DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Bankhead home is a two-story frame structure influenced by the Neo-Classical Revival style of the late 19th century. Basically rectangular in plan, the structure is built on a stone foundation and has a hipped roof. Originally, there were five chimneys and nine fireplaces. Two chimneys remain. One, an end-interior chimney, is located on the south side of the house. The other is located in the master bedroom toward the rear of the house.

A veranda crosses the front of the house and continues partially around the two sides of the house. Eighteen classical columns support this veranda which has a projecting cornice ornamented below with a row of dentils. On the north side, this veranda has been enclosed to form a sun parlor, and on the south side a porte cochere projects from it. The veranda itself projects in front of the central doorway to form a two-story portico.

Four double hung windows with plain moldings and one large lite per sash are located on either side of the central doorways on the first and second floors of the facade. All other windows are similar with the exception of three windows located on the south side of the building. One ground floor window has two side lites, and a window above it on the second floor has two side lites and a transom. Additionally the south wall of the master bedroom projects to form a bay window.

The main entrance is a large single door with a leaded glass panel, and two engaged columns separating the door from the two side lites. A three lite transom above is separated from the door and side lites by a horizontal molding with dentils. A central upper door, which gives access to the second portico, is composed of stained glass.

Interior woodwork features heavy cornices with dentil molding. A plain round medallion is located in the dining room ceiling. Originally, the ground floor had central front and rear halls. The front hall was combined with the room on the left to make the now existing large living room. The back hall was closed off and part of it made into a large closet. A stair hall, which is perpendicular to the central hall, separates this living room from the master bedroom behind it.

To the right of the central hallways are three rooms. There is a front parlor which opened onto the front hall (now part of the living room) with double sliding doors and opens onto the dining room behind it with similar doors. A small breakfast room behind the dining room opens both onto the rear central hall, the dining room, and a rear kitchen. This kitchen has a latticed well porch projecting from it.

13 years until his death.

Due to his efforts, the government made the first survey of Muscle Shoals for hydroelectric power. During his term of office and through his influence, the Warrior River became the world's longest canalized waterway and Mobile became a deep seaport. The accomplishment for which he is most widely remembered, however, is his initiation of federal aid to highways. Because of this legislation, he was known as the "Father of Good Roads." The Bankhead Highway, an east-west national thoroughfare, was named in his honor.

His son, Senator John Hollis Bankhead, Jr., also made his home here from 1922 until his death in 1946. Born in 1872, he began his political career in the Alabama legislature in 1903. He served in the United States Senate from 1930 until his death and was chiefly known for his legislation to improve rural life.

His brother, William Brockman Bankhead, also spent time here intermittently. He, too, was a lawyer, member of the State of Alabama legislature, and a member of the United States Congress from 1917 until his death in 1940. During his tenure in the Federal Congress, he was Speaker of the House of Representatives from 1936 to 1940.

Upon his death, his nephew, Walter Will Bankhead, a lawyer in Jasper, Alabama, was appointed to fill his unexpired term. This attorney also lived in this home.

8. Significance (Continued)

Tallulah Bankhead, internationally known actress and personality, was the daughter of William Brockman Bankhead and spent her childhood here, as her mother died shortly after her birth and her grandmother reared here. She is reputed to have done her first acting in the attic of this landmark.

Another Bankhead of note, who spent some time in this house, is the late Mrs. Marie Bankhead Owen, a daughter of the senior senator, who together with her husband, Thomas M. Owen, was largely responsible for the development of the Alabama Department of Archives and History, the first state supported archives department in the nation. After her appointment as Director, she served in that capacity until her death.
