ARCHITECTURE

STATEMENT

The original stone portion (now nave) of St. Anthony's excellently portrays early efforts to build monumental structures in pioneer Davenport. Built of local materials that are only partially finished, the church expresses its structure quite plainly in the roughly-quoined corners and relieving arches over the side portals. Its Greek Revival style was then still popular in Davenport, and with its simplicity of form and detail easily constructed in a period when both highly-skilled masons and finely-worked materials were largely unavailable.

The transepts and chancel (c. 1886) of St. Anthony's are brick, now covered (as are the adjacent school and rectory) with permastone. The cumulative effect is rather odd, and gives the structures a bland appearance that does them little justice. Part of the school is believed to be the first (brick) St. Anthony's built in 1838 by Harvey Leonard.

SIGNIFICANCE

This building is associated with pioneer religious efforts and early settlement patterns in Davenport. It is the earliest and best preserved church, typifying the efforts of other churches which established parishes in the 1840's and 50's.

HISTORY

DESCRIPTION

St. Anthony's Catholic Church was established as a mission church in the late 1830's. Father J.A. Pelamourges, noted pioneer missionary priest was the first pastor. The parish served approximately 30 Catholics, mainly Irish, by 1839. St. Anthony's chief benefactor was Antoine LeClaire.

By 1847, the church listed 450 members in a city with 2,000 population. A new stone church (the present structure) was constructed in 1850-53. Pelamourges continued 1868. He was succeeded by several priests for brief tenures until 1882 when D. J. Flannery became priest serving until 1916.

For many years St. Anthony's was the largest meeting place in the city, playing host to Iowa Supreme Court sessions and numerous civic events.

ARCHITECTURE

This building is significant as part of the series of buildings constructed on Church Square beginning in 1839. Originally, St. Anthony's Church, this building became a school in 1853 when a new, larger church was constructed (see MA-407(a).) Builder of the school was Harvey Leonard, local contractor and brick manufacturer. Although altered by its permastone facing, the building's continued use for church purposes and integrity of siting, make it a contributing element to the St. Anthony's Complex.
