is covered by a front facing gable porch roof. Two slender columns support the porch roof. Located on either side of the entry are two one-over-one double hung wood windows. Located in the steeply pitched gambrel roof, on the second floor, is a continuous shed roof dormer. Located in the center of the dormer are three smaller six-over-six double hung wood windows. Located on either side of the three windows are two larger six-over-six double hung wood windows. Two small brick chimneys are located along the ridge.

The east elevation has two one-over-one double hung wood windows on the first floor. Between the first and second floors is a shed roof creating a large soffit. Located in the gambrel end, on the second floor are three six-over-six double hung wood windows. Located in the clipped gambrel peak are two louvered vents for the attic space.

The south elevation has a central entry door. Located east of the central door is a fifteen-pane door. West of the central entry door are two one-over-one double hung wood windows. Located in the steeply pitched gambrel roof, on the second floor, is a continuous shed roof dormer. Located in the center of the dormer are three smaller six-over-six double hung wood windows. Located on either side of the three windows are two larger six-over-six double hung wood windows.

An exterior chimney was added in the center of the west elevation at an unknown date. Located on either side of the chimney on the first floor is a one-over-one double hung wood window. Between the chimney and the southern window is a small, square board and batten door. Located on the second floor, on either side of the chimney, is a six-over-six double hung wood window. Located in the clipped gambrel peak are two small louvered vents for the attic space.

Interior: Important interior features include the parquet floor on the first floor, the formal area on the west side of the first floor, elaborate built-in bookshelves on the second floor and built-in linen closets on the second floor.

Garage

A small flat roof breezeway connects the rear, south elevation of the house, with the ca. 1945 two bay, non-contributing, garage. Two panel garage doors are located on the east elevation. A one-over-one double hung window and a panel pedestrian door is located on the north elevation. The south elevation has two one-over-one double hung windows. Due to neglect, the garage is in a state of ruins.

Landscaping

Dr. Frank Baker Cross was the head of horticulture at Oklahoma A.& M. (Oklahoma State University) when he lived in the Hamilton Cross Farmhouse. Historic drawings of the landscaping at the house were located within the house. Remnants of the English gardens on the west elevation are still evident; the paths are still visible. The rear of the property was planted with spirea and barberry in a U-shaped design with the middle area being open. The island created by the driveway had a formal design with trees and barberry. Due to the lack of maintenance, many of the designed landscapes are overgrown but still extant.

Statement of Significance Summary Paragraph (Provide a summary paragraph that includes level of significance, applicable criteria, justification for the period of significance, and any applicable criteria considerations.)

The Hamilton Cross Farmhouse is eligible for the National Register under Criterion C in the area of Architecture as an excellent example of Colonial Revival, embodying the distinctive characteristics of that style. Identifying features of Colonial Revival that are seen on the house include an accentuated front door, symmetrical façade and double hung windows. While Colonial Revival style houses were a dominant style for domestic buildings throughout the country in the early part of the 1900's, the Hamilton Cross Farmhouse is an exceptional example in Stillwater that has maintained its architectural integrity.

Narrative Statement of Significance (Provide at least one paragraph for each area of significance.)

The Hamilton Cross Farmhouse was constructed c. 1904 for Hays and Margaret Hamilton. Eventually, their daughter Fearn and her husband Frank Baker Cross moved into the house while Hays and Margaret lived elsewhere. A member of the Hamilton family had owned the house until 2013. The house has changed very little since the house was built. The defining historical elements have not been altered by the addition of rooms or otherwise. With the exception of the installation of a garage and landscaping, the house looks as it did when it was constructed c. 1904. The interior of the house has retained its original, traditional floor plan.

The identifying characteristics of the Colonial Revival style can be identified on this house. The most significant characteristic is the accentuated front door with a pediment supported by columns which create an entry porch. Another important defining characteristic is the use of symmetry. The primary façade demonstrates balanced symmetry in the window placement, door placement and dormer placement.

The Hamilton Cross Farmhouse can be identified as a sub-type of the colonial Revival style as it has a gambrel roof. Approximately 10% of all Colonial Revival houses are known as "Dutch Colonial." This sub-type is popular from 1895 to 1915. Identifying characteristic of this sub-type include a steeply pitched gambrel containing almost a full second story of floor space and a continuous shed dormer with several windows.

Houses in the surrounding neighborhood date from the 1940's to the 1970's. Historic homes in this area are considerably different in style and design with many suffering from significant alterations. The historic street patterns and landscaping remain extant however, the Hamilton Cross Farmhouse is the largest, oldest and most elaborately landscaped property in the area.

The Hamilton Cross Farmhouse represents traditional American architecture in its use of the Colonial Revival vocabulary. As it demonstrates the distinctive characteristics associated with colonial Revival and specifically represents a rare sub-type, it is eligible for listing in the National Register of Historic Places under Criteria C for its architectural merit. The Hamilton Cross Farmhouse stands in great contrast to other homes, as it is the earliest extant house in the neighborhood.
